TORONTO, May 11.—Many prominent Toronto business men attended the funeral of the late Thos. Kinnear, the wholesale grocer, which was held yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 20 Spadina road, to Mount Pleasant cemetery. Rev. Dr. W. G. Wallace of Bloor street Presbyterian church, who conducted the service, spoke of the great loss which had been sustained by the death of the late Mr. Kinnear. Rev. G. C. Pidgeon assisted in the service.

Messrs. Thos. Eakin, Harvey S. Kinnear, Thos. H. Kinnear, Norman Sommerville, Roy Kinnear and Bruce Kinnear acted as pallbearers. Among those present were: Dr. William Patterson, Dr. Turnbull, Mr. F. W. Humphrey, Mr. John Rennie, Mr. John A. Paterson, K.C., Mr. W. Campbell, Mr. Cosbie, Mr. Hugh Bain, Mr. Wm. Kinnear, Mr. Sanderson Pearcy, Mr. J. Moerschfelder, Mr. P. Porter, Mr. G. S. Pearcy, Mr. Fielding and Mr. W. E. Somerville. Twenty-four employees of the late Mr. Kinnear also attended. A large number of flowers and wreaths were sent by the late Mr. Kinnear's many relatives and friends.

The late Mr. Kinnear was born in Ireland, seventy years ago, and came to this country with his parents when only seventeen years of age. Till 1871 he was employed by Richard Dunbar, a grocer on the old Market square, when he entered into partnership with Mr. J. W. Lang in the wholesale grocery business. In 1880 he severed his connection with Mr. Lang and founded the firm of T. Kinnear & Company of Toronto and Peterborough, of which he remained proprietor.

MISS PECK CONFERS ON MURDER CASE

THROWS LIGHT ON CHECK SENT TO HER BY DR. ARTHUR W. WAITE, ACCUSED DENTIST.

New York, May 11.—Miss Katherine A. Peck, the aunt of Mrs. Arthur Warren Waite, whose husband is in the Tombs prison charged with murdering John E. Peck, his father-in-law, last March, was summoned to the District Attorney's office yesterday. For more than an hour Miss Peck was in conference with George N. Brothers, who will prosecute Waite in his trial, beginning on May 22nd; John T. Dooling, who has handled the investigation of the Peck murder, and Francis X. Mancusco, who investigated Waite's past.

One of the matters under discussion was a check for $3200 drawn to Miss Peck's order by Dr. Waite, while he was in Bellevue Hospital recovering from narcotics taken when he realised that the poisoning of Mr. Peck had been fixed upon him. Dr. Waite confessed his crime and was reported to have exhausted all his bank balances by their transfer to Miss Peck, the total falling short of a large sum she had entrusted to him on his false representations that he had found profitable opportunity for its investment. He had speculated in stocks with it.

The check for $3200 bore Miss Peck's indorsement under her order to pay the $3200 to Walter Drew, her lawyer. Miss Peck was questioned concerning this but the information she gave had to do only with her personal affairs.

BROADWAY HOTEL HERMIT WAS RICH

NEW YORK, May 10. — Broadway's white lights may be dazzling, but they are not revealing. Investigation to-day of the death at Wallicks hotel, corner 43rd and Broadway, and in the very centre of the lobster palace district, of Miss Caroline E. Marshall, an aged spinster, revealed the fact that for five years she had virtually lived the life of a hermit, had not stepped a foot from her rooms and had hidden away $250,000 in mass of rubbish there.

Miss Marshall died at the hotel, March 2, none of the hotel employees knew her; she never had visitors and was never seen outside her rooms. Waiters and maids merely knew her as an eccentric woman who never spoke to them. When she died her relatives employed searchers for a will. They located it in a safety deposit box.

POISON IN BODIES, WOMAN HEAD OF "HOME" IS SEIZED

HARTFORD, Conn., May 12. —After the bodies of two aged men had been exhumed in the Cheshire cemetery and it was found they had died of violent poisoning instead of natural causes, as the death certificates stated, Mrs. Mary E. Archer Gilligan, proprietor of the Archer Home for Elderly People, at Windsor, was arrested to-night and was placed in all here. The charge against her is murder.

State police have had the Archer Home under surveillance for a year. It was stated to-night, and the deaths of forty-eight elderly persons there are under investigation. State Policeman Robt F. Hurley said there was ample proof that many of these aged men and women had met death by poison.

The specific charge against Mrs. Gilligan is that she caused the death of Franklin R. Andrews, a resident of the Archer House, on May 30, 1914, by administering poison to him. According to the certificate of death, signed by Dr. H. F. King, who is the attending physicain at the Archer House, and also Medical Examiner for the town of Windsor, Andrews died of gastric ulcers.

Bodies Dug Up at Night.

Much secrecy was observed in disinterring the bodies of Andrews and of another man who died at the Archer House. The exhumation was made in the middle of the night, so the operation would not be observed, and was done on an order, signed by Coroner Eli Mix, of New Haven.

After the bodies were taken the graves were filled in and left, externally, in the manner in which they were found, so as to avoid suspicion. An autopsy and chemical examination was made by Dr. Arthur J. Wolf, of this city, by direction of State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn. Even Dr. Wolf did not know the identities of the bodies on which he worked.

When Dr. Wolf reported that large quantities of poison had been found in each body, State Policeman Hurley and State's Attorney Alcorn acted. They obtained a warrant for Mrs. Gilligan, and with other officers Hurley went to the Archer House to-night and arrested her.

Mrs. Gilligan appeared to be greatly surprised by her arrest. She said it was an outrage and that suspicion never had pointed to anything in her establishment as wrong. She was arraigned before a local magistrate at once, waived examination and was committed to the County Jail there, where she will remain until the Grand Jury considers her case.

Complaints in Forty Cases.

The identity of the second body exhumed was not made public. Mr. Alcorn and the State police said this information was being withheld in the interests of justice, but that it and other cases yet to develop would all come out at the trial, if not before the Grand Jury.

In expressing his belief that fully twenty persons have been poisoned to death in the Archer House in the last five years State Policeman Hurley said there were twice that many complaints by relatives of aged persons who had died there, and that he had found evidence in at least twenty cases.

At the proceedings before the local magistrate at Windsor a motive for killing the aged persons was not explained. The Archer House had advertised extensively that it provided a desirable and economical home for aged persons. Many have been sent to that establishment by their relatives, who have paid their board. Of these many went there from distant cities, and the problem is said to have confronted the management when relatives ceased to pay board bills and there were no funds available for sending the boarders back to their relatives.

This county has had some trouble with the institution, according to Hurley and the State's Attorney. The county refused to accept in its almshouse persons leaving the Archer House.

For several years complaints have reached the State authorities concerning deaths at the Archer House, asking that investigations be made. In several of these cases it said the persons had been in normal health just before their deaths had been reported.

Hurley and the State's Attorney have been working on the case a year or more, and it is believed to-night they have obtained important witnesses who were attached to the place. Mr. Alcorn said he had a "pile of affidavits," and that he did not order the arrest until he was absolutely certain of the course he was taking, and that he would be able to prove in court that "one or more persons" had been poisoned to death deliberately while living at the Archer House.

Bride-to-Be Found In Windsor Cemetery

Windsor, Ont., May 12.—Instead of wearing bridal robes Wednesday night, at which time she was to have been married to Thomas Simmons of Detroit, Miss Eleanor Hill, 25 years old, is lying at the Hotel Dieu, suffering from the effects of poison which she insists was given her by a man on Monday afternoon.

Miss Hill was found on Monday night in Windsor Grove cemetery, lying on a grave. According to the woman who found her her breath smelled strongly of carbolic acid. After being given first aid she was taken to the residence of Mrs. Bertha Westlake, where she boarded.

The girl's condition became so serious on Tuesday that Dr. Fuller ordered her to the hospital.

According to Mrs. Westlake, Miss Hill was to have been called for by Simmons on Monday afternoon, when the wedding gowns were to have been purchased. The prospective groom failed to show up and Miss Hill went to look for him.

A half hour later she was seen at the Windsor Ferry Dock in company with an unknown man. Mrs. Westlake heard no more of her until she was taken home by Dr. Fuller.

"She is a very intelligent girl," said Mrs. Westlake, "and I don't believe she would have attempted to end her life had she not been jilted or something of that sort."

While the girl told the authorities at the Hotel Dieu that she had been compelled to take poison by a man the police believe that it was self-administered.

Nothing has as yet been learned of Simmons, the bride-groom-to-be.

New York Stock Market

Special to The Examiner:

New York, May 12.—Slight increases in munitions stocks and irregular changes in the other leaders were noted at the opening of the stock market to-day. Crucible sold at 80 1-4, up 7-8 of a point; Baldwin 87, up 3-8 of a point, and Westinghouse 60, up 1-4 of a point. Mexican petroleum sold off 1-2 a point at 109 1-2. Anaconda was 84, off 1-4 of a point.

General motors sold at 251 this afternoon, up 24 from last sale made Wednesday. Westinghouse advanced to 61 1-2 on reports of big rifle order. Munition stocks generally were up one or two points and rubber stocks shared the gain. Canadian Pacific advanced six points to 176.

Keep the water troughs full. Cattle craving for green feed have an almost unquenchable thirst.

COMPLAINTS THAT GARBAGE COLLECTORS SKIP SOME CANS

Property Committee Discovers Certain Adjacent Streets Were Overlooked When the Collection Area Was Defined.

Alderman Evans registered a complaint at the Property Committee last night that the Garbage Collectors are making incomplete collections in East City. Four houses on the south end of Eagleburn Avenue have been overlooked several times he reported.

Ald. Edgar varied the complaint by stating that he knew of houses that had been missed; and with no other receptacles the householder had no other resource but to fill up the utensils. Then when the collector did call he said the cans were over-weight.

Alderman Saunders reported a Dorchester street "kick."

Alderman Evans—They are not doing the work half as well as the former contractor.

Alderman Saunders stated that several residents on the east side of George street north of Perry, complained, that the collector had called once or twice and then had ceased, giving as a reason that the district was not included in the collection area.

A similar oversight had been made on Wolfe and Patterson street and the communicating streets west of Park, according to Alderman Edgar.

Mayor Duffus drew attention to the fact that citizens should not put the garbage cans at the street line, unless the situation demands it. They should be placed not farther back from the house line than three feet.

Further discussion followed in a similar strain, but no expressed action was taken.

BIG FLYING BOATS FOR ENGLAND'S USE

The present war is preeminently one of science and machinery. Never before has there been a remote approach to the great variety and wonderful advances in a great many types of machines, in the same length of time as during the past 21 months, the present duration of this war.

Probably the greatest strides in development have come in air navigation. Complete new types have been originated and perfected, and a great number of varieties of old types. We now have large numbers of air dreadnoughts, heavily armoured, and armed with three or four small cannon, and carrying a crew of ten to twelve men; smaller fighting planes of high speed, and whole flocks of very speedy scout planes.

About the latest addition to the British air fleet is a group of 20 fifteen-ton triplanes or flying yachts. They are being built and will soon be completed. The spread of the planes is 133 feet and they are propelled by four 12-cylinder 250 horse power motors. An auxiliary motor will be provided to drive a screw propeller so that the craft may be navigated at slow speeds on the surface of the water. It is reported that Rodman Wanamaker is preparing again for a trans-Atlantic flight. A new aeroplane building for him is said to be far larger than anything hitherto attempted and to have motors capable of developing 1800 horse power.

It is beginning to look as though the possibilities of air navigation were practically unlimited.

BOXING AND WRESTLING BOUTS AT ARMOURIES

The athletic programme under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association in the Armouries last night provided an interesting evening if it did not add greatly to the funds of the 93rd battalion to whom the proceeds were given Soldiers were admitted free and the men in khaki formed the greatest portion of the audience.

There were eight boxing bouts and four wrestling bouts on the programme, all the contestants being members of the battalion. Some promising men were uncovered who will develop into good mit artists if they are looked for. Of course some of the men in the ring were unmistakably green and a couple of the bouts provided more amusement than science but they added variety to the programme at least.

The wrestling bouts were on the whole more interesting than the boxing. Pt. Roy Gadoua who won two bouts and the featherweight championship of the battalion did some very clever work although he had a hard battle to floor. Pte. Bradley. Pte. Guest and Pte. Dineen had a splendid bout. Dineen getting the first fall and Guest the next two. The pair were very evenly matched and put up a good argument.

One of the best boxing bouts of the evening was that between Lieuts Ketchum and V. Eastwood. The two officers, although obviously not in the best of condition gave a clever exhibition.

Ptes Rootes of B Company signallers and Pte. West of B Company made a good showing in their bout which was one of the most evenly contested of the evening.

Pte. Cole's exhibition of ventuloquism was very cleverly done and pleased the crowd. The 93rd is evidently not short on entertainers when they have men like Pte. Cole around.

During the evening the band of the 93rd supplied an enjoyable programme including among their selections a new medley "Tipperaryland" that was well received.

Capt C. E. Widdifield was announcer and referee and made a good job of both positions.

The programme follows:

Boxing.

Pte. Lillie vs. Pte. Simpson.

Wrestling.

Pte. J. Guerin won from Pte. Dymond.

Boxing.

Pte. Smith vs. Pte. Emery.

Wrestling

Pte. Guest won from Pte. Dineen

Boxing.

Lieut. Ketchum vs. Lieut. Eastwood.

Boxing

Pte. Markwick vs. Pte. Thomas. Ventriloquism---Pte. Cole.

Boxing.

Pte. Rootes vs. Pte. West. Pte. Hill vs. Pte. Hardman.

Wrestling.

Pte. Gadoua won from Pte. Bradley.

Boxing

Pte. ill vs. Pte. ardman.

Boxing

Sergt. Martin vs. Lance Corp Healey.

Boxing.

Pte. Williams vs. Pte. Hammond.

Wrestling.

Pte. Gadoua won from Pte. Kitchen.

Save all the vegetable refuse and dry it every day by placing it near the cooking stove. Add to this bits of greasy paper or oily rags or match ends. Keep all perfectly dry and burn on washing days in the copper. This will heat a large copperful of water, and costs nothing.

Willing Now To Give Up Any Demand On France or Belgium

LONDON, May 11.—The Rotterdam correspondent of the Telegraph in announcing that the German Government has already issued new orders to the commanders of German submarines, in accordance with the concessions set forth in the reply to the American note, appends a long statement concerning Germany's attitude toward peace, which he says is based on information received from Berlin. He declares that Germany is now willing to give up absolutely any claim on France and Belgium, including even demands for military and economic guarantees of which Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg has spoken in the past.

"In the east", the correspondent adds, "Germany's ambitions remain the same, with the possible exception of autonomy for Poland. Germany will insist on retaining Courland."

Taken With Salt.

The London newspapers refuse to accept seriously the peace talk which has followed publication of the German note to Washington. Outlining the position of the allies in regard to peace proposals the Telegraph says: "The Entente powers are out to win the war and overthrow Prussian militarism. No inconclusive peace will suit their demands, and the very suggestion of a draw is abhorrent. They will continue to use their superiority in sea power to promote their common purpose."

The News says: "We should nourish extravagant hopes if we thought that the end which all desire is in sight. There have been peace feelers before and the present movement will doubtless be found to be equally efficacious. But the time will come sooner than many expect when Germany's approaches will be more definite and frankly on the basis of a suitor for peace, not of that a belligerent offering terms. Until that time comes the allies will not entangle themselves in futile negotiations."

The Mail expresses the belief that the Germans are not sincere in talking of peace. It says: "No one in this country should be deceived by the German peace talk which is thoroughly insincere. It has three obvious objects—to keep the Germans under the delusion that they are fighting a truly defensive war, to win the sympathy of neutrals and enlist their efforts against the British blockade, and, above all, to put the British people to sleep. It is a trick regularly practiced by British diplomacy, and one which was tried repeatedly in the Franco-German war of 1870, when statements were issued that Germany was prepared to grant 'most moderate and reasonable terms' to her adversaries. Many Frenchmen were deceived by this in 1870 and the vigor of French resistance suffered in consequence."

Mr. Milton Frost umpired the game satisfactorily.

In the junior series of the Public School baseball league on May 11th on the Central School grounds the Central School team defeated the Queen Mary School team by the score of 13 to 1.

Batteries---Central, McGill and Beagpine.

Queen Mary---Barraclough and Hamilton.

Mr. B. Mulhern made a satisfactory umpire.

J. E. R. Munro, Captain.
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Notice—

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to allow seat checks for lecture at George street Methodist church to-night to be accepted in lieu of late passes.

A new bass drum for the use of the 93rd Bugle Band, purchased in Toronto by Sergt.-Major Miller, arrived this morning, much to the satisfaction of the band, who have been greatly handicapped in this respect. Some kind-hearted citizen could make a big hit with the Bugle Band now by presenting them with a tiger skin for the use of the big drummer.

Major R. D. Ponton, of the headquarters Staff, is here to-day on an official visit to the 93rd Battalion.

One of the features of the Victoria Day celebration that will be held here over the holiday, as is quite probable, will be an exhibition of physical drill with arms by a large squad. The men were picked this morning, and had a long practice under the direction of Sergt.-Major Miller.

The non-coms of the 93rd Battalion had a taste of the new physical drill this morning under the supervision of Capt. Marling, and the direction of Quartermaster-Sergt. Williams, Sergts. Brown, Loomb, and Miller, and Corp. Carpenter, who have just returned from the course at Montreal.

The Kingston Standard says—The 146th Battalion are arranging to conduct a regular series of nightly entertainments in camp, and for this purpose will install in connection with their canteen, a moving picture outfit, out in the open, sports, stunts, acts of all kinds will be given free every night for the benefit not only of the men of the 146th Battalion, but for the benefit of every soldier who cares to stroll into the lines of the 146th and spend the evening. It is felt that an entertainment of this character given free every night will be a strong inducement to keep the soldier in camp.

The following is from the Kingston Standard—The call to arms sent to return to England, is causing for service, is creating quite a stir in the city, and yesterday several men applied to the armouries for information. It is the opinion here, that married men eligible for service under the conscription act, may join the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and this would be accepted by the British government as equivalent to returning and reporting for service in England. There are a great many married Englishmen in Kingston who are eligible.

WINSTED HEN ON THE JOB.

WINSTED, Conn., May 12.—Fonrose Bushnell, residing in the New Hartford road, drove to Winsted this morning and stopped at the Manchester feed mill, in Main street, with an order for chicken feed.

While the order was being put up a cackling hen attracted the attention of those in the mill, including Mr. Bushnell, and, loking out, they saw a hen and newly laid egg on the seat of the Bushnell waggon.

Unknown to Mr. Bushnell, the hen sitting beneath the waggon seat had ridden to town with him, and when Dobbin stopped in front of a large sign advertising a certain kind of chicken fed the hen hopped upon the waggon seat and, facing the sign, "Will make hens lay," deposited its testimonial as to the value of the feed advertised.

Deposed Rector In Federal Toils

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 12. — Rev. Dr. George Chalmers Richmond, deposed rector of St. John's Protestant church, was arrested, charged with using the United States mails in an attempt to blackmail Howard Neumer, an employee of the Pennsylvania Hospital and an important witness during the ecclesiastical trial of the clergyman.

The arrest was made in the Church of St. Luke's and the Epiphany during the afternoon session of the annual diocesan convention. Dr. Richmond was taken from the church so quietly by Postal Inspector Smith that few knew of the occurrence.

Arraigned later before United States Commissioner Long, Dr. Richmond was held under $500 bail for court, he being allowed until next Wednesday to obtain a bail bond and in the meantime being leased on his own recognizance.

Two witnesses were heard— Postal Inspector Smith and Neumer. Two letters were read by Inspector Smith. One to Neumer was addressed to "My Dear Howard," and in it the writer wanted to know whether Neimer was aware of his intention to lecture upon the subject, "A Remarkable Escape from Sing Sing, or How I Won a Place in Decent Society for a Criminal."

The letter asked Neumer whether he had any suggestions to make, and reminded him that the writer had not received an Easer offering from the former as yet. Finally, the letter read, "Your pew rent has been due for the last nine months."

Biddy—"If th'house was on fire, Pat, wid you run out?" Patrick—Sure an' Oi wud not. Oi'd put the foire out first an' thin Oi'd go out afther it."

"How is your wife, John?" John—(the waiter)—"Well, I don't know miss. When the sun doesn't shine she's miserable, and when it does she says it fades the carpet."

DISAPPEARS FROM HOME

NEW YORK, May 12.—Agency detectives and the police, it was learned yesterday, for four days have been seeking some trace of Mrs. John R. Eldred, thirty-eight years old, of Cohasset, Mass., the wife of a wealthy paper manufacturer, who disappeared from her apartment in the McAlpin Hotel on Thursday night while her husband was temporarily absent.

Mrs. Eldred has been in ill health for a long time and was in New York after travels to improve her health which had carried her husband over a large part of this country and South and Central America. Because her constant references to killing herself made during the last few days and previous attempts at self-destruction which she had made it is feared that she has committed suicide.

Mrs. Eldred is five feet four and a half inches in height and when she left the hotel on Thursday night she wore an old street suit of gray mixed cloth and a black hat. She evidently carried no baggage of any kind and had but little money. In the apartment from which she disappeared were huge boxes of newly purchased, gayly colored clothes which had not even been tried on. For days she had been about the city purchasing new gowns and dresses, and her husband happy at her interest, encouraged her.

"For two years Mrs. Eldred has been ill and has been subject to fits of depression," her husband said yesterday. "Coming to New York on board a steamship she spoke of ending her life and asked if the water were very cold. I am afraid she has made away with herself."

The missing woman is the daughter of Gustavus A. Damon, well known as a hotel proprietor in Boston. Her husband has a paper mill at Ashton, N. H.

The hope of somehow getting something which we have not earned, whether in power or privilege of enjoyment, is the chief source of human misery.

Mr. Sharpe, Methodist minister, performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Two nieces of the bride attended the young couple. After the ceremony a wedding repast was partaken. Mr. an Mrs. Hall left for a trip in the West, after which they will take up their residence in Peterborough.

MADILL—TULLY.

On Wednesday, May 10, 1916, the home of Mr. Robert G. Tully was the scene of a pretty house wedding when his younger sister, Elizabeth Mossy, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Madill of Cavan by the Rev. Mr. Craw of Springville, in the presence of about forty guests.

Promptly at six o'clock the bride entered the parlour to the strains of Wagner's wedding march, played by her cousin, Miss Ruble Archer. The bride was handsomely dressed in cream silk voile and carried a bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. Miss Olga Sanderson, niece of the bride, made a charming little flower girl. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold brooch with diamond setting and to the organist a pearl crescent.

After congratulations the bride and groom led the way to the dining room, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served.

A number of beautiful and costly presents were received by the bride as a testimony of the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends. The Lakevale choir, of which she was a valued member, also presented her with a handsome gift.

RELIEVE SOLDIERS' PAIN.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Small bottles of anaesthetic now are being placed in the kits sent to the soldiers of the British army in France by the Vacation War Relief Association. A spraying apparatus is attached to the bottle so that the wounded soldier may apply the liquid to his wound quickly. This produces local anaesthesia, which continues for three hours and releases the soldier from pain while awaiting the arrival of an ambulance. Use of this particular anaesthetic is said to have been authorized by the British Army Medical Service and by Russian hospitals.

How Fat Folks May Become Thin

By Elisabeth Thomas.

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orthine capsules. Take one after each meal and before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orthine in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any large druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1505, Montreal, Can.

"Hold On!" Only Word To the French Troops Guarding Verdun

Every Point Ordered Retained at All Costs When German Attacks Began---Paris Denies Rumour of Withdrawal Order.

PARIS, May 13.—That the French high command has contemplated at any time since the battle of Verdun began on February 22 a withdrawal of the army from the eastern bank of the Meuse is officially denied in a statement issued Thursday night. Reports, current both in the United States and England, attributed to the military leaders a desire to retire from the right bank of the river under the first German blows and take up fresh positions on the west. The falsity of these reports is best indicated by the laconic orders given to the commanders of the units on the firing line:—"Hold on!"

The communication dealing with the Verdun situation reads:

"At no moment during the battle of Verdun has the chief command given orders for a retreat of the French troops on the right bank of the Meuse. Quite to the contrary, on the morning of the twenty-third of February General Langle de Cary ordered the troops on the right bank that every point, even if overwhelmed; that every small position, even if completely surrounded, should be held at all costs, and that the only word would be 'hold on!'

"On the evening of the twenty-fourth the commander-in-chief issued instructions to 'Hold the front between the Meuse and the Woevre.'

The new battle for Verdun, opened by the Germans last Saturday, apparently has ended with the net loss to the French of one trench, northwest of Hill No. 304. The bombardment continued with great intensity Thursday, but the only infantry attack, one launched early in the morning, was soon stopped.

Military writers, however, would not be surprised if a fresh effort would be made against the positions between Hill No. 304 and the Dead man as soon as the German forces are rested and reorganized—probably by Saturday or Sunday.

FOOD SCARCE IN HAMBURG.

Extracts from Letter Show Meat and Butter are 75 Cents a Pound.

The New York Times has received the following extracts from a letter sent to a New York woman by a relative in Germany:

"Hamburg, March 24.

"I am glad uncle is not living, for he would not be able to stand the many privations we have to endure during these hard and, as people call it, 'wonderful times.' From afar the reality appears very different from what it really is. Till now I have had our time-honoured weekly family gathering, but each time I think it may be the last. Bread, butter, and milk are only to be had by card 'for one person only,' and if the household be small, there is nothing left over to offer. It would be very sad if sociability had to cease entirely, for one can't ask friends if there is nothing to put before them; that would not do, the distances here are too great for that.

So far I have had fish, potatoes, and a sweet to offer, but even those will cease, but let us hope not for long. After all every one gets enough to keep him alive, and so we must be content.

"When will the end ever be? When all sides are exhausted

"That would simply be dreadful, that would only mean a truce, no real inward peace, for after a few years of recuperation England would find new ways and means to cut us off from everything. This is called civilization! * * * * You write of your 'poor President,' I say, 'our poor Kaiser.' * * * Ordinary meat costs 3 marks (75 cents) a pound, roasts and poultry much more. The commonest vegetables are dear and very scarce. Butter also is scarce, and is 3 marks a pound.

"For those who can't afford such prices popular kitchens have been opened, where good, wholesome food can be had for 20 pfennig (4 cents) a portion. The deficit is paid by the City of Hamburg. The whole is wonderfully organized, women and young girls working there with a will, so that peace and happiness shall reign within the city. There are entertainments in all the hospitals, the best artists eager to give their best."

When the clothesline needs cleaning wrap it around the washboard and scrub it with a brush in soapsuds.

A square of wire netting bound and mounted on four little feet is a good thing for the cooling of cakes, etc.

White silk or satin slightly soiled may be cleaned by dusting with powdered magnesia and then brushing out.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

ELIMINATING THE HYPHEN.

Catholic School Board of Chicago Takes Important Step.

CHICAGO, May 13.—A fight to eliminate the hyphen in American school life was inaugurated in Chicago yesterday by the Catholic Parochial School Board. At a meeting of the board, it was voted to establish the English unified system in 240 parochial schools next season, involving a complete change of text books and methods of teaching. This will affect 2,500 teachers and 115,000 pupils in the Chicago diocese alone. The purpose as announced by the board is to thoroughly Americanize the Catholic school system of Chicago—to take the hyphen out of the schools and to eliminate, "Irish-Americans, German-Americans, Polish-Americans," and all other double-barrelled nationalities from American school life.

Enemy Took Five Hundred Yards of British Trenches

TWO COBBLERS SWINDLERS' PREY

NEW YORK, May 13.—In the eleven years Antonio Gratchek a Polish cobbler has been in this country he was able to save $1,500 practising strict economy and denying luxuries to himself and his family of four children, Joseph Zarnak, who works for him in the shop at No. 167 West End avenue had saved $500.

Two men, described by Gratchek as "oily Mexicans"—called "greasers" down on the border—appeared at the shop yesterday to have shoes repaired and became friendly with Gratchek. They showed him a black tin box which they said contained $1,000 worth of gold nuggets and $2,000 worth of diamonds, rubies and emeralds.

"I was a lieutenant in Villa's army," said one of the fellows. "We raided a cathedral and Villa stripped it of all its wealth. He distributed the loot among his officers and these fell to me. Later Villa suspected me of treachery and I had to flee to this territory. Now that Villa is overthrown I wish to go back to my family, but have no money. I would sell these cheap."

Gratchek quickly drew his savings of $1,500 from the bank and Zarnak drew his $500 and they gave the $2,000 to the stranger.

Friends called at the cobbler's shop last night and Gratchek and Zarnak exhibited the fortune they had made. Suspicion was apparent with some and the party went to the West Sixty-eight street station, where lieutenant Hamel decided that the brass nuggets and stage gems in the box might be worth fifty to seventy-five cents, but no more.

NEW KIND OF THIEF.

Charles A. Lauff, of San Rafael, Cal., who says he is "100 years young," and looks it, professes to have added another laurel to his wreath by discovering a brand new kind of burglar. The newest species is William Lattery, accused by Lauff of stealing ten doors from a house in Bolinas-by-the-Sea.

When a vaquero back in the 40s, Lauff used to chase cattle thieves over the sand dunes where San Francisco now stands. During the Mexican war he saw scores of different kinds of "bad men" while in the service of the United States army. But none of these, Lauff says, can compare with the newest type whom, he declares, stole all of the doors off one of the Lauff homes. Grand larceny is the specific charge launched against Lattery.

There is more or less work

Every furnace demands some attention. But there is no reason why the twice-a-day job should be anything but pleasant. And to save a little time and a little bother every day means a lot in the course of the winter.

The Sunshine is a furnace any one can look after without spoiling either clothes or temper

The door is large enough for the biggest coal shovel. The grates are strong and turn easily. The ash-pan catches all the ashes without the need of shovelling. The water-pan is located so that it can be filled quickly.

Ash-dust cannot escape when the Sunshine is being shaken down. None of that light dust floats about the house or the basement.

The damper and the check draft can be regulated from upstairs—and perfectly too. The close-fitting doors and dampers hold the fire for hours without waste.

Facts Worth Knowing

Take a district containing a hundred houses and a hundred families living in them. You will find that over ninety per cent. of the buildings are insured against fire loss. Of the heads of the families occupying them, according to the known average, not one in five will be carrying life insurance. Look forward fifty years: How many of the houses will have been destroyed in that period? Not over one of the hundred. Take the heads of the families in the same fifty years: How many of them will be alive at the end of that period? Not over ten out of the hundred.

We insure against fire as a matter of course, and rightly so. In the fact of a fifty-year record, how vastly more important that the two kinds of insurance be reversed, or better, that the life insurance be brought up in its totality to the volume of the fire insurance. The one house burns, insurance is paid, and the property rebuilt. The man who is in the great class of the uninsured dies, and the loss to himself and those dependent upon him is a total one. You cannot compare a fire loss with a death loss, and yetwe go on and on thinking of the more meagre loss of fires and protecting against them, while overlooking and forgetting the greater loss that death brings, and neglect protecting against it.

It is a matter of congratulation that fire losses are universally recognised and protected against. How much greater a matter of congratulation it will be when the same unlimited recognition is given to loss through death, and life insurance protection becomes as universal as fire protection.

Your earning capacity is your family's Capital. Have you considered how much your earning ability represents?

A Policy in the Sun Life of Canada is not only sound assurance protection, but an increasingly safe and profitable investment.

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

CHAPTER XII.

OUT OF FREEKIRK HEAD.

"Oh, I wouldn't think of such a thing for a minute!"

Captain Bijonah Turner waved his hand with an air of finality and favoured his daughter with a glare meant to be pregnant with parental authority.

"But, father, listen to reason!" cried Nellie; "there is mother to take care of the three small children, and here am I with nothing whatever to do. Be sensible and let me go along. I certainly ought to be able to help in some way."

"Suppose the cook should fall sick or be hurt, then I would come in handy, wouldn't I? But all this is not the real point. Things are different with us than they have ever been before; we have no home, and mother and the children have to board with Ma Sprague. If I stayed here I should be a burden, and I couldn't stand that."

Bijonah scratched his head and looked at the girl helplessly. He had yet to score his first victory over her in an argument.

"Have you asked your mother?" he queried at last, seeking his time-worn refuge.

"Yes," said she, brightening at the immimence of victory, "and she says she thinks it will be just the thing."

"All right," said Bijonah weakly; "come along then. But mind, you'll find things different. Your mother is boss of any land she puts her foot on, but once I get the Rosan past Swallowtail my word goes."

"All right, daddy dear," laughed the girl; "I know you'll be just the finest captain I ever sailed with." She kissed him impulsively and ran upstairs to tell her mother the good news.

The departure of the fleet from Grande Mignon was a sad day in the history of the island.

The sun had hardly shown red and dripping from the sea when all the inhabitants were astir. Men from as far south as Seal Cove and Great Harbour clattered up the King's Road in rickety vehicles, accompanied by their families, and their dunnage.

In Freekirk Head alone less than ten men would be left ashore. Of these, one was Bill Boughton, the storekeeper, who was to arrange for the disposal of the catch; but the others were either incapacitated, sick or old. The five aged fishermen, who subsisted on the charity of the town, formed a delegation on one stringpiece to wave the fleet farewell.

Altogether there were fifteen boats, ten schooners, and five sloops, carrying in all more than a hundred and twenty-five men. The whole resource of the island had been expended to provide tubs of bait and barrels of salt enough for all these, let alone the provisions.

The men either shipped on shares or, if they were fearful of chance, at a fixed monthly wage "and all found," to be paid after the proceeds of the voyage were realized.

There was not a cent of Grande Mignon credit left in the world, and there was no child too small to realize that on the outcome of this venture hung the fate and future of the island.

It was a brilliant day, with a glorious blue sky overhead and a bracing breeze out of the east. Just beyond Long Island a low stratum of miasmic gray was the only shred of the usual fog to be seen on the whole horizon. In the little roadstead the vessels, black-hulled or white, rode eagerly and gracefully at their moorings, the bright sun bringing out the red, yellow, green, blue, and brown of the dories nested amidships.

At seven o'clock the steamer Grande Mignon blew a great blast of her whistle, cast off her lines, and cleared for St. Andrew's and St. Stephens. Tooting a long, last salute, she rolled out into Fundy and out of sight around the point.

For these men breakfast was long past, but there were the myriad last details that could not be left undone; and it was fully eight o'clock before the last dory was swung aboard and the last barrel stowed.

Then there came the clicking of many windlasses and the strain of many ropes, and to the women and girls who lined the shore these noises were as the beatings of the executioner's hand upon the cell-door of a condemned man.

For the first time they seemed to realize what was about to happen. The young girls and the brides wept, but those with children at their skirts looked stonily to the vessel that bore their loved ones; for they were hardened in the fear of death and bereavement, and had become fatalists.

The old women shook their heads, and if tears rolled down their faces they were the tears of dotage, and were shed perhaps for the swift and fleeting beauty of brides under the strain of their first long separation.

Of these last one stood apart, a shawl over her gray hair and her hands folded as though obedient to a will greater than her own. In all the colour and pageant of departure May Schofield wondered where her son might be, the son whom she felt had run away from his just responsibilities. Two nights ago he had gone, and since that time the little cottage had seemed worse than deserted.

Somehow the story of the solicitor and his visit went swiftly around the village, and since that time Code's mother had been the shrinking object of a host of polite but evidently pointed inquiries.

To most of these there was really no adequate reply, and the good woman had grown more hurt and more shrinking with every hour of the day. Now, with little orphan Josie at her side, she came out to see the departure of the fleet.

Suddenly there came the squeaking of blocks and the rattle and scrape of rings as foresails were rushed up at peak and throat. Headsails raced into position, and, with the anchors cat-headed; the vessels, with their captains at the wheels or tillers, swung into the wind and began to crawl ahead.

Behind them, as they forged toward the passage, lay the gray similar of stony beach half a mile long. Beyond it were the white, contented-looking cottages built along the road, and back of all rose the vivid green mountains, covered with pine, tamarack, and silver birch, above whose tops at the line of the summit there appeared three terrific, puffy thunderheads.

As they moved toward Flag Point the gaily coloured crowds moved with them past the post-office, the stores, the burned wharfs, and the fish stands.

Captain Bijonah Tanner, by right of seniority, led the way in the Rosan as commodore of the fleet. He stood to his tiller like a graven image, looking neither to right nor left, but gripping his pipe with all the strength of his remaining teeth.

He hoped that his triumph would not be lost upon his wife. Nor was it, for it was a month afterward before the neighbours ceased to hear how her Bige was the best captain that ever sailed out of Freekirk Head.

At Swallowtail Bijonah rounded the point, gave one majestic wave of his hat in farewell, and put the Rosan over on the starboard tack, for the course was south-east, and followed practically the wake of Code Schofield.

One after another the schooners and sloops, closely bunched, came about as smartly as their crews could bring them—and the smartest of them all was Nat Burns's Nettie B.

Nellie Tanner, jealous of her father's prestige, could not but admire the splendid discipline and tactics that whipped the Nettie about on the tack and sent her flying ahead of the Rosan like a great sea-bird. Once Swallowtail was passed the voyage had begun, and the lead belonged to any one who could take it.

At last the knifelike edge of Long Island shut them out completely, and seemed at the same instant to cut the last bonds and ties that had stretched from one to another as long as vision lasted. The men felt as released from a spell. One idea rushed into their minds suddenly and became an obsession.

Fish!

CHAPTER XIII.

NAT BURNS SHOWS HIS HAND.

Off Cape Sable the fleet was overhauled by a half-dozen schooners bound the same way, which displayed American flags at their main trucks as they came up.

"Gloucestermen!" said Nat Burns at the wheel of the Nettie B. "Set balloon-jib and stays'l and we'll give 'em a try-out."

The men jumped to the orders, and the Nettie gathered headway as the American schooners came up. But the Gloucester craft crept up, passed, and with an ironical dip of their little flags raced on to the Banks.

Cape Sable was not yet out of sight when a top-most on the Rosan broke off short in a sudden squall. Bijonah Tanner immediately laid her to and set all hands to work stepping his spare spar, as he would not think of returning to a shipyard. Nat Burns, when he noticed the accident, laid to in turn and announced his intention of standing by the Rosan until she was ready to go on.

As these were among the fastest vessels in the fleet, the others proceeded on their way, and Nat seized the opportunity of the repairs to pay his fiancee a visit and remain to supper on the Rosan.

He found Nellie radiant and more beautiful than he had ever seen her. Protected from the cool breeze by a frieze overcoat, she stood bareheaded by the forerigging, her cheeks red, her brown eyes bright like stars, and her soft brown hair blowing about her face in alluring wisps.

"Don't Nat!" she cried. "Before all the men, too! Please behave yourself!"

This last a little nervously as she saw the gleam in his eyes. Suddenly (for her) all the day seemed to have lost its exhilaration. She was always glad to see Nat, but his insistent use of his finance rights under all circumstances grated on the natural delicacy that was hers.

His ardor dampened by this rebuke, the gleam in Nat's eye became one of ugliness at his humiliation before the crew of the Rosan. He scowled furiously and stood by her side without saying a word. It was in this unfortunate moment that Nellie seised on the general topic of the day.

"Guess you'll have to get off and push the Nettie B before you can beat those Gloucestermen, Nat," she said, teasing him.

"Say, I've heard about all I want to hear about that!" he snarled, suddenly losing control of himself as they walked back to the little cabin. The girl looked at him in hurt amazement. Never in all her life had a man spoken to her in such a tone. It was inconceivable that the man she was going to marry could address her so, if he even pretended to love her.

"Possibly you have," she returned, not without a touch of asperity; "but you know as well as I do that you will have to deal with a Gloucester-built schooner before you are through with this voyage.

In her efforts to placate him she had touched upon his sorest spot. His defeat by the American fishermen had been hard for his pride.

"I suppose you mean that crooked Schofield's boat?" he flashed back.

"What do you mean by that?"

They were below now in her father's little cabin, and she turned upon him with flashing eyes.

"Just what I said," he returned sullenly.

"You say things then that have no foundation in fact," she retorted vigorously. "You have no right to say a thing like that about Code Schofield."

"I haven't, eh?" he sneered, furious. "Since when have you been takin' his side against me? No facts, eh? I'll show him an' you an' everybody else whether there's any foundation in fact! What do you suppose the insurance company is after him for if he isn't a crook?"

A WORD OR TWO ON SUMMER ACCESSORIES

Colonial Pumps Once More Favorites—The Blue Bird Parasol a Charming Novelty

LACE AND EMBROIDERY POPULAR

New York May 11.

Hats, veils, shoes, parasols, dainty little collar and cuff sets, and all the numerous other accessories which go to complete the costume, are charmingly designed this season to fit in smartly with the new silhouette and the general lines of the costume.

Shoe manufacturers are loud in their praise of the short skirt vogue. In former years skirts have varied in width and trimming but until this season have always remained at a conservative length. With the mad-ish short skirt of the moment, smart trim shoes are absolutely necessary to the general effect of the costume. The high laced boot of tan, brown, black, or gray is popular with the tailored suit; for afternoons, with the light silk or the novelty cotton frock, the old time colonial pump, with its huge buckle of silver or gun metal, is once more a low-shoe favorite.

VEILS, PARASOLS AND COLLARS

At the beginning of the season, there were any number of novel effects in veilings but with the advance of the season the call for veilings for street and general use, aside from motoring, dwindles usually to the face veil of almost invisible mesh, intended merely to keep the hair in place. The trick of arranging the veil over the hair, under the hat, is practical and clever, especially with the larger hats. The hat may be readily removed and the veil remain, keeping the hair smoothly and neatly in place.

Parasols promise to play a more prominent part in this summer's wardrobe than for many a summer past; they are oddly shaped and vividly colored. One of the newest ideas is the blue bird parasol; these are embroidered, stencilled or appliqued, and spread their wings all around the outside edge of the white or softly-tinted parasol, or scatter here and there over the inside surface. It is an extremely dainty motion, completing the summer frock in a most fascinating manner. Ostrich feathers edging the parasol is another effective fancy.

Neckwear this season is as fascinating and offers as many possibilities for individuality as ever. Some smart little novelty ruches from Paris, now being shown in the shops, to complete a costume effectively, are narrow and finished with a buckle, or tie with narrow ribbons.

POPULARITY WITH LACE AND EMBROIDERY.

The extreme favor being shown the typical lingerie frock has brought lace and embroidery into wide use again this summer. Lace is being used for trimming dresses and blouses and often forms the greater portion of the garment. The sheer lace flouncings are particularly pretty for summer dance and evening dresses. Metal laces are effective on the more formal gowns for daytime and evening. A particularly pretty use of lace flouncing is illustrated in the little Spanish dance frock shown here: upper portion of skirt and bolero are of taffeta, bodice and flounce of a thread-like flouncing. An effective bit of contrast is introduced in the dark girdle and the narrow ribbons banding the short puff sleeves. Another, a simpler, even more youthful dress, is illustrated of voile and embroidery flouncing; it is charmingly suited to the young girl for summer wear.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Of all places on earth home is the most delicate and sensitive. Its chords move with a breath; its fires are kindled with a spark; its flowers are bruised with the least rudeness. Here our hearts wear no covering, no armor. Every arrow strikes them, every old wave blows full upon them. If we would have a true home, we must guard well our thoughts and actions.

* * *

Sometimes the hasty word has been spoken, the sharp, snappish word been carelessly uttered in the home circle. The true wife's heart so often bleeds at the bitter, thoughtless, but cutting word of a husband. When she is gone to heaven, and he "weeps o'er her bier" he will remember it.

* * *

There are none of us so poor but we can train a few roses on the humble wall and their scent and beauty will long be remembered and many a bog, instead of going to loaf upon the public highway will linger at home among the flowers. Moral degradation always begins at home.

* * *

There are many happy homes, thank God, in every community, and when they exist there goes out from them a blessed influence which can hardly be over estimated. "A real home with a mother in it," whose hospitable doors are ever open to those not so blessed, is a wonderful power for good.

* * *

Many a child goes astray, not because there is a want of prayer or virtue at home but simply because home lacks sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as flowers need the sunshine.

* * *

We know from sad experience that it is every inconvenient to be poor, but no man is poor who has a happy home and it does not require lace curtains or velvet carpets to make a home happy.

* * *

The virtues grow about the home—they cluster, bloom and shed their perfume around the fireside. Love, husband, wife, father, mother, child and home—without those words the world would be a barren wilderness, and men and women but brutish beasts.

* * *

Let us take time to get acquainted with our families. The wealth you are accumulating may be a doubtful blessing to the son who is a stranger to you. Your beautifully kept house, busy mother, can never be a home to the daughter whom you have no time to caress.

* * *

When hearts are broken and friends fall, this active stirring world of ours makes room for us all to go to work and forget our troubles. If it were not for something to do, and the chance to do it, what would become of the mother when her baby dies? Do you think she would ever recover from such an anguish if she found nothing to do but clasp the empty cradle and fondle the unused garments? Be taken up by doing them, Oh, broken hearted children of our common parent, sorrow. So shall the heart heal and the balm be yielded. Work will keep off pity's pension 'ist and maintain in your bosom the soul of a steadfast soldier rather than that of a whimperer and a craven. Thank the destiny that sends you many tasks for prompt fulfillment and many perplexing things for wise adjustment, otherwise you would never forget the wound that throbs with fresh pain whenever night comes and the duties of the day are hushed to rest.

* * *

A happy home does not result from a large income. A large amount of love, plenty of good sense and a very little money, will make a happy home circle.

* * *

Never think you can afford to be dowdy at home. Cleanliness, hair well dressed and a smile will make calico look like silk in the eyes of a father or brother.

* * *

Why is it that we so easily forget that the little things in life are what make it easy or hard? A few pleasant words, a warm hand clasp, a cordial letter, are simple things, but they are mighty in their influence on the lives of those about us, adding a ray of hope to many disconsolate hearts, giving a bit of courage to disappointed, weary ones and helping to make our own lives sweeter at the same time.

* * *

You will never have a friend if you must have one without a fault.

* * *

It is one of the paradoxes of life that the more a woman keeps her husband in hot water the colder he grows toward her.

* * *

Most good men have had good mothers.

The home and home require a head the same as any other business. No study is of greater importance to a girl after marriage she often wishes she knew more of cooking and less of Latin. Money and love combined does not form a safeguard where there is domestic incapacity. A woman who is capable of filling her home in every sense of the word is worthy of more true applause than if she possessed many accomplishments.

* * *

Do we take time during the hurry and bustle of the holiday season to review our work of the year and see wherein we have made mistakes, jotting them down in our memory so to be avoided in the future? That boy would never have made a perfect workman if he did not avoid mistakes of yesterday. We must never make the same mistake twice, and in order to guard against doing so we must look back and find the mistakes we have made.

* * *

Turn over the leaf. You may regret to place each a page on the record of past years, but to mourn over it will not change it. It is a page of your past life now and must count for or against. Just one thing left—forget the past and press on. A clean page is before you, ready for the record of another year. The great thing is to start it right—and the greater thing is to keep it right. Keep the end in view and as you start with a Happy New year it may be yours to be happy all the year.

* * *

Happy New Year. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. Seek peace and pursue it. Be true to every honest conviction, and live to make the world better for passing through it.

* *

The days, weeks and years slip away like water in a running stream. Time's great clock never loses a moment. Relentlessly, surely the moments pass, and our eager hands are not able to detain them. We cannot keep back the flying years but we can and should keep the blessings that they bring. Hold fast to the lessons that they have taught. Keep the memory of their joys. Watch every day of life with the garnered wealth of the days behind.

* * *

We can wish no better thing for all our readers than that they begin the new year animated by a firm resolve to turn all its experience into profit for themselves, mentally, morally, socially and materially, and then to faithfully carry out the resolution.

* * *

Daylight and pathos are inextricably mingled with the thought of New Year's Day. It is only conventional point of time; any other would do as well. Every day closes an old year and begins a new one, but for all we cannot help feeling that this day, which is agreed upon throughout Christendom for the beginning of a new year is somehow unique. The pathos comes from the review of the past, and from the sense that another notch has been cut for us on the stick of time.

* * *

The pessimist delights in derision of the good resolutions which mark the celebration of New Year in the minds of many people. Shame upon the man or woman who would dull the bright ambitions and desires for the better of any human being. But there is little time to give to habitual mourners and augures of evil. The new year will be what we make it, so far as our individual lives are concerned, and the man or woman who resolves to be happy in a healthful, unselfish way, is taking the first road toward happiness.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

THE ART OF KINDNESS.

As an elderly married couple were passing up a street, a lady on the opposite side stubbed her toe and fell down.

The old gentleman rushed across the street, raised his hat, and offered to assist her in any possible way.

His wife followed him across at a slow pace, and, witnessing his devotion to the stranger, she got mad, and shook her fist at him.

"It's all right; it's all right!" he whispered.

"Yes, I know it is," she hotly exclaimed. "Here an unknown woman stubs her toe, and you plough across the street to cat her up with kindness. The other day, when I fell downstairs, you stood at the bottom and laughed and chuckled and tickled your ribs, and wanted to know if I was imitating Charlie Chaplin."

Mrs. Able Says:

PEOPLE ask me why my tea tastes so good. First, I use freshly drawn water. When boiling briskly I pour it over the leaves, allowing the tea to steep, not boil, five minutes. Next, I pour the tea off the leaves into another pot. In that way you get the flavor of Red Rose Tea in all its fullness and richness. Try it.

"Thank you, I will take the Nerve Food with me."

"I don't want to miss a single dose, because it is doing me so much good. My nerves were so bad that I could not rest or sleep, and would get up in the morning feeling tired out.

"Besides that, I frequently had severe nervous headaches and got so cross and irritable that every little noise would set my nerves on edge. I did not seem to have any energy or strength, and the slightest exertion would use me up entirely.

"Then a friend told me of the benefit she obtained from using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I decided to give it a trial. It was not long till I found that I was sleeping better and enjoying my meals. There did not seem to be so much to worry me, and I began to find a new pleasure in life. It is wonderful the way the Nerve Food is building up my health and strength, and since I have been using it I have found out that many of my lady friends have had a similar experience."

This is the way women everywhere are talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Seldom has any treatment ever aroused so much favorable comment. While natural and gentle in action, this food cure is wonderfully potent in building up the run-down system. Ask your friends about it and put it to the test when in need of restorative treatment.

HARD WORKING WOMEN

Will Find New Strength Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

It is useless to tell a hard working woman to take life easily and not to worry. Every woman at the head of a home; every girl in office, shops and factories is subjected to more or less worry. These cannot be avoided. But it is the duty of every woman and every girl to save her strength as much as possible and to build up her system to meet unusual demands. Her future health depends upon it. To guard against a break down in health the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. To keep the blood in this condition nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite, bring the glow of health to pallid cheeks, and renewed energy to listless people. Women cannot always rest when they should but they can keep up their strength and keep away disease by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. A. Rhodes, Hamilton, Ont. says: "A few years ago on coming to Canada, working long hours, and close confinement began to tell on me. I was completely run down and finally could do no work. I was pale, suffered from headaches, did not rest well, and felt altogether very miserable. The doctor said that the trouble was anaemia, and after doctoring for some weeks without getting any relief, I decided to drop the doctor and take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Very soon I began to notice a change for the better and by the time that I had used half a dozen boxes of the pills I was again enjoying the best of health. I have never had any return of the sickness and never felt better in my life than I do now. I give my experience therefore that it may be used for the benefit of others."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

All the colors the rainbow displays are shown in the mass of materials from which to choose for our waists and dresses; but, withal, the summer is to be a season of white. This is the result of a scarcity of dyes and that same reason is the explanation of the riot of colors, for we had to dilute the dyes we had to make them hold out—hence the delicate and pastel shades, so popular. A separate waist, good enough to wear with a skirt of perhaps "Poiret twill," will be a necessity among the garments added to the summer wardrobe, and design No. 7,727 offers just the one to satisfy, because it blends the important fashion features with an unusual collar that has the larger portion overlapping the smaller, and each made effective with edging for a finish. The long sleeve is gathered above the wrist, under a cuff that is outlined with insertion and finished with edging, the same as the collar. The shoulder fronts of the blouse are gathered and the closing made at centre front, where a box-plait is simulated.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36-44 inches bust measure. To make a duplicate of the design will require 2¼ yards 36 inch material for size 36 bust, 2¼ yards of insertion and 2¾ yards edging.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Empress Eugenie Celebrates Ninetieth Birthday in Quiet Home In England Where She Is Caring for Wounded British Soldiers

On May 5 last, on the anniversary of the death of the first Emperor of the French on the island of St. Helena, in 1821, the widow of his nephew, Napoleon III., celebrated at her picturesque English home at Farnborough what is officially declared to be the ninetieth anniversary of her birth. She is one of three notable survivors of epochs that seem to the rapidly moving world of today to belong almost to the mediæval era—epochs that pertain to the domain of ancient rather than of modern history. They are, each of them, pathetic figures because so lonely. Not but what they are surrounded by the loving care and attention of affectionate relatives and devoted retainers, but lonely because they have seen all their contemporaries, all the people of their generation, pass away before them to the Great Beyond.

Empress Eugénie's two fellow survivors are Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, now in his eighty-sixth year and the extraordinary length of whose reign is rapidly approaching the seven decades spoken of by the Psalmist as the allotted life of man, while the other is Grand Duchess Augusta Caroline of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the only living granddaughter of King George III. of England and who, born as a Princess of the reigning house of Great Britain as far back as 1822, is now ninety-four.

Of the three Empress Eugénie is assuredly the one most to be envied. For whereas Emperor Francis Joseph is overwhelmed with sorrow by the misfortunes which have overtaken his dynasty and his people in connection with the terrible war now in progress, and Grand Duchess Augusta Caroline finds herself regarded at her German home in Neu-Strelitz as a Princess of the reigning house of England, with suspicion and even hatred by the people among whom she has spent all her life and upon whose affection and loyalty she believed herself able to rely, Eugénie lives in peace and quietness at her English country home at Farnborough, interesting herself in the nursing of the scores of wounded English officers who are convalescing beneath her roof, and in the enjoyment of a degree of universal regard and of deep veneration which must be particularly grateful to one who has been the object of such bitter criticism, of such intense animosity and of such fierce denunciation in the days when she graced the throne of France.

Real Age Is in Doubt.

If I have laid stress upon the fact that May 5, 1826, as given in the Almanach de Gotha and in most other standard works as the official date of her birth and that its anniversary has always been observed from the time of her marriage to Napoleon III. on that particular day of May, it is because serious doubts exist in the minds of many as to her real age. Indeed, there is a great deal of mystery with regard to her birth and to her origin. According to some, she is several years older than her alleged age—almost as old, in fact, as Grand Duchess Augusta Caroline of Mecklenburg-Strelitz—while according to others she came into the world not at Granada, in Spain, which is officially given as her birthplace, but in Italy, and has the blood of the historic royal house of Bourbon in her veins.

There is much in favor of the latter story, which is quite in keeping with the wonderful romance of her career—a romance surpassing anything that has ever emanated in the form of novels and plays from the brain of the most imaginative of playwrights and of writers of fiction. For although the Almanach de Gotha, as I have mentioned above, gives the birth of Eugénie as having taken place in May, 1826, and that of her elder sister, Paca, Duchess of Alba, as having occurred in January, 1825, yet, according to official Spanish records, the Count de Montijo, who is given as their father, is said to have died on October 20, 1823. The pages of the register of the parish of Arenjo that contained the statement of his death are said to have been mutilated and removed, but official records of the courts of law at Madrid contain frequent mention of the date of his death in connection with several lawsuits brought by his brothers against his widow, the late Countess of Montijo (née Kilpatrick), daughter of that William Kilpatrick, of Belfast, who was for so many years United States Consul at Malaga.

A Romance of Young Artist.

Those who on these grounds argue that Eugénie cannot possibly be the daughter of her alleged father, the Count de Montijo, a well known figure alike in Paris and in Madrid, call attention to the fact, pretty well established, that Queen Christine of Spain, daughter of Francis I. of Naples and of the Two Sicilies, had given birth to three children, two girls and a boy, before, in December, 1829, she became the fourth wife of King Ferdinand VII. of Spain. These children were not illegitimate, at any rate in the eyes of the Church. They were the offspring of an English artist of the name of Ward, to whom Princess Christine had been secretly married by a priest in Calabria. The union was said to have been abetted and connived at by the English governess to whom the education and care of Christine and of her sister, Louise, had been entirely confided and who happened to be the sister of the artist.

How Miss Ward ever came to be intrusted with the education of Christine and of her sister is a mystery. For she was so little qualified for the task that her royal charges were ignorant of the rudiments of grammar, of the most elementary notions of history, geography and arithmetic when they passed out of her hands in order to wed men of their own rank. In fact, Princess Christine barely knew how to write, her name and knew nothing of literature of any kind when she became Queen of Spain. But she was a magnificent equestrienne. Miss Ward had taught her charges how to ride in the most wonderful manner, and their prowess on horseback and the feats which, thanks to her, they were able to perform lend color to the story according to which she had originally been a "Haute Ecole" performer in a circus.

I have also heard that it was another brother of this Miss Ward who from being the English stud-groom of the reigning Duke of Lucca was raised by the latter to be his Prime Minister, with the title of Baron Ward. His daughter was forty years ago one of the leaders of the smart set in Paris, and on losing her first husband, a Marquis of ancient lineage and of scientific tastes, became the wife of a man much younger than herself, son of one of the greatest railroad magnates in France.

1.—Farnborough, Eugenie's home, where now she nurses wounded soldiers of the British army. 2.—Empress Eugenie. 3 and 4.—The late Emperor and Prince Imperial, husband and son of the lonely Eugenie.

Naturally Princess Christine's secret marriage to her English artist husband, though valid in the eyes of the Church, was of no account in the eyes of the law, since it had failed to receive the assertion and approval of her royal father and sovereign. It could not, therefore, be considered as interfering in any way with the matrimonial alliance that was arranged for her, regardless of her views or heart, with King Ferdinand of Spain for purely political purposes. The Countess de Montijo, one of the ladies of the court of Madrid, was sent, along with the mission of Spanish dignitaries, to Naples to escort the Princess to Madrid and was chosen for the particular purpose of imparting to King Ferdinand's bride information and instruction concerning the many peculiarities of Spanish court etiquette.

Mme. de Montijo, a thorough woman of the world, quickly won the affection and the entire confidence of the Princess, who ended by confiding to her the story of her secret marriage and of the existence of her three little children, the youngest being a baby boy only some eight months old. It is alleged that the Comtesse de Montijo undertook to become charge of the two little girls of Christine and to bring them up as her own daughters, making another disposition of the little boy, of whom more anon. Certain it is that, while not the slightest trace of resemblance existed between the Countess and her alleged daughters, Eugénie possesses many of the characteristics and of the strongly marked features of the Bourbons. In fact, there is far more of the Bourbon in the face of Empress Eugénie than in almost any member of the Bourbon family, either in Spain, Austria or France, with the possible exception of the Comtesse de Paris and of her youngest and favorite son, Prince Ferdinand of France, Duc de Montpensier.

Boy Inherits Fortune.

Queen Christine's boy is believed to have been the late Don Alessandro Soler, whose career was almost as romantic in its way as that of his alleged sister. He was found, as a nine or ten months old child, in the gateway of the palace of the Duke of San Fernando, at Madrid, ensconced in a hamper bearing the name and address of the Duke. Inasmuch as the latter was to be married a day or two later to one of the royal Princesses, a niece of [illegible] Ferdinand, he felt considerably disconcerted, well realizing the impression that would be created in the mind of his bride if the story ever reached her ears from other lips than his own. Fortunately for the baby, the Infanta was a kind hearted woman and chose to regard the little chap as a mascot destined to bring happiness to her married life. So she decided to adopt him. As her union proved childless, she and the Duke by degrees came to look upon the foundling as their own son, had him educated as such at Madrid and at Paris along with other young Spaniards of high degree and on dying left him their entire fortune.

Don Alessandro was not a Grandee and had therefore no recognized position at court. He was not even a Hidalgo—nothing, in point of law, but a foundling. Yet he was an honored and welcome guest in all the grandest houses of the Spanish aristocracy, formed part of the most ultra-exclusive coteries and was on familiar terms with the haughtiest descendants of the ancient nobility of Castile and of Aragon. Nobody knew his parentage with any degree of certainty. But it was generally believed that he was a brother of Empress Eugénie, who never failed to visit him when she came to Spain, and therefore a half brother of the late Queen Isabella. The fact remains that he was treated by the entire reigning house of Spain in the light of a non-royal relative, a status that was in a measure confirmed by the circumstance that when he died unmarried he was found to have bequeathed all his extensive property to King Alfonso. There were certain legal problems in connection with the will which necessitated recourse to the tribunals at Madrid, and it was in this way that the bequest of Don Alessandro to the present popular ruler of Spain became known.

Avoided by Queen Isabella.

A peculiar feature in connection with this story concerning the three children of the late Queen Christine by her English artist husband is the dislike which the ordinarily good natured Queen Isabella always manifested toward Empress Eugénie, to the latter's eldest sister, Paca, Duchess of Alba, and above all to their alleged mother, the old Comtesse de Montijo, who was ever an object of her particular animosity. The early girlhood of Eugénie and of her sister was spent in France and especially in England, attending school at the Sacré Coeur, in Paris, and at a once celebrated seminary for young women at Clifton, near Bristol. In their holidays they saw much of Prosper Merimée and of "Stendhal," who were habitués of Mme. de Montijo's salon and who when the girls returned to Madrid, in their teens, frequently visited them there.

Through the influence of Queen Christine, who was then predominant at the Spanish court, Mme. de Montijo was appointed as its Grand Mistress, while Eugénie and her sister, Paca, were accorded the rank of Maids of Honor. But when after her marriage Queen Isabella emancipated herself finally from her mother and Queen Christine was compelled to withdraw into quasi-exile in France with her morganatic husband, whom she had raised from the rank of private in the Royal Guards to that of General, Duke of Rianzares and Minister of State, the Countess de Montijo, along with Eugénie and her sister, Paca, were promptly dismissed from their offices at court and recommended to travel abroad for the sake of their health.

Queen Isabella's message of congratulation to Eugénie on the occasion of the latter's marriage to Napoleon III. was so unfriendly as to be little short of insulting, and when, shortly before the Paris International Exhibition of 1867, Eugénie, against the advice of her husband and of his Ministers, persisted in paying an incognito visit to Madrid she was subjected to such gross discourtesy and unfriendliness by Queen Isabella as to excite intense indignation at Paris, even among those there who were prejudiced against the Empress, her treatment being regarded in the light of an affront to France.

Time, however, brought its revenge, for when, in 1868, Queen Isabella was overwhelmed by the revolution, deprived of her throne and forced to seek refuge in France it fell to the lot of Empress Eugénie to have to inform the fugitive Queen of the necessity imposed upon her by the French court and government to dismiss from her entourage the infamous Marfori, a former acolyte, whose presence in her suite, in the rôle of her acknowledged favorite, offended the sense of propriety of the French people, whose hospitality she was enjoying.

It is a great mistake to imagine that the Comte de Montijo was a man of obscure rank, and, admitting the official assertions to be true that he was Eugénie's father, she had no reason to be ashamed of her lineage, while it was ridiculous to apply to her the designation of "an obscure adventuress," with which she was stigmatized by her adversaries at the time of her marriage to Napoleon III. For the Comte de Montijo was a distinguished Spanish officer, who had attached himself to the fortunes of Joseph Bonaparte when the latter was King at Madrid and had afterward accompanied him back to Paris, taking service in the French army. The Comte took part in the defence of Paris against the allied armies in 1814 and while fighting for the French flag lost an eye and a portion of his face. Incidentally, he introduced into France the Spanish practice of smoking cigars, and if the latter superseded, in the early portion of the nineteenth century, the custom of taking snuff, which had been in vogue for the previous hundred years, it was entirely due to the Comte de Montijo. Among his ancestors he counted Alfonso Perez de Guzman, surnamed "the Brave," that hero of the thirteenth century whose exploits are still recounted by Spanish parents, as well as Gonsalvo de Cordova, surnamed "The Great Captain," and Antonio de Leve, the most skilful of the generals of Emperor Charles V.

The Comtes de Montijo, who were also Dukes of Peneranda, also figure in the memoirs of the malignant and sarcastic Duc de St. Simon, who never perpetrated an error in heraldic and genealogical matters and whose word may be relied upon, therefore, when he ascribes to them in his pages, in the most positive manner, that the Comtes de Montijo were descended from the old Kings of the Asturias, of Leon and of Galicia.

Early Feud with Jerome.

One of the most cruel enemies of Empress Eugénie was undoubtedly her husband's first cousin, Prince Jérôme Napoléon, who had been next heir to the throne until the time of the Emperor's marriage and the birth of the Prince Imperial. It is generally understood that the enmity between the Empress and the Prince originated with her marriage, but it dated much further back. Few are aware of the fact that in 1850, when Napoleon III. was President of the French Republic and Jérôme had been despatched on a special mission to Madrid, the Prince became a warm friend of the Comtesse de Montijo and fell violently in love with Eugénie, then known as the Comtesse de Teba. But when she suggested that his admiration should take the form of marriage he scorned at the idea in a manner that she never forgave or forgot, and when his cousin, Napoleon III., after becoming Emperor, announced his intention of marrying her the Prince placed every conceivable obstacle in the way of the match, knowing her to be his mortal enemy. As soon as she became Empress she gave free rein to her prejudice against him, and if in spite of his extraordinary cleverness and brilliancy he ended by being despised by his countrymen and altogether misunderstood by them it was largely due to her persistent and relentless hostility and to the stories which she circulated concerning him, especially tales impugning his courage.

There is no doubt that the enmity of the Empress and of her husband's cleverest cousin was a source of weakness to Napoleon III. throughout his reign and deprived him of much of the support that he would have otherwise enjoyed, offering great advantages to his foes. I have had considerable personal knowledge of this animosity. I knew Prince Jérôme Napoléon from my earliest boyhood, and during the war of 1870, when, after Sedan, he had been forced to seek refuge in England, he was wont to come almost daily to my father's house in London and to sit in the library trailing hour after hour against Eugénie as the authoress of the war, as responsible for all the disasters to the French nation and as wholly to blame for the downfall of the dynasty.

Time, instead of assuaging the enmity between these two, the Empress and the Prince, seemed, on the contrary, to accentuate their resentment against each other. When in after years I stayed at Prangins, the Prince's exquisitely beautiful country seat on the shores of the Lake of Geneva, near Nyon, which he had inherited from his uncle, Joseph Bonaparte, once a King of Spain and a resident of Bordentown, N. J., "Plon-Plon," as he was nicknamed, would denounce Eugénie even still more fiercely, and I can recall that every effort would be made to avoid any mention of her name owing to the paroxysms of indignation on his part which it would call forth. After the funeral of Napoleon III., at Chislehurst, and the Prince's failure to find among the Emperor's papers and in its assigned place the will in which the dead monarch had made provision for the Prince Imperial and of which he (Jérôme) was to have been the executor and guardian of the young Prince during his minority, he bounced out of the place and refused to hold any other intercourse with her whatsoever.

What became of the missing will no one knows. The instructions of Prince Jérôme to the effect that the Empress had any share in its obliteration may be dismissed as unworthy of credence and as having had their origin in his enmity toward her. But the effect of the loss of the will, which had been seen and read by Prince Jérôme and by several other of Napoleon III.'s most trusted advisers and adherents, was to leave the Prince Imperial without any financial provision for his future and entirely dependent upon the bounty and generosity of his mother. The explanation of the terms of the will which was ultimately admitted to probate, and which made no mention of the Emperor's son, was that at the time when it was drawn up and signed, namely, in 1856, the Emperor was under the impression that he would be succeeded on the throne by his only son, the Prince Imperial, who would thus have the very large civil list and the revenues connected therewith at his disposal and therefore left his entire private property to his widow.

Owns New York Real Estate.

Empress Eugénie, thanks to this will and to the wonderful manner in which her fortune has been administered, is now enormously wealthy, her investments including much real estate in New York, as well as large holdings of American railroad and mining stocks. And it is, to say the least, strange that the acknowledged heir to all this wealth should be the Bonapartist pretender, Prince Victor Napoléon, the eldest son of that Prince Jérôme Napoléon who was of all her many enemies the most bitter.

Although Prince Victor and his wife, Princess Clémentine, youngest daughter of the late King Leopold of Belgium, will both be glad of the great accession of riches that will accrue to them under the terms of the will of Empress Eugénie, they are in no haste for her death. If they are anxious that her demise should be deferred as long as possible it is not only on account of the affection which they entertain for her but also because the longer she lives the wealthier they eventually will become.

In order to understand this it is necessary to explain that a number of years ago she made a rather extraordinary deal with a syndicate of Belgian, English and French insurance companies, according to the terms of which they bound themselves, in return for a considerable sum down, to pay her a sort of progressive annuity, increasing in amount each year. The annuity started with $80,000 for the first year. For the year 1913 it had reached the figure of $378,000, while in 1914 it had totalled up to $450,000. Although she maintains a certain amount of state at Farnborough, yet her household is conducted on a somewhat parsimonious scale, and she does not begin to spend her income. In fact, the bulk of the annuity in question merely goes to swell the fortune which she will bequeath to Prince Victor Napoléon, and the longer she lives the greater this fortune will be.

That is why the Prince and his wife, Princess Clémentine, her heirs, are offering up prayers that her life may be spared for many years to come; whereas there are probably equally fervent supplication to Heaven from the insurance companies concerned that she may soon be called to her eternal rest and be laid beside the remains of Napoléon III. and her only son, the ill fated Prince Imperial (who fell fighting the Zulus in South Africa for England), in the beautiful mausoleum chapel at Farnborough.

Homes for Teachers

BOARDING 'round" for the country school teacher has always had its inconveniences, and not infrequently its martyrdoms. The United States Department of the Interior, through its Board of Education, is coming to the rescue.

It has set on foot a movement for the erection of teachers' cottages, which may also serve as community centres. There are more than 200,000 rural school districts in the United States and more than 20,000,000 children of school age live in towns of less than 2,500 population. Because of living conditions it is impossible to get enough good teachers to meet the demand of these districts.

Says Mr. R. H. Kelly, of the department:—"Many farmhouses have no accommodations for a teacher, and often kitchen, living room and dining room are combined in one, with no heat in any other room. The farmer and his family have to spend most of their time working indoors or out, eating and sleeping. Their occupations and hours of labor in no way correspond to those of the teacher. A good teacher must spend a considerable amount of time almost every evening upon school work, for which a quiet, comfortable room is essential. If she insists upon such a room when she goes to board in the country she is likely to be considered "stuck up" and exclusive. If she gets a room by herself it is often unheated and too uncomfortable for study in cold weather.

"On the other hand, if the teacher is forced to spend her entire time in the living room with the rest of the family she has no opportunity to prepare properly for her school duties, and is also likely to be drawn into neighborhood gossip and factional disputes. Many of the better situated families in the country districts do not care to take a steady boarder, so that a teacher may be forced to go to farmhouses where only the barest accommodations can be secured."

It is because of these conditions that the teachers' cottage movement has developed rapidly. There are now one or more teachers' cottages in every State

This Dog Didn't Believe in Ghosts

This "ghost visit" happened when I was a lad sixteen years of age. One night, just after retiring, in my old country home, and before slumber had closed my eyes, I became conscious of a noise as of dripping water. "Drip," then a moment's pause; then "drip" again. This was kept up until my nerves could stand it no longer, when I arose, lighted a lamp and looked around. After a careful search I found nothing unusual and so retired. In a few moments the "drip, drip" began again. I arose once more, called my folks, and we made a different search, but discovered nothing. I retired again and was disturbed no more that night.

The next night there was a repetition of the same sounds. We again made a tour of investigation; no results. In the morning we held a council in the room and had almost decided it was a "token," or "haunt," when my rat terrier dog, who had come into the room, went to one of the windows and began barking and trying to climb the curtains. I walked over, pulled them out from the shade, and, looking upward, unearthed the ghost—a mouse.

After it was killed the "drip, drip" ceased. The solution:—The little rodent was playful and had been climbing upon a cloth covered box and jumping off on the floor, making a noise as of dripping water. This we knew by the dog taking to trail to the box, up its side, thence where he struck the carpet. Thus a ghost was laid low by a dog.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Elton Case.

[Original.]

The orphan Earl of Elton, four years old, was playing in his nursery one morning when Mrs. Rawson, who was in full charge of him, brought in a little girl of about the same years, saying to him:

"Here's a little sister for you, Ralph. Her name is Gladys. Now, don't let me hear any more grumbling about not having playmates like other children."

"Don't ask questions or I'll send her away."

So Ralph and Gladys proceeded to enjoy each other's company in the amusement of childhood. As they grew older they wondered why they had been separated till their first meeting and had been kept together ever since. Since no one seemed disposed to inform them they spent much time building up hypotheses, Gladys preferring those which accounted for her absence from her brother, she having been stolen by a fairy when she was a baby. But she had very little remembrance of her early life.

They had no playmates except each other. No one interfered with their growing up together in any way their fancies led them. By and by Ralph began to talk about Gladys being his wife, to which she responded that she didn't believe brothers and sisters ever married. And so as they passed through different stages of development there came different kinds of feeling till at last they were nearly grown.

One day when they were fifteen years old they discovered Mrs. Rawson packing Gladys' belongings. When asked what she was going to do, she told them that Gladys was to be taken away. The color vanished from the face of each. Nature had met for them its first conflict with civilization, and nature always makes a desperate fight, especially in the case of the young. These two had been left to mate like the birds. A separation now could not be endured. Something must be done. Several days elapsed before there were any signs of Gladys' immediate removal, which time they spent in talking the matter over. What was there for two children brought up as they had been to do except to flee?

One morning they got together all the money they had—money was never denied them—and counted it, some shillings and a lot of pennies. Taking this they went off on such a ramble as they had often taken together before.

They had been kept so aloof from the world that there is a possibility they did not know what marriage meant, especially between brother and sister. Be that as it may, they determined to be married. After much difficulty they found a clergyman, who consented to marry them for all the money they had, and the knot was tied. After the ceremony they strolled aimlessly about till they came to a little park, into which they entered and forget everything else in the enjoyment of a stream, on the bank of which they sat throwing stones into the water. They were thus amusing themselves when a policeman went to them and arrested them. Their flight had been discovered and the police notified.

The next morning Sir Michael Frane, a retired barrister, read in a morning paper of the flight of the young Earl of Elton and his sister and their marriage, at which all England was shocked. Sir Michael had been a close friend of the last Earl of Elton. He knew that a minor was heir to the title, but for his life couldn't remember that there was a girl. He finally recalled the fact that a sister of the last earl, the Hon. Mrs. Drewer, had left a little girl and that Mrs. Dwyer and the earl's brother, Tweed Spencer, had been left in charge of the estate and the two children, who were orphans. This Spencer, on assuming this responsibility, had discharged Sir Michael as solicitor for the estate and employed another man. It occurred to Sir Michael that since his old friend's boy was in trouble he would need the services of some one who would be interested in him. He took the train the same day for the town where the children were detained and before they slept had passed some time in hearing their story.

When the trial came up the next morning the children's guardian, Tweed Spencer, was there to claim their return. What was his surprise to see Sir Michael step forward and announce himself as their solicitor. Indeed, Spencer turned white. He was playing a game that would have been very easy had not the children overstepped all supposed bonds by falling in love. As it was, his defeat was certain. He made a clean breast of it and admitted that there was no intention to make the children believe they were brother and sister, but Sir Michael introduced evidence proving that the guardian had intended to marry the earl to his own daughter. The will showed that provision had been made for the union of two properties in the marriage of the cousins, to defeat which Spencer had brought them up as brother and sister.

The young couple were delighted at the result of their escapade. The court decided to appoint a new guardian and yielded to their request in appointing Sir Michael Frane. He persuaded them to live separately till they became of age. The earl went to Oxford, and Gladys was placed under the care of tutors selected by her guardian. When they came into their fortunes they went to the Elton estates to live, celebrating their wedding, which had occurred several years before.

THE FIRST WATCHES.

They Had Weights, Not Springs, and Were as Big as Plates.

At first the watch was about the size of a dessert plate. It had weights and was used as a "pocket clock." The earliest known use of the modern name occurs in the record of 1462, which mentions that Edward VI. had "one larum or watch of iron, the case being likewise of iron gilt, with two plummets of lead."

The first watches may readily be supposed to have been of rude execution. The first great improvement, the substitution of springs for weights, was in 1500. The earliest springs were not coiled, but only straight pieces of steel.

Early watches had only one hand and, being wound up twice a day, they could not be expected to keep time nearer than fifteen or twenty minutes in the twelve hours. The dials were of silver or brass. The cases had no crystals, but opened at the back and front and were four or five inches in diameter.

A plain watch cost the equivalent of $1,600 in our currency, and after one was ordered it took a year to make it.—Exchange.

ROYAL PROCLAMATIONS.

How King George Deals With the Privy Council.

Time was when the King's Privy Council was the great governing body of England; but since the days of the first Charles it has fallen from its high estate until it is now a mere lifeless shadow of its former greatness, with no influence, and controlling nothing that in the smallest degree affects legislation. It is an ornamental body, whose old powers have fallen to a select committee of its members known as the Cabinet.

Its duties are now limited to such formal and mechanical work as issuing proclamations, granting charters, and the mailing of orders; with a few decorative functions, such as attending at formal Acts of State or the receiving of a new Minister on his assuming office.

It is at its best the humble instrument of the Cabinet, promulgating the laws in the making of which it has had no voice whatever. It has, however, one claim to distinction: it often has the King himself to preside over its meetings, an honor which the Cabinet can never boast.

The office of the Privy Council is in the Treasury Buildings in Whitehall; but its meetings are held wherever His Majesty is residing at the time—at Buckingham Palace, at Windsor, or at Sandringham. And the summons to it takes this simple form: "Let the Messenger acquaint the Lords and others of His Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council that a Council is appointed to meet at the Court at——" at such a time on such a day. Out of 300 Councillors seldom more than half-a-dozen are summoned to attend; and at some meetings no more than three are actually present.

The King receives these Right Honorable gentlemen in whatever room he may chance to be, in the most informal manner possible; and the business, all prepared beforehand by the Clerk, is quickly dispatched. A few minutes of pleasant gossip and the Council is at an end.

It is commonly supposed that the Lord Mayor of London is, during his term of office, a member of the Privy Council; but the impression is erroneous. Although London's Chief Magistrate bears the prefix "Right Honorable," he has no part in the Privy Council's deliberations; as one Lord Mayor found to his dismay when he presented himself at a meeting of the Council and was politely told by the Clerk that he could not remain.

Scott's Narrow Escape.

The world had a narrow escape of never having known a Sir Walter Scott. When a tiny babe he was left in charge of a maid, but the girl's heart was in Edinburgh, whither she wanted to go to rejoin her lover. She was, however, compelled to stay and look after the infant at Sandy Knowe. The girl regarded her charge as an obstacle to be removed and afterward confessed that she carried young Scott up to the crags (under a strong temptation of the devil, as she expressed it), fully intending to cut his throat with her scissors and bury him under the stone.

Classifying Him.

"Brother Hardesty, can't you make your contribution for the education of the heathen a little larger than usual this year?"

"Dr. Goodman, I'm more than doubling it. I have just started that youngest boy of mine to college."—Chicago Tribune.

SYMPATHY FOR A DESERTER.

Swiss Press and Public Condemn Surrender of Alsatian.

Indignation is being manifested by public and press of Switzerland at the action of the Basle police authorities in handing over a young deserter from Alsace and Lallemand to the German officials and thus probably sending him to his death. In demanding an explanation of this affair, the Vaterland of Lucerne sums up the case as follows:

"It is not denied that the Basle police have delivered a fugitive young Alsatian into the hands of the Germans. At present the poor devil is awaiting the judgment of a court-martial at Mulhausen. But the Basle police try to justify their action with the assertion that the man was neither a fugitive recruit nor a deserter, and that he had no papers or money.

"This plea in self-justification will not stand a close test, however. Lallemand—the irony of fate has given the Alsatian this name—began his first course of military instruction on Sept. 15, 1914, and after three weeks he received a furlough, with the proviso that he return to duty on Jan. 15, 1915. This he did not do, however, but went into hiding. For this his parents were forcibly sent to Hanover and the persons who had concealed him and another recruit who had failed to join his regiment were condemned to several months' imprisonment.

"That fugitive recruits and deserters are treated as political refugees in the practice of the Swiss extradition laws; that an administrative refusal of admission is equivalent to an unauthorized extradition; that the State Department has given the Cantons instructions regarding the method of procedure with deserters and fugitive recruits in which rejection has no part; that the lack of papers and means of subsistance, according to the instructions of the same officials of the Confederation, should not be regarded as of decisive importance; all these things must be known to the Basle police."

Spoons used in cooking should be of wood as far as possible. A few metal ones should be kept for measuring.

Many soaps are injurious to painted walls and woodwork. It is safer to use a little borax powder or ammonia in the water when doing such cleaning.

New York, May 11.—Miss Daisy Lipmann, nineteen, did not wish to live with the mother, four sisters and two brothers of Jacob Brantman, if she and Mr. Brantman married, and so Mr. Brantman, a manufacturer, decided that he would not wed her. He had two other reasons, which he told in the Supreme Court yesterday, one being that she objected to his card playing and the other that she was not his fiancee, but his stenographer, and insisted on "talking shop when he made love to her."

The jury decided that Miss Lipmann was entitled to $1750 after Justice Goff had told it that the "human heart is so deep that no human tribunal can justly weigh its palpitations." Miss Lipmann wanted $10,000 for the alleged breach of promise to wed. She denied that she had refused to live with the other seven members of the Brahtmann family.

GETS BACK HIS SIGHT.

Unable to see for eight years, Edward Claycomb, a painter of Altoona, Pa., is recovering his sight by degrees. In 1908 he fell from a house he was painting, and in addition to his other injuries he detached the retinas of both eyes. He became blind. Specialists of a dozen cities were consulted, and they all told him his case was hopeless. For the last several weeks his sight has been returning, and now he can see and read large letters and distinguish between colours. Physicians are puzzled. Claycomb is hopeful that his sight will become normal.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or side headaches, dizziness, your stomach sours, or is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

SOLDIERS' ETIQUETTE

Many Regulations on the Question of Saluting

Our civilian soldiers have picked up military etiquette in a surprisingly short time, and it is not often that they are puzzled in regard to saluting. In case there are any Kitchener's men who fear to make a mistake, here are a few hints on when not to salute. There are a good many regulations about whom a soldier must salute, but he is left comparatively free concerning those he may not salute. This is because he may not raise his hat, and a salute is the only way he has of recognising the greeting of a lady, or a civilian friend, or superior.

A soldier must never raise his hand to his forehead in salute when he has his head uncovered. If he is cooling his heated brow and an officer approaches, he must put on his hat before saluting. Even when indoors the hat must be kept on when addressing or saluting a superior officer. The only other occasion when a soldier must not salute is when on outpost duty. He must pay no compliment to anybody then, not even the King.

Judge and Dog Biscuits

"It is said on your behalf that the goods were only dog biscuits. Dog biscuits may be good enough food for some people whom I need not specify." These were words used by Mr. Justice Avory at the Central Criminal Court in the case of George Colvard, forty-eight, shipping clerk, who, pleading guilty to forging and uttering a Privy Council licence to export goods, was ordered to pay a fine of $250 and be imprisoned until it was paid. It was stated that he had been employed by the Molassine Company, Limited. He obtained a license to export 4 hundredweight of dog biscuits to a place in Sweden, via Gothenburg, and was alleged to have altered the license so that the goods could be conveyed via Copenhagen.

ADRIFT IN BALLOON: SAVED BY PARACHUTE

Graphic Narrative by Young French Officer of His Sickening Experience Over German Lines

One of the most thrilling adventures of this war was the escape from capture or death of a young French lieutenant who, while in a captive balloon, above the rear of the battle of Verdun, suddenly realized that the steel hawser connecting him with the earth had been severed by a shell and that he was drifting towards the enemy's lines. Thousands of anxious eyes were directed towards the little speck which grew fainter and fainter as the southerly wind wafted it towards the German positions. Four aeroplanes at once started in the vain hope of rendering assistance, but everyone felt that the lieutenant was doomed.

Minutes passed. The balloon kept rising, and only the car could now be discerned. The soldiers forgot to fire, the suspense was so terrible. Then suddenly a tiny greyish speck was seen to part from the balloon, which shot up a thousand feet, but instead of falling to death the speck seemed to be pulled up sharp in mid-air. At last, with the aid of glasses, observers saw that the speck was a human body suspended from a parachute. A mighty cheer rose as the truth was realized, but a full ten minutes of suspense lasted as the parachute with its human freight slowly descended, and finally landed close to the French lines.

Adrift!

The young officer said later: "The first intimation that something had gone wrong was when I felt a slight shock. I thought the telephone cable had parted. All at once I became aware that the other balloons were growing smaller, and I grasped the fact that I was adrift. A glance at my barometer told me I was already five thousand feet up. I tried to pull the cord working the hydrogen automatic control, but it had become entangled and refused to work. I tried to climb up to it, but failed. Then I feared I was lost.

"My first thought was to destroy my papers, then I thought of blowing out my brains to avoid falling into the hands of the Boches. Then, however, came inspiration. Why not try the parachute? I had to be quick, for I was now eleven thousand feet up. The cord which was tied round my body was 65 feet long, so I had to jump that distance into the void before the box containing the parachute could open and set it free. For a few seconds I held on to the car by my hands. Then I let go.

Parachute Slowly Opened

"I must have dropped over a hundred feet before the parachute unfurled, and it was not an agreeable sensation. But after that I did not mind, and was able to look about me. After a time I felt the sensation of complete security. When I was only two thousand five hundred feet from the earth I became aware that the wind was carrying me towards the German lines. Then I seemed to lose consciousness. I rebounded three times before I finally landed and discovered I was 500 yards from the enemy. I had been 20 minutes falling. I am only slightly bruised."

PREMIER BORDEN'S ORDER

Important Decoration From Belgium With Nation's Thanks

Mr. M. Goor, Consul-General for Belgium, handed to the Right Honorable Sir Robert L. Borden the insignia of the Grand Cordon of the Order of Leopold, which had just been conferred upon him by King Albert, as a public mark of His Majesty's appreciation of the Prime Minister's and the Dominion's sympathy and generosity towards Belgium. This decoration is the highest distinction of the Order of Leopold which ranks first among the National orders. The order of Leopold was instituted by the first Sovereign of independent Belgium, in 1832, that is shortly after the revolution which placed Belgium among the free nations. The King of the Belgians is Grand Master of the Order. Members of Parliament who receive any of its decorations are subject to re-election. There are five classes in the Order, the members of which are styled respectively as follows: Grand Cordon, Grand Officier Commandeur, Officier and Chevalier. A pension is attached to the decoration when conferred upon a soldier not holding a commission.

WHY PORTUGAL FIGHTS

For Treaties, Liberty and Civilization, Says War Premier

The premier of the Portuguese War Cabinet, Dr. Affonzia Jose Anfeida, discussed the German declaration of war against Portugal and the reference in the German ultimatum to Dr. Almeida' alleged use of language abusive toward Emperor William during a speech in the Portuguese Parliament.

"The German note caused me no surprise," said the Premier, "as I had always considered it inevitable that Portugal should join the war at the side of England. The Portuguese people rejoice in being able to contribute toward the fall of Prussianism, and the best proof of this is that they placed me at the head of the war cabinet, although I had been the one accused by the German note.

"We know that the triumphs of Germany's despotic methods would produce throughout the civilized world such a collapse as would stagnate human progress for an indefinite period, and tend to create nations of slaves. Portugal does not combat Germany through a warlike spirit or a utilitarian policy, but because she thus carries out her duty toward England as her ally, at whose side she placed herself the first hour of the war. She is glad to participate in the great conflict in which such issues exist between right and justice on the one side and oppression on the other."

Trench Fever, New Disease

British physicians are investigating a new disease, trench fever. At first it was thought that this malady contracted on the battlefront was some old disease in a new guise, but research now indicates it is a distinct specific fever of relapsing type not due to any virus hitherto known. The relapses may be one or several in number. The characteristic symptoms are headache and pain in the legs and the small of the back.

Home Health Club

By Dr. David H. Reeder

"If the diet is limited in kind and quantity, bread made from the so-called whole grain flours is especially useful; if it is varied and abundant, other foods can supply the nutritive material which characterizes the bran-ny layer of the grain. The use of different kinds of bread is to be recommended in general, for variety in the diet is pleasing and this is an easy way to secure it. Sometimes so simple a change as baking the bread in a new form, a twist for example, instead of a loaf, or cutting bread and butter in a fancy shape with a cooky cutter, will increase a child's relish for it. So, too, will a change of flavor obtained by adding a few "raisins," dried currants or nut meats.

Cereal mushes and ready to eat cereal breakfast foods supply much the same nutrients as bread. In a very general way, a half cupful of cooked cereal mush or one cupful of puffed, flaked or shredded cereal is equal in food value to a good sized slice of bread (one ounce).

The above allowance of any one of these cereals with one tablespoon of cream is about equivalent to the slice of bread mentioned (one ounce) and spread with about one-sixth of its weight of butter, a moderate and not unusual allowance. Cereals with cream resemble bread and butter in their nutritive value more closely than cereals with milk do. Probably one reason why bread and cereals in other forms make up so large a part of the food of people is because they come near in themselves to fulfilling one of the important requirements of the diet—a right proportion between the nutrients which provide fuel only and those which can be used for body building. Or expressing these in terms of the needs of the child, they come near to providing for activity, and also for growth. To come near doing a thing, however, is not to do it, and with bread and butter should be served as a rule some of those foods which provide protein in larger proportion as compared with fuel. These foods include milk, meat, fish, poultry, eggs, cheese, dried beans, cowpeas, peas, peanuts and almonds, walnuts and other nuts. Among these protein-rich foods as they are often called, healthy grown people may choose at will, and according to their likes and dislikes, but in the case of children no one of them is thought wholly to take the place of milk.

The value of milk in the diet of the young is due not only to the fact that it contains a large number of nourishing substances in forms in which they can easily be assimilated, but also to the fact that in some way not now fully understood it seems to promote growth and to help the body of the child to make use of other foods.

While milk should if possible have a place in the diet of all growing children, it is not necessary to serve it at every meal, and the lunch can, if this seems desirable, be made an exception. In practice, however, it has been found that such dishes as milk toast; milk soups, and cocoa are often convenient for the lunch at home, while at school they can be prepared more easily than meat dishes because they do not call for an oven or for any but the simplest cooking utensils.

Milk soups, of which there is a variety, all prepared in about the same way, are important, not only because they can be made a means of serving milk in large quantities, but also because they offer a good way to use vegetables, the value of which as food is referred to later in this bulletin. Materials other than vegetables—small amounts of fish or cheese for example—can be used for flavoring. These however tend to increase the protein rather than to add the nutrients which give vegetables their special usefulness in the diet, a fact which should be kept in mind when bills of fare are being made.

It is unfortunate for those who have charge of the food of children to be tied down to any fixed recipes for milk soups, for if so they are likely to fail to utilize materials at hand, such as those that grow in the home or school garden or those that have been left over from previous meals, and are still in good condition.

Other easily prepared dishes that may be the means of introducing milk into the diet are simple chowders, such as potato or corn chowder and custards. The breakfast cereals—a large and varied class of foods, valuable in themselves—may be the means of encouraging children to take much milk. All can be served with milk; and the food value of the uncooked varieties can be further increased by using milk instead of water in preparing them. In this way skim milk, which has a higher food value that most people realize and which is too often wasted, can be made to count as nourishment."

LOST APPETITE QUICKLY REVIVED

A FITFUL APPETITE IS GENERALLY ASSOCIATED WITH A GENERAL WEAKNESS OF THE SYSTEM. FERROZONE, THE BEST TONIC AND APPETIZER, SHOULD BE TAKEN AFTER EACH MEAL, AND A RAPID IMPROVEMENT IS SURE TO FOLLOW.

Distastes for food often follows La Grippe and fever, or is brought on by over excitement or worry. It is a serious condition and paves the way for more sickness. On this account it should be at once corrected by the regular use of Ferrozone.

A wonderful medicine is Ferrozone. It instantly imparts a real zest for food, and gives power to the stomach to digest and assimilate all that is eaten. Dyspepsia and indigestion are quite unknown to those who use Ferrozone, simply because it digests food so quickly, that it has no time to ferment or sour on the stomach.

If the liver is torpid, or the kidneys not eliminating as they should, they are soon restored to normal action, and the poisons that might otherwise be retained in the body to cause disease and ill health, are carried off through natural channels.

The surest road to perfect health is Ferrozone. Young girls who have been accustomed to eat almost nothing at breakfast, soon get over the bad habit by using Ferrozone, and as a result grow into healthy vigorous womanhood. When people get up in years and loose the strength and vim of youth, they need a good tonic and blood builder to enable them to resist the trials of our vigorous winter, and this is where Ferrozone can be used to great advantage.

Both the young and the old, the weak and the strong, male and female can derive untold benefit from Ferrozone. It is guaranteed to contain no opiates or injurious drugs, and will do just what is claimed for it.

Druggists recommend and sell it, price 50c. per box, or three boxes for $1.25.

If the old year has brought sorrow and desolation, and hung crepe on our doors, the new year will bring us the leaves and healing, and we are glad to part with the one and welcome the other. If on the contrary, the old year has brought us only joy and comfort, we part from him sorrowfully but meet his successor with the ardent hope that he, too, comes with blessing. The sober jollity of New Year's day is like standing on the threshold between time and eternity. Here is the world we know—ponder the world that is new and untried.

Suffered From Nerves Could Not Sleep

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B., writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves. I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would scream out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

GENERAL PETAIN, THE NEW IDOL OF FRANCE.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST MILITARY CONFERENCE.

Grouped around this council board are the men entrusted with the working out of the destinies of their respective countries. The greatest statesmen and Generals of the Allied countries are gathered here planning for further co-operation to defeat the Teuton Powers. Each country has sent her most astute diplomats and brilliant military men to represent her at this meeting. Starting on the extreme left and moving to the right around the table—Premier Asquith, of England; Lord Bertie, Sir Edward Grey, David Lloyd-George, one of the secretaries, Lord Kitchener, and English military aide, Sir William Robertson, Premier of Italy, Salandra, Ambassador Titoni, Baron Sonnino, Gen. Cadorna, an Italian Secretary, Mr. Matsui, Gen. Chapas, M. Isvolsky, Gen. Gillinski, Premier Patchitch, Gen. Vesnitch, Gen. Yovanovith, Gen. Boschitch, Gen. De Castelnau, Gen. Joffre, another French Secretary, Premier Briand, Gen. Roques (standing), and Gen. Bourgeois.

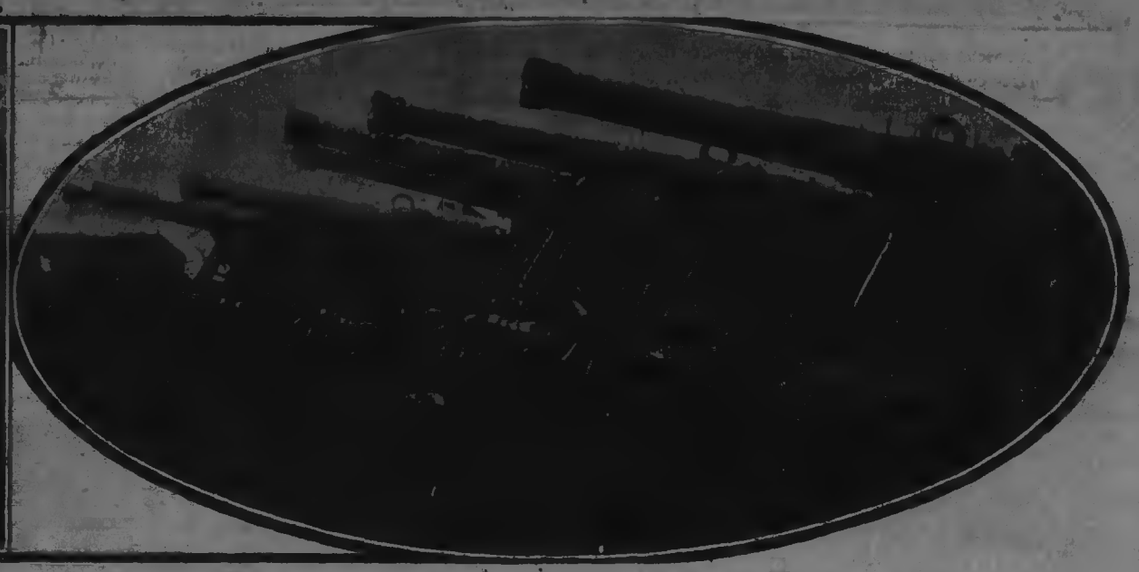
General Joffre reviewing the regiments which prevented the Germans from piercing the French lines and capturing Verdun. These regiments were singled out and taken to St. Dizier to rest from the terrific struggle in which they had been engaged. They were reviewed in the square at St. Dizier, in front of the monument which commemorates the battle of St. Dizier, which was besieged by the Germans in 1514.



BIG FACTORS IN THE FRENCH DEFENSE AT VERDUN.

French artillery in the Verdun region. Artillery fire in the battle of Verdun has been exceptionally severe. These big guns are the big reasons for the Germans not being able to capture Verdun.

4.—LORD WIMBORNE,
Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who, according reports, was being held a prisoner together with Gen. Friend, by the Irish revolutionists.

6.—MAJOR-GENERAL SIR JOHN MAXWELL,
Who was sent to Ireland, with power to suppress the uprising.

5.—EDWARD CARSON,

A special war test in mobilization to gauge the readiness of the coast artillery troops for instant call, was made on Governor's Island, April 28th. Photo shows Major-General Leonard Wood reviewing the soldiers from Fort Totten, Fort Hamilton, Fort Hancock and Fort Wadsworth, numbering 1,500 men.

Trustworthy information has been received here that the recent detachment of Russian troops who arrived at Marseilles was not the first contingent of forces sent by the Czar to the western front. It is known now that an advance allotment of two brigades, 10,000 soldiers, arrived at Toulon from Delay in the first week in April.

FIRST BOAT THROUGH THE CANAL SINCE THE BIG SLIDE.
The St. Veronica, of Liverpool, England, followed by scores of other vessels, passing through the cut in the Panama Canal, where the great slide of September 15th-17th occurred. This steamer is the first vessel to go through the channel since the slide from Culebra Hill blocked passage for all boats. It has taken many months to clear the cut, the passage only having been declared navigable a few weeks ago.

FOOD FOR THE BIG GUNS.
Depot of reserve shells for the big guns now being used in the Verdun battle. The big guns have a ravenous appetite, but the munition factories have managed to cope with the situation, and there is always a large supply.

DE LAVAL Cream Separators

Efficiency Test

It is the all around test of efficiency in the home dairy, in the creamery, or at the World's greatest Expositions, which judges and eventually places in its proper class every Cream Separator in the market.

DE LAVAL SUPREMACY

World's Expositions at San Francisco 1915, St. Louis 1914, Buffalo 1901, Paris 1900, Chicago 1893, and all others since the introduction of Cream Separators have awarded the highest possible prize to the De Laval. 98% of all Creameries operating separators are equipped with De Laval machines, and there are more De Lavals in use in the home dairy than all other makes combined. This is evidence of efficiency and supremacy which must be recognized by Cream Separator purchasers.

If you are not using a De Laval in your dairy, you are not using the Separator judged by all classes of dairymen as the best. Why not start right now?

THE FRENCH STOP MORE GERMAN ATTACKS

Sir Sam Hughes Before The Davidson Commission

THE FRENCH LINE YIELDED NOT AN INCH IN THE FACE OF HEAVY ATTACKS

German Assaults Near Fort Douaumont Preceded by Violent Artillery Bombardment Were Repulsed With Severe Loss to the Enemy---French Gain New Ground Near Hill 287.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 13.—Several heavy German attacks near Fort Douaumont and Thiaumont, northeast of Verdun, preceded by the most violent bombardment, were repulsed with severe loss last night, the French line yielding not an inch, the War Office announced to-day. On the west bank of the Meuse the French gained new ground near Hill 287, west of Hill 304, said the official statement. In Avocourt Wood and around Hill 304 the artillery struggles continues without cessation.

The attack on the right bank of the Meuse was fully expected. Following thir usual custom of constantly shifting their drive from one bank of the Meuse to the other. The Germans began preparing for the Douaumont-Thiaumont attack Thursday night.

War Office statements yesterday reported violent bombardment on this front. Southeast of Verdun, near Eparges, a strong German reconnaissance was checked by the French before the Germans succeeded in reaching the open ground.

145,000 March in New York's Parade

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 13.—New York to-day saw the greatest out-pouring of civilans in support of a principle in the history of America. The principle is preparedness. Throughout the day the crash of martial music resounded as thousands upon thousands of men and women marched, marched, in an unending stream from Lower Manhattan, up through the busy commercial district of lower Broadway and then swung into historic Fifth avenue, and passed the reviewing stand. There were sixty-four divisions in the gigantic parade. The march started at 9:30 from the City Hall, and the last divison will not pass the reviewing stand until ten o'clock to-night. The great army of preparedness, which moved through the streets of Manhattan, was numerically superior to the standing army of the United States. There were 145,000 men and women in line. A million more viewed the great spectacle.

Big Food Riots Occur in Germany

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 13.—Unprecedented food riots occurred in Mannheim, Germany, last Saturday, according to the Exchange Telegraph's Geneva correspondent. The military brought machine guns into play to quell the mobs, and 300 persons were killed or wounded. Fugitives from Mannheim arrived at Basle, Switzerland, with the story, the correspondent wired.

Dublin Residents Have Been Released

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 13.—Large number of Dublin residents, arrested on suspicion, have been released from prison as the result of Premier Asquith's visit to the Irish capital. Several Government employees were among the men released. Others included persons suspected of having provisioned Sinn Feiners. Premier Asquith planned to continue conferences to-day with the civil authorities in Dublin. A delegation of Dublin citizens is waiting to see the Prime Minister with a plea for lenient treatment of the rebels deported to England. It was reported in Dublin that King George would issue a proclamation within a few days addressed to the Irish people.

SIR SAM HUGHES TELLS OF THE SALE OF BAD AMMUNITION

Minister of Militia First Witness Called Before The Davidson Commission This Morning—Three Million Rounds Sold to Vickers-Maxim Co.

EVIDENCE IS HEARD

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, May 13.—General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia; Quartermaster-General MacDonald; and Hon. Col. J. Wesley Allison appeared before the Davidson Commission to explain the sale of about three million rounds of Canadian small arms ammunition from the Quebec Arsenal to Vickers Maxim Co., through their representative, Col. Allison. It has been alleged that ammunition was sold for $90 per thousand and re-sold by the Vickers firm to the British Admiralty at a profit. Captain Jno. Thompson, K.C., read the correspondence, which showed that General Hughes had approved of the sale. General Hughes was called to the stand and sworn as the first witness. He stated that in the spring of 1915 a member of the Vickers firm, knowing that they had a lot of defective ammunition on hand, spoke to him of the shortage of ammunition in Britain. He suggested that the defective ammunition might be used for machine gun practice, so that good ammunition could be released for the front. The Minister explained that when he became Minister in 1911-12, he requested the British War Office to send out its best experts to inspect the Quebec Arsenal ammunition. Major Barlow and Major Ogilvie came in May, 1913, and an exhaustive report was made that much of the ammunition was bad. All the ammunition made prior to 1908 was condemned, and some 12 million rounds ordered destroyed. The balance up to the time of the report was declared defective. They endeavoured to improve it by re-ringing it, but this did not prove a success.

Under the rules of the Department General MacDonald was ordered to destroy or dispose of it.

The Minister stated that Col. Allison had come to him with regard to the purchase of some of this. He said if he could make $200,000 or $300,000 out of it so much the better for Canada. So he sent Allison to General MacDonald, and he heard that some of the ammunition had been sold to Vickers. But he understood no commission was paid.

General MacDonald was then called to the stand. He spoke of the first visit to Col. Allison in connection with his application for the first lot sold. He didn't know whom Col. Allison represented, and did not ask.

"How did you fix the price which Col. Allison should pay?" asked Thompson.

"At $90 a thousand," said General MacDonald. "That was the price we charged the rifle clubs and North-West Mounted Police for it."

"Why did you sell this defective ammunition to the Mounted Police?" asked Sir Charles Davidson with some surprise.

"They asked for it," said General MacDonald.

General MacDonald said he did not know why Col. Allison wanted this ammunition. It might have been for use in the Lee-Enfield rifles or for machine gun practice. All of this was now barred from use in Canada.

"Why did you sell it," asked Sir Charles Davidson.

"Well, I don't know," said General MacDonald.

MOTHERS' DAY IN GEORGE STREET

Mother's Day will be appropriately remembered in George Street Methodist Church to-morrow at the morning service. Many friends have volunteered automobiles to bring the aged to the church. At the evening service the Rev. R. G. Peever will preach on the "Judgment and Man's Future Life."

DRUM HEAD SERVICE IN VICTORIA PARK FOR THE 93rd BATTALION

Divine Service Will Be Held To-morrow Morning at 10 O'clock--Pte. Walter Batley of the 21st Battalion Suffering From Shell Shock---Certificates Presented to Non-Coms. of the 93rd Battalion---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

There will be a drum-head church service for the 93rd Battalion to-morrow morning instead of the usual denominational parades. The battalion will fall in at the Armouries at 10 o'clock and march to Victoria Park, where the service will be conducted by Major Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd. Afterwards the men will be free to attend their own churches.

There are two Communion services to-morrow in the nature of farewell services as far as the 93rd are concerned. The Anglicans will fall in at the Armouries at 7.50 a.m. to attend Communion at St. John's, while there is a service for the Methodists at George Street Church at 12 o'clock.

In the illustrated section of the Examiner to-day appears the photographs of Mr. Wm. Bell, of Calgary, formerly of Peterborough, and his two soldier sons, W. A. Bell and G. E. Bell. Another son is Councillor J. H. Bell, of North Monaghan.

When the 93rd Battalion returned to its parade ground this morning, after the usual Saturday morning march out, the non-coms. who were successful in passing the examinations at the recent School of Infantry were called out in front of the Battalion and presented with their certificates. Lieut.-Col. Johnston took advantage of the opportunity to pay a warm tribute to the splendid work of the non-commissioned officers of the Battalion. To the men he remarked that they should feel proud to be working under such capable non-coms. Lieut.-Col. Johnston then thanked the non-commissioned officers for their splendid services, which were thoroughly appreciated by himself and the officers of the Battalion generally.

The following non-coms. of the 93rd Battalion leave to-morrow morning for London to attend the special school in bayonet fighting and physical exercise, which opens on Monday: Sergt. Giles; Corp. Geo. Milton, Corp. Clappinson, Corp. McIntosh, Corp. Parker, Lance-Corps. Saxby, Stockdale, Hill, Holden, Quackenbush, Norman, Burrows, O'Keefe, B. Williams, E. Williams, and R. Coons.

Pte. Batley Wounded.

Mr. and Mrs. George Batley, 521 Chamberlen street, received word this morning that her son, Pte. Walter G. Batley, had been admitted to number four Field Ambulance on April 27th, suffering from shell shock. Pte. Batley enlisted in this city with the 21st Battalion, and has been on the firing line several months. He is twenty-one years of age, and has lived here practically all his life.

DIED A LEPER

Last Saturday the remains of Rev. John Davis were buried not many miles from Peterborough. He was a Baptist missionary who contracted leprosy in India. For years he has been an inmate of the Roman Catholic Lazaretto at Tracadie, N.B. The story of his sufferings and his experiences in the Lazaretto and that of his triumphant death is full of striking lessons. At the Murray street church on Sunday evening Rev. J. E. Webb will speak on the subject, "Lessons From the Lazaretto."

Fuse Was Finally Set to the Magazine by a Forged Circular—Supposed to Have Come Through a New York Agent.

JOHN REDMOND'S APPEAL

(Copyright, 1916, Central News, by T. P. O'Connor, M.P.)

LONDON, May 13.—The whole ghastly story has gradually been revealed of the devices whereby unhappy young men were lured into the senseless rising in Dublin. Many of these dying boys of eighteen told the priests who attended them at the end that they thought they had been brought to Dublin for an ordinary review. Nearly all were certain they were going to succeed, for they were told by German agents that 20,000 German troops had landed at Kerry, that a German submarine had sunk a British gunboat in the Liffey, that France had made peace, that England had been defeated, and that the Irish Republic would be asked to appear at the European peace congress. Anybody in America will trace the similarity of those utterances to those in America and trace the origin to certain German agencies.

A Forged Circular.

The fuse was finally set to the magazine by a forged circular attributed to Dublin Castle, setting forth an elaborate attempt to terrorize the city, to seize the Catholic Archbishop and other palpable inventions. This forgery is also to be traced either to a New York agent or therefrom.

In Dublin the feeling that the unfortunate dupes were innocent or were won by skilful and heartless intrigues is growing stronger and the cry is getting universal among the Liberal journals and politicians of England for a close of the executions under the direction of the military government. The feeling is even stronger in Ireland, and is producing a reaction in favour of the Sinn Feiners, otherwise universally reprobated as the most dangerous enemies of Ireland's hopes.

John Dillon arrived in London Tuesday night. He had been all through the disturbances with his six children within the firing zone. His letters and telegrams had not reached him for a week. The heroic courage and friendship of his tradesmen who supplied his house in the face of falling bullets, saved his family from starvation. He refused to leave Ireland even when wanted in London, spending his time in interviewing the military, who received him politely while he pleaded for mercy for the unfortunate victims of crafty well-paid conspirators.

Redmond's Appeal.

John Redmond was simultaneously seeing Mr. Asquith daily, making the same appeal. That appeal is now backed by all humane men. It is expected that thousands of young men will probably be interned for a short time, then returned to their homes. Some indeed already have reached their parents' houses. Arrests continue on a large scale, but even these will soon cease, and civil government will be re-established.

It is impossible yet to say what the final outcome of this tragic interval will be. At present there has been no deadly injury to the cause of Home Rule, as at first was feared. Two facts have been evolved from the whole incident. The first is that there is still an Irish problem waiting an early and a drastic solution. Second there is an overwhelming majority of Irish who show the same ardor for the Allied cause as the heroic soldiers fighting over in Europe. These facts were brought to light by an astonishingly wide movement to solve the Irish problem by mutual concession. Mr. Asquith hinted it; Sir Edward Carson did not reject it; Mr. Redmond welcomed it,

SIR WILFRID TO MAKE AN APPEAL IN TORONTO SOON

Liberal Leader May Give Address on Bilingualism—Is Also to Inaugurate a Recruiting Campaign in Quebec

DETAILS NOT ARRANGED

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 13.—It is suggested here that Sir Wilfrid Laurier contemplates the following appeal in the Commons on bilingual question by a direct appeal to "The Heart of Ontario" at the close of the session.

It is stated he will hold a mass meeting in Massey Hall, Toronto and endeavor to justify in the eyes of the people of Ontario the stand which he has already taken. It is further stated that during the summer he will inaugurate a recruiting campaign in Quebec and will assail the efforts of Bourassa and Lavergne to hinder enlistment. No details have yet been fixed.

Mme. Emilia Bernabo With Creatore's Band

This Will Be One of the Greatest Musical Attractions That Has Appeared in Peterborough

The soprano who will sing with Creatore and his band on Friday evening next at the Grand was a society woman in Italy and the wife of a wealthy banker. When she discovered her voice she took up the study of cultivating same for love of music and the art of singing. Upon perfecting herself to an artist, her husband objected to a professional life, but allowed her to sing with professionals with different opera companies in Italy when the occasion was for charity and she became quite famous as an artist with a voice of rare quality and naturally her position in society was instrumental in drawing a large attendance from the social circle wherever she sang.

Reverses in business struck her husband and he brought his family to America and being a stranger in a strange land fortune did not smile on him at once and the plucky little woman realized she had to pitch in and assist supporting her two lovely children. Providence was with her as she was blessed with a magnificent voice well trained in a repertoire of operas and an attractive appearance. The market was open to her and she immediately joined an opera company and toured the country and made a fine impression wherever she sang until she finally gained a reputation, and she can now be proud of her professional life. Signor Creatore attending the opera "Lucia" at which she sang the stellar role recognized her brilliant work and decided that she would be an acquisition to his organization as soloist and engaged her to tour with his band for the past season. Don't miss the great attraction, proceeds for the benefit of the 93rd Battalion Fund.

SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1916

SUPERVISED PLAY GROUNDS.

The school holidays will soon be here, but the children will have no holidays, if they are compelled to play on the streets. The streets are the devil's school, and if children are playing in the streets they are having no holidays, they are still at school. Not that the truth—the streets are the devil's school—is to be taken literally, except the night streets for unchaperoned girls; and boys left free to their own devices. There is, however, possibility of much evil being developed and learned when boys and girls mix unwatched in street playing. Hence, the wisdom of supervised play grounds, the more the better, and well distributed, so that the children of all of the more crowded parts of the city may get the benefit of open space and clean, healthy, wholesome play. Money is needed to equip the King Edward school playgrounds and make them attractive—swings, gymnastic apparatus, sporting goods, ball; bats, tennis balls, raquettes, etc.; and there should be, one would think, a pavilion where the children can take shelter in case of rain—unless the school building can be used for that purpose. But the ladies in charge of the enterprise know what is needed, and what is needed most is funds. Everybody, especially everybody who has children, that are compelled to use the streets for playgrounds, should help. It will be worth a good deal to many a tired and manifold mother to know that her children are enjoying themselves in supervised play, safe from danger of street cars, horse vehicles and automobiles. And also safe (the little girls) from contamination with older children, especially boys, and small boys safe from the tyranny which boys practice as naturally as some grown men, when they have the strength and opportunity to bully the weak. This is a most worthy cause, most worthy of substantial help and moral encouragement.

MORALS GONE TO WASTE.

With the satisfactory experience the ladies of the Women's Patriotic League had with the collection of waste paper on Thursday, they had an experience of the prevalence of lawless instincts and disregard of property value by the children of the city. The benevolent citizens that tied up their old papers securely, and neatly, added to their public and patriotic spirit by thoughtfully placing them on the sidewalk or some such place for the convenience of the collectors. In a great many cases mischievous boys removed the string, and the forty-mile gale that raged that day, blew many of the papers in all directions and defeated the object and lessened the gaths of the ladies of the League. This seems a small matter, but it is the mark of a lamentable disregard on the part of youngsters of the rights of others, disregard of the value of property, a sign of the vandal spirit that possesses the Huns, whose "scrap of paper" morality the ladies were trying to fight with other scraps of paper. There are many reasons for this spirit—natural depravity born in us all, youthful high spirits and thoughtlessness, lack of home training, lack of school training, lack of church training, and above all, lack of supervised play grounds. If supervised playgrounds had been available these mischievous bad boys would probably have been there, instead of being distributed unnerously on all the streets of the city, without oversight or control, and without the occupation of appealing play which left them idle and open to the temptation to mischief which Satan finds for idle hands. This generation is lacking in good manners, lacking in respect for their elders and the rights of others, and the tendency is to grow up into men and women of predatory instincts, such as the man or woman that night before last plucked several of the tulip blooms that made a brave show in front of the residence of a Hunter street lady—as much of a delight to the eye of the passerby as a joy to the lady, who is noted for having a passion for flowers. We can't have a beautiful city—we can't have beauty of public places at its best, we can't have good citizenship, such as would come of the reign of the golden rule, while we have this spirit of vandalism, nascent and actual, manifesting itself so deplorably.

WORTH OF WASTE AND VALUE OF THIFT.

There are many persons who feel that they are of little use in the world, because they have no special talents; but everyone has some power for good, and collectively, persons with only a little talent, if they work together with a common object, can do very much.

How many householders in the city thought the waste papers, newspapers and others, in Peterborough had an avoirdupois of 23 tons — 46,000 pounds—and a money value of about $200. Yet that is what the energetic and optimistic and patriotic members of the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham realized from their appeal to the public for old papers. This illustrates one point of the pertinent appeal of this war time for thrift; illustrates the wickedness of waste.

Take the matter of waste—waste of waste paper. Those who never thought of the matter before would have sworn that 23 tons—300 dollars worth—of waste paper could not be collected in Peterborough in one day. That means over two pounds or a cent and a half for every head of the population of the city. At that rate, there could have been collected among the eight million people of Canada, if we had as clever women at the work as the ladies of the Ashburnham Patriotic League, sixteen million pounds, or 8,000 tons, of the commercial value of $120,000—a pretty good day's work. Of course, that could not be done every day, but it could be done, say ten times a year, every thirty-six days, if people saved their waste papers instead of burning them. What becomes of the millions of papers printed in Canada every day? In printing the over 5,000 copies of the Daily Examiner six days in the week, and the weekly edition there are used nearly 10,000 pounds—five tons—of paper. That means every thirty days 60 tons of paper that becomes waste paper. What becomes of it? If all the Examiner's printed and bought, not to speak of other papers, were, after reading, saved and tied up in bundles, the Ashburnham Patriotic League ladies could collect 23 tons every four days, or seventy-five times a year, or a money value of $25,875 This may be thought a fanciful calculation; it however, is not. The lesson it teaches is the value of thrift: in utilizing things that are regarded generally as waste, and, applied to all the articles in daily use, could be made of immense, economic national value.

BIRD PROTECTION.

The Canadian Society for the Protection of Birds, founded about a year and a half ago, is actively engaged in the promotion of bird protection throughout Canada. While national interest is naturally concentrated on patriotic endeavour along other lines, much has been done through lectures, addresses and social meetings to enlist public sympathy on behalf of the society's work. Thousands of copies of a very valuable report, "The Value of Birds to Man," have been issued.—Conservation.

There is big room for such an organization or its spirit in Peterborough. We have, not only wholesale destruction of bird life, but behind that a spirit of lawlessness, a spirit of destruction—of killing to satisfy the mere lust of killing. This morning a legal gentleman brought to this office, on his way to the taxidermist, the dead body of a bird that had been killed by some boys. It was the body of a high-holer, a well known and beautifully plumaged wood pecker, sometimes called the flicker, and known to ornithologists as the Colaptes auratus. The bird was nesting near his house and its death left its nest full of fidglings, doomed to the tortures of starvation. Isn't it sinful and shameful, that our boys are so athirst for killing. The sight of a bird or a squirrel to a band of boys on the way to school seems to arouse all the German in them. The whole lot pounce upon the poor little, defenceless thing, and assault it with stones and sticks, bound to kill. We see boys every day cocking their eyes into trees in search of birds' nests that they may destroy them — sometimes for the sake of the eggs—oftener for the mere sake of destruction. This is not only Hunnish, but a wrong to the community. Birds are the right hand help of the farmer, gardener and fruit grower. The birds destroy insect enemies, to an extent that justifies the assertion that if the bird life of the country were destroyed the country would starve. Whosoever destroys the life of insectivorous birds—and the most of our birds are that—is a public enemy and should be reprobated and punished as such. What an infinite deal of teaching there is needed in our homes, our schools and our churches, in order to implant in children's minds and hearts the cult of politeness, good manners, kindness and consideration for others — elementary constituents of the divine altruism that the Son of David brought to the world by precept, example and sacrifice.

ONTARIO'S RIGHTS TO NIAGARA RIVER WATER FOR POWER PRODUCTION

Protesting against the diversion of water from the Niagara rapids, as planned by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Secretary of State Lansing of the United States has written an official "note" to the British Government. He says that not more than 40,000 second-feet can be diverted from the rapids without damaging their scenic beauty, and that if is therefore important to come to an understanding regarding a diversion of even 6,500 second feet.

The Boundary Waters Treaty, which was ratified May 13th, 1910, by the United States and Canada, specifies that the United States can divert 20,000 cubic feet of water per second, and Canada 36,000 second-feet, from above Niagara Falls, for power purposes. Up to the present time, all the water that has been so diverted by the plants located at Niagara Falls, has been returned to the Niagara River above the rapids. But there is nothing in the treaty to specify just where the water is to be returned—whether above or below the rapids.

The Ontario Commission plan to divert about 6,500 second-feet from above the Falls, and to return the water (via a new channel) at a point near Queenston below the rapids. Now Secretary Lansing reads the words "and return the water below the Falls and above the rapids" into the treaty.

If the treaty can possibly be construed in the meaning taken by Secretary Lansing, then the United States itself is by far the more serious offender, and has clearly established a precedent for diversions such as Ontario proposes. Between fourteen and fifteen thousand second-feet are being diverted down the Mississippi by the Chicago Drainage Commission. This is water which is diverted "above the Falls" and which is certainly not returned to the Niagara River above the rapids. It is used "for power purposes" too—under 16-foot head.

Then there is the Erie Canal. The treaty permitted 500 second-feet to be diverted into the Hudson River, and that 500 second-feet is not returned above the rapids. Power is also developed with that water, and it is stated that more than 500 second-feet are now being illegally diverted for that canal. And, as a matter of fact, only 4,000 second-feet are permitted for the Chicago Drainage Canal according to the treaty, the other 10,000 second-feet now being illegally used.

Even in Canada there has been precedent for such diversion without "return above the rapids." About 1,000 second-feet are used by the Cataract Power Company for the Welland Canal power development at De Cew Falls.

Diplomatic correspondence will result for some months, probably, as a result of the United States note, but there is no doubt of the outcome. The Hydro Commission plant—which will develop 300,000 h.p.—will be built.

A larger plan than 300,000 h.p. cannot be built now because the existing Canadian companies own rights aggregating 29,300 second-feet, and the present treaty allotment specifies a total diversion of 36,000 second-feet. The Commission might at some time, perhaps, buy out one of the companies and so increase its plant to 600,000 h.p., which is the amount that will really be soon required. As reclusively reported in the December 9th, 1915, issue of The Canadian Engineer, an order-in-council apportions the volume that may be used by the companies as follows: Canada Niagara Power Co., 8,225 second-feet; Electrical Development Co., 9 985 second-feet; Ontario Power Co., 11,180 second-feet.

The United States has no grounds upon which to protest the Ontario Hydro's scheme, and after proper representations are made through the usual diplomatic channels, will undoubtedly gracefully acknowledge the error. Canada would have no objection to a diversion from the rapids of a similar amount by the United States provided that in so doing the United States does not exceed the 20,000 second-feet allotted by the treaty. There is no reason, however, why the United States should ask Canada for an additional 6,500 second-feet allotment as the price of consent.—Canadian Engineer.

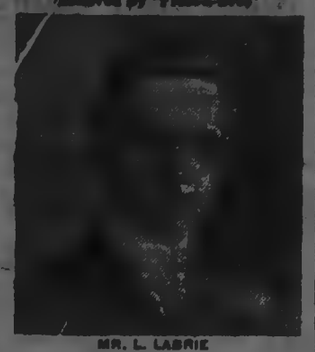
TOOK THE ADVICE OF HIS FRIEND

Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism Relieved by "Fruit-a-tives"



MR. L. LABRIE

594 Champlain St., Montreal.

"I have been restored to health by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I became very weak, had frequent dizzy spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints and my hands swollen.

A friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and from the outset, they did me good. After I had started the second box, I felt I was getting well and I persevered in the treatment. I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that helped me.

ARRAIGNS "BEJEWELLED WOMEN" WHO CODDLE DOGS, NOT BABIES, IN WARTIME

LONDON, May 11.—Denouncing childless women, "befurred and bejewelled," who coddle pet dogs in war time, Rev. Bernard Vaughan, Catholic author and lecturer, declared in a speech at the Mansion House:

"The cry 'Back to the Land' is not so important as 'Back to the Home.'

"The cradle is empty and the church bench is empty. The church bench is empty because the cradle is empty.

"When I was a boy the birth rate was 37 to 40; to-day we have dropped to 19.8 per 1,000 population.

"We are a nation travelling to the cemetery. Never was the marriage rate so high; never the birth rate so low, and that at a time when the cry is to replace the men we are losing.

"It is not the men, munitions or money we want. It is the mother we need to-day and shall need more and

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

Very many thanks to all the friends who have been so kind as to commend-ing this column; some is more keenly aware of its imperfections than the writer of it, but the old adage says, "Practice makes perfect," and so we are hopeful that as the weeks roll by our readers will be able to endorse the old precept. But meanwhile, thank you very much.

During the month of April the local Society forwarded 64 packages of surgical dressings, and the following garments:

95 night shirts.
252 pairs socks.
40 day shirts.
336 triangular bandages.
168 sheets.
547 crash towels.
459 Turkish towel, making (17 cases in all.)

One miscellaneous box, containing:
300 bandages.
3500 mouth wipes.
14 hot water bottle covers.
14 sing pillows.
2 pairs bed spreads.
5 pairs bed shoes.

1 box adhesive plaster and 1 parcel containing:
2 feather pillows.
8 ring pillows.
1 pair bed shoes.
9 Canton flannel bandages, soft rolled.

The Packing Committee, of which Miss Flora Davidson is convenor, is a committee which does a lot of hard work and does it very quietly. Every Wednesday morning you will find Miss Davidson and her assistants down in the basement of the Public Library, hard at it, for it is heavy and tiring work, but this committee believes in not wearying in well doing.

The attendance at the work room is a good deal better, but there is still room for improvement. Formerly, when first opened, there would be about 91 present on Monday afternoon and 78 on Tuesday evening, and it pains us to acknowledge that the attendance fell to 24 and 28, but the improvement throughout must be sustained and still further increased.

In view of the following cable sent by Lt.-Col. Noel Marshall, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Canadian Red Cross in Toronto (who by the way has just been presented with the insignia of the Knight of Grace of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in recognition of his great services to the Canadian Red Cross) to Colonel Hodgetts, our Commissioner in London:

"We are informed there is desperate want in Paris for surgical dressings of all kinds. Claims made that Verdun affair has created enormous demands. Meeting of the executive unanimously requested me to-day to cable you requesting that you forward five thousand cases as soon as possible to France for distribution. Committee strongly desire every possible assistance be given to the French."

"Marshall."

Is Peterboro going to lag behind in its supplies? The thousands of husbands, sons, brothers and sweethearts of the women in France, who have given their lives in the frightful struggle for Verdun, gave them also for us, and for humanity as a whole—and so we must do our part.

Toronto has received some complaints as to the quality of the goods being shipped, especially of the socks. We cannot do better than reprint what has been said in the official bulletin in respect to this matter:

We ask all our workers throughout the Dominion to remember that socks which are badly knitted are really useless. We would also ask all heads of committees and societies to watch carefully the socks sent in by members and to refuse to send forward those which have hard seams in them, especially at the heel and toe, or which are hard and rough to the feet, or which are obviously too large or too small or too misshapen for any normal soldier to wear.

We would also draw the attention of workers to the fact that it is useless to send forward large quantities of supplies made up of very poor materials. We have had some shirts, for instance, sent in to the society of such wretched material that they are really useless.

We are afraid that in some places there is more anxiety to send forward large quantities for the sake of appearing well in reports than to consider than to consider what would be the feelings of a patient if he were asked to wear the garments sent. We call upon all workers to remember that the object of the Red Cross is not to provide materials for working parties and to occupy the time of the workers but to provide garments that are really suitable for sick men to wear. Moreover as our transportation is limited we cannot send forward goods which take up space in the ships and which are not of any use when they arrive at the hospitals.

Surgical supplies made of anything but hospital gauze, absorbent cotton and non-absorbent cotton, are useless, and not worth the carriage or time of makers. We do not want ordinary bandages except a very small number, which should be made only by men and boys and persons who cannot make other supplies.

We are quickly approaching the time when for lack of space on the ships we shall be obliged to return to the senders supplies of goods which are not of the right kind or of sufficiently good quality to warrant our forwarding them to England, as we do not care to incur the responsibility of disposing of them on this side of the water.

One feels proud to realise that all supplies and garments forwarded by the Peterboro Red Cross have always been made of the very best materials. Miss Marion Rush, the convenor, has always stood for quality.

So much discussion has taken place regarding the using of cotton warp in the knitting of socks that we append the official announcement regarding its use:

The Head Office of the Canadian Red Cross Society issues the following information and instructions with regard to the use of cotton warp in knitting socks. These directions have been very carefully prepared and have been thoroughly tested. The socks made according to these directions have been worn by men on the march and then thoroughly washed, and have proved satisfactory. Those who knit these socks are strongly advised to follow these directions carefully and not to substitute other kinds of cotton or other sizes of needles and yarn.

Materials required: No. 13 needle 4 ply Scotch fingering (grey), about 4 ounces; four-eighths grey cotton warp 3 ply: cast on 64 stitches.

Rib for one inch (two and two if possible.)

Break off cotton and knit woollen yarn for 1 1-2 inches (this is to make the "cuff" elastic; join the cotton again and rib for 1 1-2 inches; knit cotton warp plain for 4 1-2 inches; break off cotton and start knitting plain again with wool, and continue for 3 1-2 inches, which will finish the leg; finish the ankle and foot in wool in the usual manner.

It is reported from Paris that over 1,000,000 wounded men had been cared for by the Red Cross and allied relief societies of France up until a few weeks ago. There are 500,000 beds in the French hospitals, and the cost of maintenance of the hospitals is 1,000,000 francs or $300,000 daily.

All together since the beginning of the war about 80,000,000 francs or $16,000,000, had been spent in France in relief work by the three branches of the French Red Cross, which are maintaining 118,000 beds in 1,800 hospitals at an outlay of nearly 5,000,000 monthly.

The following is an extract from a letter written by a private of the 48th Highlanders in Germany to his father in Toronto. The Germans do seem in the matter of the parcels to prisoners of war, to have retained their sense of honor, for the boys get them intact and regularly."

"In one of my letters I mentioned having written to have 10s a month given to the Red Cross out of my pay as the paymaster suggested. I think it is much better to do it that way than as I suggested last fall. Their parcels come through very regularly, every second week, and they have been very good to me indeed, sending me both clothes and provisions right along since last August. In fact I have to thank them for almost everything I have had, and am unable to find words to express my gratitude to them. So I think it is the least I can do to help defray expenses to them, even in this small way. The only things they don't send me is tea and tobacco, things which are very acceptable here, so I shall impose on your good nature to ask you to send me some now and again. But you must not worry over me. I am doing pretty well so far. A lady in Surrey sends me bread through the Prisoners of War at Berne, now, and Miss McTavish, Red Cross at Paris, sends me a nice parcel every two weeks as well, so I am not doing so badly, you see."

Doctor Says:---Iron Will Make You 200% Stronger In Ten Days

Ordinary Ironized Phosphorus and Iron Soothes your Nerves, Makes Rich, Red Blood, Makes Rosy Cheeks, and Generally Builds You Up.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Gauer, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron, and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood as cannot loose the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food simply passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation people become generally weakened, nervous, and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at nights; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless; but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vitality for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Ironized Phosphorus with iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous and run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Ironized Phosphorus with Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—Ironized Phosphorus with Iron, recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that one tablet of this newer form of iron is worth a whole bottle of some medicines. It is dispensed in this city by F. G. Weber's two stores at 30 cents a box.

Overland SIX

An exceptional car —built to meet an exacting demand

The six cylinder motor— in its perfected state is the engineer's answer to the demand of the automobile enthusiast —the extremist if you will.

The perfected six cylinder motor is capable of a faster pick-up and a smoother flow of power than is possible in a four.

But not all sixes are superior to all fours.

We build fours that are superior to many sixes.

And our only purpose in building a six is to satisfy with Overland finality that extremist demand for well nigh miraculous motor performance.

The Overland Six is a big, roomy, luxurious, seven passenger car with a motor of unusual power, smoothness and flexibility.

But the price is only $1600—much lower than any other car of its size and class.

In fact Overland production is easily double that of any other builder of cars of like class.

So in buying the Overland Six you not only secure a car of very unusual performance—

But you get the advantage of the economies possible only in the production of cars on so vast a scale.

While the prices of other sixes are advancing, and those recently announced are on a higher price level, the Overland price remains at $1600.

It is so clearly dominant value among sixes of its size and class, that the demand is taxing even our large capacity.

Today is an Overland Six opportunity which can hardly last.

See us now and book your order.

Collecting June Bugs For Cattle Fodder

Germany Has Discovered They Make an Excellent Feed.

COPENHAGEN, via London, May 13.—The Ekstrabladet's frontier correspondent says the Germans are now painting the clothes of Russian prisoners engaged in work in the field with broad, canary coloured stripes to prevent escapes which recently have extended to such proportions.

The Keil Zeitung's Vienna correspondent says the Austrian fodder committee has offered to pay one kroner per gilo for dried June bugs, to be used for cattle fodder. These insects, the correspondent says, are said to be excellent fodder, tests showing that they contain 39 per cent albumen and 52 per cent starch. The Minister of Education has sent a circular to the schools throughout the Empire asking the children to volunteer to collect these insects.

WOLF CHUMMY WITH DOG.

Wild Animal's Friendship For Russian Hound Results in Capture.

A timber wolf recently ran about the streets of Owassa, Mich., in company with a Russian wolfhound. No one recognized the wolf as an animal not commonly found in civilized communities, although the animal appeared on the principal streets for several days.

It was taken for a dog until the local papers reported the escape of the animal from a cage at the home of William Seagel, at Durand. The wolf was coaxed back to its cage by catching the dog and leading it into the inclosure.

To-Night

We will have a Special Exhibition in our Show Windows of the Newest Summer Wear-Things for Women, Misses and Children as shown in New York to-day

This exhibition embodies the very life and spirit of Summer. The crisp newness of the materials and styles, the light airy daintiness of the patterns, the delicate Summer-like hues and colourings all combine to make this display irresistably attractive and worthy of the deep interest it is certain to excite.

One point that we wish to emphasize is the fact that our prices are quite moderate and are based on the same straight forward system in force throughout our entire store, at all times, even though the styles are the newest turned out by the best designers in Canada and America and exclusive to this store in Peterborough.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

MISS HILL LOANED $475 TO GARNSEY WITHOUT SECURITY

And Bought Hay and Grain Without Estimating Its Value — She Thought It Would Bring $500 —Kept Her Money in Trunk at Home.

The Garnsey $4,000 damages action adjourned last night at 10:10 o'clock with the conclusion of the examination of Mrs. Garnsey. This morning Miss Catherine Hill recounted her finacial interest in Garnsey's affairs. She met the family when they first moved into Dummer in the spring of 1914. In September of that year she loaned Garnsey $300, and in January, 1915, she advanced him an additional $275. Witness told Mr. O'Connell that she had received neither security, nor acknowledgement of the loans in any form. Her father owned and worked a 200-acre farm; her mother died in 1914, leaving the witness 100 acres and household furniture. She had not been left any money, but her mother had previously given her $375, and she had earned other money working at home, selling eggs and by similar methods. She kept this money locked in a trunk at home. After advancing the $275 to Garnsey witness had about $40 to $50 remaining in the trunk.

In August of 1915 Miss Hill went to Garnsey's to get security on her $475. She had heard about the seizure of first team. At Mr. Moore's office she was told that the chattel mortgage was no good, and Mrs. Samson had accepted judgment instead. Witness said that when she asked for security from Garnsey, he offered to sell her his crops if she would give him another $25. He valued the crops at $500. Witness paid over the $25 in Mr. Moore's office. She had $19 in her pocket and drew $6 from the Union Bank. Mr. O'Connell endeavoured to learn how much money Miss Hill had deposited in the bank and when, but she said she didn't know how much it was.

Miss Hill stated that she did not estimate what the oats, barley and hay were worth, but she thought they would be worth $900.

"I know I would have come out all right if you hadn't sent down them men," she snapped at Mr. O'Connell.

"Whether the crop produced little or much, the debt was settled?"

"Yes." Witness repeated the reference about the seizure.

"That's three times you have told us that. Please don't repeat it again," exclaimed Mr. O'Connell.

"Why did you not deliver them?"

"Because when I came from town you and Mr. Wedlock were there taking them away."

Witness said she had spent most of the winter living with the Garnseys looking after her own affairs, her grain interests.

Cheques presented by Mr. O'Connell showed that two of those issued by Mr. Wedlock for hay and oats he had bought were made payable to Garnsey. Witness declared that she had arranged for him to get the money, and he had turned it over to her.

Witness was cross-examined by Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Kerr and Mr. B. D. Hall, and had concluded her testimony at 12:40, having begun at 10 o'clock. The case is proceeding.

ANNIVERSARY OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The Rev. Wm. Patterson, D.D., of Toronto, will preach the anniversary services of St. Paul's Church tomorrow. Dr. Patterson became famous years ago in the city of Toronto by building up in Cooke's Church what was for years the largest Presbyterian congregation in Canada. Sixteen years ago he went to Philadelphia as pastor in chief of the famous Bethany Presbyterian Church, whose Sunday School, with Hon. John Wanamaker as superintendent, was at one time the largest in the world. Then he was called to May Street Church, Belfast, of which the celebrated Henry Cooke was minister in his day. Two years ago he returned to the church of his first love, Cooke's Church, Toronto, and under his ministry the church is as prosperous almost as in the early days of his pastorate there. Dr. Patterson will preach at both services, and will lecture on the Monday evening on "The British Empire in the Light of Prophecy." In view of a possible re-arrangement of the map of Europe at the close of the war, this might prove an interesting subject.

REV. DR. PATTERSON

The South End Red Cross Society

The following are the list of things shipped from the South-End Red Cross Society for the month of April, 1916:

33 pair socks, 14 ring pillows, 5 doz. towels, 22 night shirts, 8 pair slippers, 23 many-tailed bandages, 215 face cloths, 600 mouth wipes, 212 compresses, 306 swabs.

"KEY TO THE WAR" IS FOUND

Paris, May 13.—Senator Berenger, writing in to-day Matin, says that "the key to the war lies in the possession of the Briey Valley, between Verdun and Metz. Since the war began," he said, "France having lost the Briey basin, has been obliged to import almost all the iron required from England and America, while Germany having occupied the whole Briey Valley is able to add 21,000,000 tons to her own annual output. This explains the audidity of the Germans at Verdun. They want to capture the fortress so as to effectually prevent the French from attacking Metz.

"In a confidential memorandum addressed to Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg on conditions of future peace by German industrial and agricultural association on May 20, 1915, the following passage occurred: "If the production of iron has not doubled since Aug., 1914, the continuation of the war would have been impossible. The region now produces 60 to 80 per cent. of our iron and steel, and if that production was hampered the war would be practically lost."

Hon. Col. J. Wesley Allison was then called to stand. He stated that after a conference with representatives of the British War Office in New York, he had telephoned to General MacDonald, and found out on that occasion that there was some defective ammunition in Canada.

"Were you agent for the Vickers people?" asked Capt Thompson.

"I can't say that," said witness. "I was called on to do a great deal of work for Vickers representative and representative of the War Office."

"What did you get out of this?"

"Not a cent."

"Why did the Vickers representative not buy directly instead of appointing an agent?"

"I don't know."

Witness said he did not know what was the ultimate destination of the ammunition.

The Commission adjourned.

"The Princess Pat"

"The Princess Pat," Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert's latest decisive musical success, is to be presented at the Grand Opera House, Thursday evening, May 25th.

All through the operetta there is a pagent atmosphere of holiday, melody and fun, the love interest including a flirtation between a pretty young wife, "The Princess Pat," and a gay old boy, "Anthony Olsen," the intrigue being a condable effort on the part of the Princess Pat to prevent her friend Grace Holbrook from being married to the "Old Boy," and at the same time to bring her husband to her feet again by arousing his jealousy.

Out of this situation the comedy runs through the entire operetta in polite and characteristic humour, which belongs to the environment, and the story evility evolved by Henry Blossom.

Two of the scenes of "The Princess Pat" take place in a fashionable country home on Long Island and the third in the smoking room of the Westmoreland Hunt Club.

Mr. Herbert has provided a score of pleasant melodies, the real lyrics being, "Love is Best of All," "Make Him Guess," "For Better or for Worse," and "Two Laughing Irish Eyes."

The operetta, which will be presented here under the direction of Mr. John Cort, will have the following excellent cast: Charlotte Le Grande, Georgio Sregario, Effie Toye, Philip H. Ryley, Earl Benham, Oscar Feyman, Tots Marks, Edward Metcalf, Francis Bryan and Ben Hendricks and Henry Vincent. There will be a beauty chorus that can sing and an augmented Herbert orchestra.

Housewife—"It seems to me that your pint of milk is very small." Milkman—"My cows are of the small kind, mum!"

THE HOUSE OF LOADER PROVIDED PROGRAMME

Loader talent delighted the large audience that attended the patriotic concert at Mark Street Church last night under the joint auspices of the church and the East City Red Cross. Colonel Johnston presided, and Mrs. W. R. Morris gave an address on Red Cross work. The Loader family provided a varied and interesting programme of instrumental, vocal and reading numbers.

EDISON RECITAL MUCH ENJOYED

Quite a large number of music lovers enjoyed the programme on the Edison diamond disc at the J. M. Greene Studio last evening. The several numbers were of the highest order of merit and by the leading artists of the day. These concerts are a source of great pleasure to many people and provide the finest music obtainable in no other way.

MOTHERS' DAY

To-day a snow-white flower we wear
In memory of the loving care
That blessed our earliest years;
Hushed us at eve to sweet repose,
Soothed all our childish fears and woes—
And kissed away our tears.

Nursed us in sickness, clothed and fed,
And taught our faltering feet to tread
In wisdom's narrow way.
What filial gratitude and love
Can worthy such devotion prove,
Such tender care repay?

Though fate may frown, and friends be few,
Her heart is ever leal and true,
Through good report or ill;
The same in fortune's sunny smile,
Want, sorrow, dark disgrace or guile—
Unselfish, faithful still.

On the bright lustrous roll of fame,
May glorious shine the warrior's name
Who follows victory's lead,
But holier, sweeter triumph far
Than fairest laurels won in war,
A noble mother's meed.

Emblem of truth and purity,
High honour, stainless chivalry,
Our mother's proud bequest,
Thy tribute, fragrant blossom bear,
To mother and their name declare,
Revered and ever blest.

May we still follow day by day,
The path that leads no foot astray,
By saintly mothers trod,
Though steep and straight it safe ascends
To calm and life that never ends,
'Twill guide us, and to God.

PAYS FOR STOLEN LEMON

West Virginian Receives $3 Fod Theft 15 Years Ago.

Applying the Biblical injunction to restore fourfold and adding interest of 6 per cent., a man who does not sign his name sent to Ben M. Robertson, a merchant at Clendenin W., Va., $3 for a watermelon stolen fifteen years ago, the price of which was 15 cents.

"This account," the writer of the letter says, "is for a melon which was taken from your store without being paid for, though I did not take it myself. But the plot was worked up in my presence and I said nothing against it; in fact, I rather encouraged it and also helped to eat the melon, so you see I am just as guilty as the other fellow.

"I have no more accounts of this kind to settle and will feel good when I learn that you folk are all satisfied. I have aimed to add interest and use the old-time method—restore fourfold.

"If I thought this would be published in a newspaper I would send along some advice to readers who might be guilty of things equally as great as this watermelon affair."

She—"I suppose you would have been happier if you had not married me?" He—Yes, darling, but I wouldn't have known it."

Irish Trouble Was of German Origin

nd Winston Churchill, how definitely returned to political life went further by an elaborate appeal to Mr. edmond and Sir Edward Carson to oe their enormous power over their arties to find a common ground.

Concentrated on Dublin.

At the present moment attention is concentrated on Dublin. Feeling uns so strong on the executions, hat it is impossible to enter into negotiations. As the tragic incidents fade the impulse toward a harmonious settlement will be renewed. may lead to remarkable results. presence in London of many ial representatives may help. all plead earnestly for the immediate tackling of the question of rial federation and admission of colonies to the Imperial Parliament. This involves federation with Parliaments created for the ish Isles.

Feeling More Sanguine.

ne except for the bitter sorrow-feeling produced by the execuo the feeling in regard to the se of Home Rule is more sanguine than last week. The Irish Parliament is determined meanwhile, to put issue squarely before the people Ireland whether they want the stitutionalist movement of the Party, and whether they will p out the whole campaign of any carried on against them by many agencies. There is no doubt the answer Ireland will give. ver before in Irish opinion, as reted by members from all parts of land, did the people receive nger proof that in the Constitutionalist movement alone has Ireland hope of a full victory.

The Financial Situation.

ngland's financial situation following the war, is the subject of h thought and discussion among statesmen. She is bearing the ens not only of her own enormous armaments, but is sharing those her poorer sisters of the coalition nst Teutonic oppression. Money indemnity is not among the gains that can be counted upon in this war of exhaustion. Germany and her consorts will be scarcely able, though conquered to-morrow, to undertake the payment of any large indemnity in money. Turkey might be expected to yield territory, but it is territory long impoverished by the rapacity of her own tax gatherers, from whom her subjects flee as from the plague. It would be long before such territory would become self-sustaining, leaving out the question of repayment for the one who takes over the responsibilty of its management.

To deal in any large way with the billions involved in the principal of the great debt that is accumulating with every shot fired, every ship loaded or sunk is out of consideration at this time, and may be for a generation to come, but the interest is to be met in the same spirit of determination with which the nation is meeting its even more grave and vast moral responsibilities. At the best we can expect an addition equal to $10,000,000,000 in American money to our enormous liabilities. In addition ther are large sums in the way of annuities or pensions to crippled heroes to be paid for a period of years after the end of the conflict. A further loan has been suggested to cover this particular debt of the nation to the men who are sacrificed for it.

Conscription of Cash.

It has been questioned whether the pocket book of the country will withstand the strain of further compulsory conscription of cash in the form of the income tax which has reached a point which many declare to be its limit. Many reasons are advanced against any extremely heavy taxation until the nation has had time to recover from the first crippling effects of the war. The class that will be most affected by a further advance in the heavy income tax are those least able to compensate for it—those in receipt of a fixed income which they depend for protection against poverty in old age. In business, however, it has been urged there will be a certain tendency to aid the income tax to the cost of manufacture or of distribution. So that an advance in prices may be expected if the income tax is made burdensome. In addition if capital is rendered unprofitable in England, we may expect to see it finding an outlet in distant lands where the raw material is grown and where the cheap labour of the east is available.

Opponents of higher customs duties as a source of revenue urge that they would seriously burden the poorest in this country who have already suffered through the fluctuations of the open market and that this indirect taxation as surely means a rise in prices as an income tax.

More Radical Suggestions.

Other and even more radical suggestions that are receiving consideration is one that would introduce conscription of corporations and their property in the service of the state. The successful ownership and operation of railways and mines by many European governments is receiving more attention among public men at this time than ever before in the history of England. It is urged by the pleaders for state ownership and operation that it would involve nothing revolutionary. The brains employed in the management of the railways, mines and canals, it is argued, would still be required. Sir Joseph Compton-Rickett, M.P., one of the foremost advocates of this measure, suggests that the financing of it would be a simple matter. The shareholders, he says, would receive government bonds at a fixed rate of interest at a price corresponding to their relative claims. The balance of profit, largely increased by concentration, would follow the profits of the post office into the income of the country. He would apply this government monopoly not only to the transportation systems, but to the great coal production of South Wales, where the fuel output has advantages possessed by no other by its great concentration of power into small space. It is needed by English industry and English warships, but the surplus could be disposed of to great profit by the government it is urged.

The armament works are another field that could be profitably worked by the government, in the opinion of Sir Joseph and others. They would have the government buy its warships from itself and build its own guns and manufacture all its own ammunition, as well as the supplies for its army and navy. They go still further in the suggestion that following the example of Russia and one of the American states, there should be a government monopoly of the liquor traffic. It is doubtful if any step will be taken toward the realization of these aims while the all absorbing effort of the war is upon us, but its close must see great changes in our system of government.

Hotelmen Expect That Bar Tax Will Come Off

Places in District Notified That Government Has Repealed Act.

Local hotelmen expect that the 5 per cent tax imposed some time ago on all bar receipts will be taken off by the Government. In some places hotelmen have already been notified that this will be done.

Owing to the prohibition law which will soon go into effect in the province, it has been decided to repeal the other law, it is stated.

In the past hotelmen have been required to pay over 5 per cent of all money taken in over the bar to the license inspector. Affidavits as to the accuracy of receipts as reported were required from all licensees.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses as the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. The use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

Another Chapter From Leamon Garnsey's Story of Seizures Under a Chattel Mortgage

In His Evidence Supporting the $2000 Damages Action for Illegal Trespass and Seizure—Story of Grain Seizure and What Came of It.

GARNSEY HAD AGREED TO LITTLE

Whatever his previous experiences may have been, Leamon Garnsey developed a considerable acquaintance last summer with officials, and their agents of that branch of the law that seizes the chattels of mortgage debtors. This Belmont-Otonabee farmer was with his wife, Phila A. Garnsey, and Miss Catherine Hill, plaintiff in an action for $2,000 against W. J. Hancock, C. A. Beatty, S. T. Wedlock and Mrs Clarissa Samson before Judge Huycke yesterday on a charge of illegal trespass and seizure. In the morning session of the court Garnsey gave details of certain seisures on several occasions up to midsummer of 1915, and in the afternoon he continued his story under examination by his counsel. County Magistrate O. A. Langley. Early in September representatives of the law arrived at his home but returned to the city without executing any grand they may have been commissioned to fulfil.

However on September 15th a numerous party including Mr. W. J. Hancock and detectives Newhall and Meagher with other camp followers returned at the Garnsey home, Lot 27, Con. 6, Otonabee. Five of the visitors had made the journey in an automobile. Three or four wagons completed the caravan.

"I was cutting peas" Garnsey testified, "Mr. Hancock said he had come to remove the stuff off the place. I showed him a chattel mortgage and forbade him to touch anything, Mr. Newhall said they had come to commit a breach of the law and would do it and they were prepared to arrest anyone who tried to prevent them."

Mr. Garnsey's recollection or detective Newhall's statement amused the lawyers. He persisted in his remembrance even in cross examination by Mr. O'Connell who suggested that the detective had said they had come to take possession though it were a breach of the law.

Took Team of Horses.

Continuing witness said—"I went to take the team out of the barn to work but Hancock and Newhall stepped in and took them away with their harness on them. They took some cattle from several fields. The granary door was locked Newhall ordered me to take off the lock. I came in to Peterborough with Mr. Hancock to see Mr. Langley and when I got back the lock was off the granary door. Fifty-one bags of barley were filled up, put in the waggons and taken away. Mr. Hancock seemed to be the man in charge.

At this stage Mr. F. D. Kerr, counsel for Mr. Hancock, put in the warrant under which his client had acted.

"No paper was given to me" continued Garnsey, "except a statement of the number of bags taken. Mr. Hancock said the seizure was under a chatted mortgage. On our way back from Peterborough we met several men driving the horses and cattle Mr. Hancock ordered them to go back with the cattle but to take the horses on to Peterborough. They were a team of black horses."

At the morning session witness told of the seizure on June 2nd of a roan and grey team, their retention in Munroe's stable for a week and subsequent sale for $69 although when they were seised he valued them at $250.

Had to Hire Work Team

Proceeding with his chequered tale, Garnsey said—"I did all my farming with the black team. I said that they had better take them back for they were the only ones I had to work with. Mr. Hancock said Mr. O'Connell had instructed him to bring in the team.

When we got backk home Hancock and his men filled up 51 bags of barley without weighing them. They had the waggons loaded up just at dark.

They took away six cows, two small cattle and five or six calves. Some of them belonged to my wife, one to Tom Hill and the rest I had on shares with another man.

How Horses Came Back.

The horses were kept in Peterborough fifty-two days. I got them back in November. I had to hire horses to do the work I had to do.

The team was in good condition when they were taken away. They were only skin and bones when I got them again."

Another Seizure

So much for the seizure on Sept. 15th. Two days later another one was provided for this "movie series" Garnsey said he had been to Peterborough and on returning home found a number of men in the yard. They had taken two loads of grain and two loads of hay, and there were other waggons to be loaded. Witness learned that the men in charge of this affair was S. T. Wedlock. There were seven men from Peterborough with him.

"I didn't know who he was" said Garnsey, "and I asked him what he was doing in my yard. I asked him what authority he had. He said he had authority from Mr. O'Connell on a chattel mortgage."

Mr. O'Connell was solicitor for Mrs Clarissa Sampson who had a judgment against Garnsey for $292.69.

In the morning evidence witness said he had sold certain grain to Miss Hill.

"Miss Hill produced the bill of sale. Wedlock looked it over. I told him this chattel mortgage had been set aside by a judgment. I offered to bet $50 I could prove it. Wedlock said to Samson that sounded fair and to take me up.

Samson said he didn't want to come in to town. Wedlock said to Samson 'you're a damned old crook' Wedlock phoned to Mr. O'Connell and said he was to leave the hay and bring the grain.

So they took away two loads of grain. Wedlock bought the hay from Miss Hill at $17 a ton."

Garnsey related how one load of hay had been upset in the yard and scattered all about. It had to be reloaded and taken into the barn, considerable of it being lost in the mess.

"Wedlock had corralled in the yard pigs and horses from a field and stable.

"These were not removed, but they were let go into a field and Garnsey and Robert Hill had to put them back to their former places.

"One way or another I lost the whole fall."

Grain Unmeasured.

Mr. Langley—Was the grain measured?

Witness said the grain belonged to Catherine Hill.

Next morning while on the way to Peterborough witness observed a trail of barley all along the road where it had trickled from a bag.

To Mr. Langley witness said he regarded the team as "exempt" from seizure. Mr. Hall had taken them once ,but they were returned to Garnsey.

Refused This Offer.

Continuing witness said: "Several days later, Mr. Hancock 'phoned to me to come in to Peterborough. He took me to a stable where the team was kept. He showed me the horses and told me to take them. I saw Mr. Langley and he told me not to take them unless they were handed over to me."

Did he deliver them to you on the road or on your premises?

No.

Grain For Sale.

Mr. Langley produced an advertising bill announcing the sale on the market by auction of 170 bus. of oats, 92 1-2 bus. of barley and one black team. Mr. Thornton the auctioneer, didn't think he had a right to sell them and the sale was postponed.

Mr. O'Connell put in as an exhibit a letter from Mr. Langley to Mr. Thornton in which the latter was informed he would be liable to damages if he auctioned the grain and horses.

Shortly afterwards Mr. Thornton received a letter from Mr. O'Connell calling upon him to sell the articles as he had agreed. A second bill announcing the sale for Oct. 30 was hung up, but in the meantime the team had run up a bill for $69 at Spenceley's barn. In some way or other the second sale fell through and Garnsey said he got back what was left of the horses, harness and grain.

"The pads were off the collars of the harness" he said, and the team was in such a condition that it took between three and four hours to drive them the ten miles home. The oats were sold to Mr. Wedlock and the cheque in payment was made out to Miss Hill. Mice had chewed into the oat bags and the grain was strewn around on the loft floor where it had been stored.

Lost the Empty Bags.

"Twenty-six or thirty bags taken by Mr. Hancock belonged to me, but I never got them bak."

Mr. Langley—What price did Miss never got them back."

Garnsey—Thirty-five cents a bushel.

When the grain was seised on Sept. 17th oats were worth from 40 to 50 cents.

"She was offered 40 cents a bus. by a buyer from the Campbell Milling Co.

Garnsey said Miss Hill had received 50 cents a bus. for 26 bus. of barley. It was worth 60 cents a bushel when seised.

"I took one "jack" of barley to the brewery for Miss Hill and it brought 60 cents. They said at the brewery they'd give that price for all of it."

Afterwards when I drew the barley from Spenceley's to the brewery it brought only 50 cents. Six or seven bags were all hewed up by mice at Spenceley's and the grain was strewn around. There was a large loss but I can't say how much.

Returning to the seizure by Beattie on Sept. 2nd witness said his wife, not a strong woman at any time, was considerably affected by the visits of the "seizuriats." She worried a great deal.

Judge Huycke—Did she call a doctor.

Mr. Kerr—No, a lawyer.

Mr. O'Connell objected that mental worry was not a matter for legal damages.

Witness did not desire to follow up this point.

Had Made No Payment.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said his difficulties had their beginning in the mortgage he gave. Mr. C. W. Turner in 1910 for a loan of $200. He had not paid off any part of the sum but merely the interest and renewals.

Mr. Turner finally made a chattel mortgage seizure and assigned the mortgage to Mrs. Samson. Garnsey was then a tenant of hers. She seized on his goods for rent and Garnsey entered action. It was a case of counter claims and on April 20th, 1915, judgment was entered for a net sum of $292.69 in Mrs. Samson's favour. This was an amended judgment following the judge's consideration of the application of the moratorium law to an item of $200. Witness said he knew he was indebted to Mrs. Samson for $92.69, but had not attempted to pay it because Samson had half his goods locked up in the Dummer house. He was then living in Otonabee and it was to that place the Sheriff made his first trip on June 2nd.

Garnsey insisted that he did not know of the Judge's final finding.

The lawyer acting for him at that time had not notified him, he said, and it was not until the fall that Mr. Langley had discovered it. Mr. O'Connell pointed out that witness knew of the total amount of the chattel mortgage early in the summer.

Garnsey admitted that when Deputy Sheriff Hall had made his first seizure and Mrs. Garnsey had made a claim for her belongings this claim covered all the items seised and some of them belonged to himself. His own goods seised, he said, might have been worth $500 or $1,000. When Mr. O'Connell enumerated the original chattels on the mortgage witness said one horse was dead, harness worn out and there was other depreciations.

Agreed to Settle.

Mr. O'Connel next asked about an alleged agreement to settle with Mrs. Sampson after the sheriff made the seizure on June 2nd. An exhibit was presented signed by Garnsey by which the latter agreed to hold goods and to deliver them on demand. Finally on July 16th the gray and roan team were seised for the $292.69 mortgage.

Garnsey admitted that there were certain negotiations with Mrs. Samson. He had entered an action for slander against her and pending that action. Mrs. Samson had consented to an agreement. Garnsey's lawyer allowed the slander action to lapse, but Mrs. Samson's agreement was not concluded. Witness said the negotiations were going on until the horses were seised on July 16th.

"And the team brought "$69" witness added.

From that time he had been paying $2 a week to Mr. Hill for the rent of the team when the latter bought them at the auction. Mr. Hill had no use for them himself. He was not a farmer.

When Mr. O'Connell asked why Hill had bought them, Garnsey replied that they might have been a speculation. He considered $2 a week a fair rental for his use of the team.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

The ailments of childhood are many but most of them are caused by some derangement of the stomach and bowels. Therefore to banish these troubles the stomach must be kept sweet and the bowels regular. To do this nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. Thousands of mothers have proved this. Among them is Mrs. Thomas Holmes, Blissfield, N.B., who writes: "Every mother in this locality uses Baby's Own Tablets as we all consider them the very best medicine for childhood ailments." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail, at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

POWER PLANT A GOING CONCERN

City of Peterboro' Must Take Company's Property Over as a Going Concern, Without Paying Profits

As stated in yesterday's issue the Appellate Division has dismissed the appeal of the City of Peterborough from the decision of Mr. Justice Britton, upholding the award of the arbitrators who fixed at $184,618, the amount to be paid by the city for the plant of the Peterborough Light & Power Co., Limited, which the city took over. The application by the city to examine the arbitrators as to their award is also dismissed.

The city contended that the payment for the poles, wires, etc., should have been at a "scrap" valuation. The Appellate Division holds otherwise. The company's franchise had a considerable time to run. Mr. Justice Masten, writing the judgment of the court, says:

"I do not think that we can rationally suppose that the Legislature intended either to confiscate without any compensation or permit anything so confiscatory in its nature as to convert a going concern into scrap, and then pay for it at the rate of scrap. I think the undertaking is to be valued as at the moment it is taken over. At that moment it was a going concern, and was to be valued as such and not as scrap. But any estimate founded on revenue or profit is excluded."

Provincial Government Authorize the Interchange of Motor License With States of N.Y. and Michigan

An Order-in-Council has been passed by the Provincial Government authorizing the Minister of Public Works and Highways to enter into arrangements for the interchange of motor licenses with the States of New York and Michigan. It is anticipated when the arrangements are completed that the interchange will be free for a period of twenty-one days, and that for continuous residence in excess of that time the full schedule of fees will be payable. This interchange will not apply to non-resident corporations doing business in either case. The date upon which the interchange will become effective has not yet been fixed, but will be announced later by the Minister.

Demand Made.

The interchange has been agreed to by the Government in response to an urgent demand throughout the province, more especially from boards of trade, summer resorts, and hotel interests. The amount of money spent by tourists in Canada is $50,000,000 annually, being in the fourth position with respect to income from Canada's national resources.

While the interchange of licenses may slightly reduce the provincial income from this source, it is believed that it will be largely to the commercial advantage of the country to encourage tourists from the United States to spend their money in Canada.

Increased Revenue.

"The broad plan of encouraging traffic between the two countries is the statesmanlike view," said Mr. W. A. Maclean, Deputy Minister of Public Works. "This interchange comes at a particularly opportune time, since the hotel proprietors will be given an increased revenue just at the time when another part is being cut off."

With reference to the effect an extensive tourist traffic will have on general prosperity, Mr. Maclean said that one Vermont Hotel proprietor spent $35,000 on produce which he obtained from the farmers of the surrounding neighbourhood.

The store will be re-opened on Thursday, May 18 and the sale continued with still greater bargains than ever. Watch for further announcement.—The Liquidater.

Silver is King

This year Silver is King, and is advancing by leaps and bounds—no man dare say what the ultimate price will be. Last summer silver was worth 46½ cents per ounce — to-day it is 74 cents and going higher every week.

The advance in copper last year caused a sensational market in copper shares, many low priced copper stocks advanced more than 1,000 per cent.

That was last year, this year it is Silver and now is the opportune moment to purchase high-class silver stocks.

We have underwritten 250,000 shares of Lorrain Consolidated Mines, Ltd., at 20 cents per share net to the Treasury of the Company, and are now allotting these shares to our clients at 22 cents.

The fact that we have underwritten this large block of treasury stock, thereby guaranteeing the Company $50,000 for development purposes, is the best evidence of our sincere belief in the future of the Company.

Lorrain Consolidated has, in our opinion, the three necessary elements of a successful mine. The Company owns outright, 53 acres in the South Lorrain-Cobalt silver district on which engineers have located four large and six smaller veins. $40,000 has already been spent in proving up the property and two shafts have been sunk, one 162 feet, and the other 110 feet. Drifting and cross cutting to the extent of several hundred feet has also been done.

The management of Lorrain Consolidated is in the hands of men whose names stand for everything that is honorable in mining.

Men of this character do not associate themselves with a mine unless they are fully convinced of its merit, and we never underwrite a stock until we are satisfied it has a good chance of making good.

This Company has a well located property, an honest and efficient management, and ample capital for development. We, therefore, feel justified in recommending the purchase of the stock.

Application will be made for listing the shares in Toronto, Boston and New York.

Reports of development work to date and extracts of engineer's statements will be furnished free on application.

Thirty-three Soldiers Receive Confirmation

Class of Sixty-three Presented For Confirmation by Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeny at St. John's Church Last Night—An Impressive Service

Sixty-three candidates were presented for confirmation to Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeney, D. D. Bishop of Toronto, at St. John's church last evening. Of ten numbers, thirty-three men were in the uniform of the King, being members of the 93rd battalion. Nine others were from the congregation of St. George's church, South Peterborough.

The clergy present were Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. Canon Cornish, Rev Jas. Price and Rev. Mr. Robbins, incumbent at Young's Point.

Following the brief evensong those for confirmation were presented to His Lordship, who eloquently addressed the congregation from the words of St. Paul as found in the third verse of the second chapter of the epistle to Timothy, "Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."

The presence of so many men in the King's uniform the Bishop said had determined his theme for the occasion. It was splendid the way the citizens of Canada had left their businesses, had abandoned every ambition for a bright and rosy future to answer the call of King and Country. But the text was an interchangeable exhortation, and belonged not only to the soldier of the King but to the soldier of Jesus Christ.

A great canon of the church writing on the life of St. Paul refers to three figures or similes of which the great Apostle was very fond of using in his writings. These might be classified as the agricultural the athletic and the military figures. As Christ used parables as a means of instruction so did St. Paul's use these similes. To endure hardness was to suffer evil to bear patiently and incidents from the front have shown how truly Canadians have followed this injunction. "You men not only wear the King's uniform" said His Lordship, "but you and every member of this class wears the uniform of Jesus Christ." Christ's church militant here on earth, represented a continuous warfare against the world, the flesh and the devil. There is another patriotism besides that which belongs to the King. It is the loyalty that belongs to Jesus Christ. This spiritual warfare will last until the powers of darkness are overcome.

As in the military life the soldier is trained and disciplined so must the Christian adhere to moral laws. The King sends you forth to fight the wrong-doer and Christ also calls on you to combat sin. The spiritual life has many conflicts.

Our soldier does not expect to march to victory without difficulties. Just so with the Christian. Many trials and discouragements would have to be overcome, before the final commendation of the Master "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Then followed the ceremony of the laying on of hands by His Lordship, during which the congregation sang the hymns, "Come Gracious Spirit" and "Just as I am."

At the conclusion of the service one verse of "O Canada" and the national anthem were sung.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read every thing without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be needlessly handed by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in ½ glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes, two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammations will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Ailman Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A Peterboro City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy and a prescription to use first, last and all the time. I feel confident it will give entire satisfaction in almost every family."

Annual Meeting of The Young Women's Christian Association Held Last Night

Reports of the Various Departments Show That Satisfactory Progress Has Been Made During the Year—Interesting Address by Miss Una Saunders, National Secretary of the Y.W.C.A.—The League of Honour.

REPORT OF NOMINATING COMMITTEE

The annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association was held last evening. The reports presented covering the work of the various departments showed that the work of the Association has advanced during the year. This in a large measure is due to the untiring efficient service rendered by the officers of the Association. A feature of the meeting was an address by Miss Una Saunders, National Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. Miss Saunders spoke of the steady growth of Y.W.C.A work despite the war, and also of the League of Honour.

The League of Honour was formed in England in September, 1914, for the purpose of uniting all the women and girls of the Empire in upholding the honour of the nation and maintaining the strength of its men by prayer, purity and temperance.

The League is not so much a new Society as a movement seeking to work through existing organizations, by developing in individuals a sense of their national responsibility, and by calling them to greater sacrifice, to spiritual development, to untiring efficient service and to systematic regular training.

The Great Surrender.

In a very real sense the outcome of the war is in the hands of the women of the Empire. Not only are they called to the great surrender of their men, but also to continuous and vigilant economy and self-denial in the details of life—in food, clothes and amusements.

Moreover, the League demands the generous service of all its members, whether it be given in forms of the practical judgment and experience of older women, or in the glorious energy of girls fresh from school.

Finally, the Empire asks for the training of its women workers—training of brain, eye, hand and heart.

The League of Honour seeks to unite all those already engaged in patriotic service and to enlist others to do their share. Every endeavour is rooted and grounded in the fundamental forces of prayer, purity and temperance.

The President's Report.

Miss Martha Dickson, retiring president, in commenting upon the work of the Association, said that while the avenues of work have differed somewhat because of the times in which we are living still there is no cause for discouragement. We are able to report a larger membership than in any previous year. The St. John Ambulance has drawn a very large number together for the lectures so ably conducted by Dr. Cameron. A literature class under the direction of Mr. Morris of the Collegiate Institute Staff has been a source of pleasure and profit to all who have been able to attend it.

The Board take this opportunity of thanking Dr. Cameron and Mr. Morris for the valuable services so cheerfully and with so much self sacrifice rendered to the Association.

The gymnasium under the direction of Miss Littlefield has proved most attractive, and the appreciation of the parents whose children were members of the classes, and the citizens generally, was evidenced by their attendance at the closing exercises last week.

We hope that when this department is opened next autumn many more will take advantage of its privileges.

The special lines of work in which the Girls' Auxiliary have been engaged are Girl Guide work, many of them acting as leaders of the different patrols. They have also assisted with the work of the juniors which shows no decrease in attendance nor interest.

Club work has been interrupted at times because of the conditions prevailing in our industrial works, but we have every reason to believe that when conditions become normal, many more will become members of different clubs.

Bible Class Work.

Our Bible Class work under the direction of Miss Edna Ferguson, has appealed to many of our young women, especially to our house girls. This is a department which we hope to see grow stronger year by year, and for the development of which every member must feel responsible, especially must our Board members work along this line. The Bible and its principles are the foundation on which the Y.W.C.A. rests, and without which all other work will be in vain. We regret that we are not able to report any definite arrangements for Travellers' Aid, although we see more and more the growing need for such work. Another cause for disappointment is the fact that we have not been able to instal a "swimming pool," which has been under consideration for some time. However, conditions are such that we do not feel justified in attempting this at the present time.

The House Department is under the superintendence of Miss Beamer who is untiring in her efforts for the comfort and happiness of those under her care. We cannot close without expressing our very deep appreciation of the services of our General Secretary, Miss Peacock. She has been untiring in her efforts to further every branch of the work, and whatever success has attended the work, it is largely due to her self sacrificing efforts. We feel that if as members of the Board we had given ourselves more faithfully to the work much more might have been accomplished.

Great possibilities are before this Association, and with these great responsibilities which every Board member must face and do her part in meeting them, not in her own strength, but in the strength of Him who has said: "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Secretary's Report.

Following is the report of Miss Agnes Peacock, General Secretary of the Association:

One cannot fail to appreciate the privilege of being able to present the report of an organization such as the Y.W.C.A. of Peterborough, because with the close of each year's work there are unmistakable advances to record, difficulties which have been overcome and a vision of a larger work in the future. To tell you of the different departments are but fleeting glimpses into a year crowded with thought and effort, for much of that which is most interesting cannot be dealt with.

Religious Department.

Realizing that the spiritual needs of the young women of to-day have never been exceeded, the religious department is one of vital importance, in fact the rock foundation of all association work. We have been very fortunate in having Miss Edna Ferguson as teacher for a mid-week Bible study class. We have been greatly pleased at the number of house girls who have attended, and feel if the class were held at a more convenient hour there would be a large attendance of business girls, as the attendance was so small last year no regular Sunday service has been held. The Secretary has held the hour open for a few Sunday school girls who often come in for a little chat and remain at the association. In this way much persnal work is done. A service for all association members was held during the world's week of prayer.

In June we had the pleasure of a visit from Mrs. Ham, National Immigration Secretary. A public meeting was held in the Association. Mrs. Ham's message was most interesting and instructive. $168.50 was subscribed by members of the Board for immigration work.

Educational Department.

The aim of the Educational Department of the Y.W.C.A. is helpfulness. The Association wishes to assist any who are anxious to improve themselves. Not only is the class work itself helpful, but the atmosphere of the Association is uplifting and broadens the field of interest in others.

Literary Class.

A class for the study of Browning has been held every Tuesday evening under the leadership of Mr. Morris, with an average attendance of about sixteen. All who were fortunate enough as to have been able to attend his class have felt that it has been a source of both pleasure and profit. To Mr. Morris we feel we owe our sincere thanks for giving an evening a week to this work.

"St. John Ambulance Classes.

There have been two classes in first aid and one in home nursing. 69 members were enrolled 48 taking the examinations and receiving certificates. The lectures were given by Dr Cameron and the examinations by Drs. Greer and Moir. From the standpoint of numbers interest and results, these classes have been most encouraging owing to the excellent classes in dressmaking and domestic science held in the Central school. Classes on that nature have been put on only for the junior department.

Literary.

One hundred books were added to the library by the book four given by the Girls' Auxiliary and there are now over 40 books in the library. 532 books have been in circulation during the year.

Girl Guide Work.

A great deal of interest was shown in the organization of girl guide work. Although it has been difficult to secure leaders, excellent work was done by the different patrols, Miss Cameron, Miss Cunningham, Miss Dela Fosse, Mrs. Jamieson, Miss Langford, Miss Kirkwood and Miss Hurlburt assisting as leaders. The work consisted of gymnasium, flag drills, first-aid work, Morse code, etc. The girls went on a number of tramps before the weather got too severe. One patrol was formed of Normal students.

Gymnasium.

In October, Miss Littlefield took charge of our physical work with very marked success demonstrated by the large classes the enthusiasm of the girls and the packed houses at our closing evenings held at the Y.M.C.A. as well as by the excellent work done in class.

Ten regular gymnasium classes were held each week and a class for club girls on Wednesday evening. Private pupils over one hundred were in the rebular classes, 75 in the junior class and 70 in Girl Guild

Employment Bureau.

The Employment Bureau work is a problem. We have had over 250 ladies apply for maids and only about seventy girls and women by the day to supply the demand.

This situation is due to the lack of immigration, and the numbers of domestic girls taking up work in factories.

Membership.

The membership of the association has not increased as we would wish during the year. We have had a number of non-renewals and removals.

Junior Work.

In the Junior work the enrollment has not been as large or as many in attendance as last year, owing to the larger girls being in our Girl Guild classes also the Salvation Army has Girl Guild and Junior work on Beatisted of Guardian Household Science and Domestic Science. Since Christmas the children have had regular gymnasium work and games. We were delighted to have the work so well done that they were an attractive part of our closing. We have found a number of our junior children of last year are regular junior members this year, taking gymnasium work.

Social Work and General.

Our year's work opened September 8th, 150 were present at our rally and Miss McDonald of Japan was present.

On October 8th, 75 were present at our gymnasium rally.

In October the gymnasium was packed at the Hallowe'en party, 175 were present and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The girls wearing masquerade costumes.

In February a Valentine party brought together over one hundred girls. In March a grown up children's party caused much merriment. The larger gatherings as well as a number of smaller social evenings has kept alive a spirit of good comradeship among the members of the classes and clubs.

In the Industrial work with few exceptions, girls have worked three nights a week and have not felt they could attend clubs. A number of loyalty club girls who last year were in domestic service are now in factories. Others joined our regular classes first aid classes and gym. classes. Others took classes at the Technical School. These girls however have not lost interest in the association as they still come to social evenings and get books from the library and use the reading and club room. I feel confident when conditions become mal again the club work of the association will be a marked feature of the work.

A number of organizations and clubs have used our rooms during the year. For a time the Kitcheners Red Cross Auxiliary the Business Girls Club Local Council and Daughters of the Empire. On an average we have had over two hundred coming in for class and club work each week and it is very hard to give any idea in statistics what a busy year we have really had, not that we are in any degree satisfied with the progress made or the work accomplished but we are grateful that we have not lost ground.

We are now ready for a new year. We have only touched the fringe of the work for young women in Peterborough the future is laden with possibilities. The work needs sincere workers who will give of their time talent and money for this work which is so important in our city.

Secretary of the Board.

The Y.W.C.A. annual report for 1915, submitted by the secertary, Mrs. Thomas Cruikshank:

Your Board, which is one of the seventy-seven Y. W. C. A. Boards of Management in Canada, has held twelve meetings during the year, with an average attendance of thirteen members. The Executive has been called for six meetings. There have been two changes on the staff. What has proven to be an important addition, was the appointment of Miss Caroline Littlefield as physical directress in September. Miss Littlefield's strong personality and careful instruction in the physical development of both juniors and seniors, have meant much to those coming under her training.

Mrs. Barnes, resigning her position as house superintendent in November last, was succeeded by Miss Beamer, whose management is proving most satisfactory.

Boarding Home.

The boarding home has been well patronized during the year, there being at present fifty boarders, and we feel that it is cause for gratitude that there has been so little illness in the Home.

The boarders' drawing-room has been entirely renovated, through the generosity of Mrs. W. Walsh. For this kindness, the Board feels its indebtedness.

The domestic hot water apparatus has been altered and improved by the addition of a Gurney's Gothic tank heater and one sixty-six-gallon iron range boiler, etc., at a cost of eighty-two dollars.

Initial Appeal.

This building has been in use for twelve years, and not until last month has any public appeal for funds been made. The Board felt that the result of such an appeal would mean the opening of greater possibilities for our work, and the ladies are grateful to the citizens who are responding so generously in spite of the many other necessary demands upon their purses. We attribute much of the year's success to our worthy president, Miss M. Dickson.

Miss Peacock's resignation, to take effect at the end of the month, has been received with regret, as her wide experience in Y.W.C.A. work, and her noble ideals, as well as her untiring efforts for the establishment of a sound business basis for the work, have helped very materially in making the local association a valuable asset to the city.

Ford

A Ford car bought part by part costs only $40 more than the list price of the complete car as against $940 more for the parts of the average car priced around $1000 and less

And remember, both by laboratory tests and actual service tests, the parts of a Ford car have proved themselves superior, part by part, to those of any other car.

Don't these figures drive home what is meant by the low upkeep cost of the Ford?

Public School Baseball Match

Yesterday evening on the grounds of the Central School, another of the senior series of the Public School Baseball League was accounted for when a team from the Queen Mary School defeated the Central School by a score of 8-6.

The batteries were as follows:

Queen Mary—Patterson and Thinbeck.

Central—Carruthers and Munro.

Fred McNeeley umpired the games to the satisfaction of both teams.

LAWN BOWLING

The green is beginning to take on the velvety quality that is so prized by the ardent bowler.

A great deal of work has been expended on it and the results are beginning to show.

It is expected that if the weather is favorable that the green will open for the season on Friday next.

Season tickets may be procured from Messrs. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Thomas Brightman, J. C. Read, Joan Maynoard, R. Elliot, T. C. Elliot, D. H. Moore, J. P. Cunningham.

GANDIL A GREAT HELP TO CLEVELAND

When the Cleveland club purchased Tris Speaker from the Red Sox few persons believed that the Indians would lead the American league race at any time this season. But in spite of the enforced absence of Shortstop Chapman, the Indians now are showing the way. Manager Fohl surely made a wise move when he bought First Baseman Gandil from the Washington club, for that player has been a tower of strength in the infield. In addition to Speaker, Fohl has three high class outfielders in Graney, Smith and Roth, and with Turner on third base there is undoubted strength at that corner of the diamond. Howard, cast off by the Browns, is covering second base in clever style, and Wambsganss is filling Chapman's place as well as can be expected. But the most surprising feature of the Cleveland's success is in the work of the pitchers. When the season started, it was admitted that Fohl had two capable boxmen in Morton and Mitchell. But the second string men, Coveleskie, Coombs, Klepfer, Bagby and Lowdermilk, have surprised the sharps with remarkable effectiveness. Speaker, by the way, leads the American league in the latest unofficial batting averages.

"Glad" Murphy Leaves An Estate of $6000

TORONTO, May 13.—An estate of $6,004 in cash was left by William Ewart G. ("Glad") Murphy, the famous Toronto hockey and Rugby player, who died after a lingering illness in St. Michael's Hospital Feb. 18. Murphy was accidentally injured in a Rugby game last October, and an examination showed that his back was broken.

On Janudry 5 a will was made on a sheet of foolscap paper, and this has been filed in the Surrogate Court by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Murphy, of Chatham, Ont. Murphy was unable to affix his signature to the document, and his name was signed by G. B. Balfour, at Murphy's request.

"I hereby give all my estate, both real and personal, wheresoever situate, to my mother, Catherine Murphy," reads the will. "I further express as my wish that the residue of any fund raised to bear expenses of my illness be given to my mother."

The estate comprises a balance of $2,184 in the "Glad" Murphy benefit fund and $3,820 in three bank accounts.

The Board wishes to thank all who have given voluntary service in any department, and especially in connection with the industrial work.

And also wishes to record its appreciation of the valuable and gratuitous services rendered by the following on the part of Mr. F. J. H. Morris, M.A., who has made the Browning Study Class most interesting and profitable to its members.

To Dr. Cameron, who has devoted much of his valuable time to lectures before the classes in St. John's ambulance work.

To the examiners, Drs. Greer and Moir, and to the press of the city for the publicity which it from time to time has so freely given the announcements pertaining to the work of this institution.

Girls' Auxiliary.

Miss Gladys M. Cameron, secretary of the Girls' Auxiliary, presented the following report: In reviewing the work of the Auxiliary for the past year, we find many things worthy of report, but in view of the fact that most of the girls in the Auxiliary gave so much time to Red Cross work and because there were so many calls upon the people just now, we felt it would not be wise to undertake any new work.

However, the junior work was carried on and the Saturday afternoon classes were exceptionally good this year. Over 100 children attended the classes in sewing, gymnasium work, and domestic science. These classes lasted until Christmas, when Miss Littlefield kindly consented to give the children gymnasium work every Saturday afternoon. In the fall a Girl Guide movement was started, taking many of the children away from the Junior work. There were seventy children joined the Guides from the ages of eleven to twenty. Several members of the Auxiliary took charge of patrols, under Miss Littlefield as captain.

Summer Conference.

Last June a garden party was held to raise funds to send delegates from the Auiliary to the Summer Conference at Muskoka. Miss Ruby Cunningham and Miss Gladys Cameron were appointed delegates. In September Miss Peacock invited the girls in to meet Miss Littlefield. Many of the members dropped in for tea and enjoyed the social hour. In February a library tea was given and about 100 books were added to the library.

Good Comrades' Club.

The Good Comrades' Club is at present composed of girls between the ages of sixteen and twenty-two.

A room has been placed at the disposal of the club, at which place, all girls are welcome at any time to read, rest, or play games provided for them.

The club holds its regular meetings on Wednesday evening of each week, when the time is spent in gymnasium work, basketball, and other games, under the supervision of Miss Littlefield, physical director, and which has proved very beneficial and enjoyable.

A social evening is held on the last Wednesday of the month. A short talk on some interesting or instructive subject, games, or a programme consisting of songs, recitations, etc., is arranged, after which light refreshments are served.

Any girl wishing to join the club, and making application to Miss Peacock, general secretary, at the office, will be most welcome.

Mrs. W. H. Denham, Convenor.

battalion rooster championship with the battle-scarred veteran George Graham, of Peterborough, presented to Col. Greer's Wildcats a month ago. The Finnegan bird, a grand looking silver duckwing, arrived on Monday, and all week he has been lording it around the barrack yard, while the Graham bird, a big Red, has been laid up ill. The Peterborough chicken is feeling a bit better to-day, and is beginning to kick up a fuss because he cannot get out and take a fall out of the Gshawa battler. Corp. Tommy Daly and Pte. Joe Donovan, who have charge of the birds, are busy making a miniature set of gloves for the birds, and one of these fine days they are going to cut them loose, and see which is cock of the walk. Both birds will have plenty of backing, though at that the Graham bird is the favourite. He will be probably 3 to 5 when the gong sounds for the fray.

The Cobourg Sentinal Star says: Pte. Stedman and Murphy, two members of the 130th Battalion, were run in by the military police last Saturday night for being drunk while on guard. Both raised quite a fuss, and were only placed in the lock-up after severe russles. Stedman, when arrested, threw his rifle on the ground, breaking it, while Murphy discharged his rifle in the air. After being put in the cells Murphy attacked Constable Campbell, and on being subdued by him, threw a heavy granite mug at Chief Ruse's face, and accompanied it with choice language. When he comes out he will face a charge of assault in police court.

Attention is directed by Divisional Order No. 57 of the 22nd Janubry. It would appear that in many cases the provisions of this order are being ignored. All N.C.O's and men attending schools of instruction must be struck off all other duty whilst in attendance at the school. Furthermore they must not be called upon, on the termination of the school, to make good the various tours of duty they have missed owing to being in attendance at the school.

Divisional Order No. 194, dated the 9th February, is republished for the information and guidance of all concerned:

"It has been brought to notice that in some instances, officers of one unit of the C.E.F. have endeavoured to persuade junior N.C.O.'s and men of another unit of the C.E.F. to exchange—offering promotion as an inducement. This practice is strictly forbidden."

The Kingston Standard says: Col. Wesscherbe, officer commanding the 4th Pioneer Battalion, is in St. Andrew's, N.B., looking over a suitable site for camping grounds. As the whole battalion will soon go there the headquarters will be removed from Ottawa. At the present time one company is mobilized at London, another at Toronto, a half a company at Halifax, and about 60 men in Ottawa. The strength of the battalion is now around 700 men. At St. Andrew's the battalion will train for a couple of months and proceed overseas as soon as possible. Captain Muckleston has visited Kingston several times for recruits for his battalion, and the 4th Pioneers have three Kingston officers.

The bugle band of the 93rd battalion went on leave to-day until Wednesday morning, the first time the members of the band have been away together.

LAUDER'S EXTRA HALF MILLION WENT TO ALLIES

NEW YORK, May 12.—Time has wrought a change in Harry Lauder—a wonderful change—to be precise a $860,000 change.

But more of this anon.

Mr. Lauder, who as everybody knows, sings Scottish airs and wears kilts in vaudeville, was on board the Finland, of the American line when she steamed yesterday for Liverpool. With him was Mrs. Lauder. They are going home to see their son George, who was wounded when with his regiment in France.

While touring the United States and Canada in the course of the last season Mr. Lauder gave many performances for the benefit of the Allies, and made successful efforts in Canadian cities to rally patriotic to the British flag by patiotic song which he sang.

"Oh, I'm a changed man," said Mr. Lauder to the reporters before the ship steamed; "I have given half a million dollars to the cause of the Allies."

"In time," replied the Scottish singer. And the manner in which he said this left not the shadow of a doubt in the mind of any of his hearers that in Mr. Lauder's case the adage, "time is money" is literally true

"Thank God," Cries Miss Bori, "I Have Found My Lost Voice"

NEW YORK, May 13.—"Thank God I have my voice back," declared Miss Lucrezia Bori, Spanish prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera house, as she stepped out of a taupe colored limousine at the stage door of the opera house and hurried into the office of Giulio Gatti-Casazza to tell the good news. A friend waylaid her later and asked for details.

"Oh," sh said, and beamed with happiness, "it's only that the tragedy of my young life is over. You know I have not been able to sing a note in public all winter long—following an operation on my vocal cords performed at Milan last summer, just before starting for New York. Following this operation I sang nearly a whole opera in private, just to find out whether my voice had been impaired. It sounded healthy and normal, so I sent a cablegram to Mr. Gatti telling him to count upon me, that I would surely sing upon my arrival.

"Well, the Italian steamship on which I crossed danced fancy steps during the entire trip and I arrived here ill. Still I hoped from day to day to be able to sing, only to be disappointed, and finally I went into a stage of vocal siege that is I was commanded by my physician to remain absolutely silent for weeks.

"Friends feared that I never would be able to sing again. "but I went on hoping and following the commands of my physicians. To-day I was told after weeks of daily voice trials, that my voice is fully restored. It is the happiest day I have had in the whole year.

I shall remain in and about New York until July, spending time at the country house of my friends. T. & I shall go somewhere in the Blue Ridge Mountains—I do not remember the difficult American name—and there shall begin to study and practise until it is time for me to return to New York and take my place in the Metropolitan Company."

The More You Know About PASTEURIZED MILK The Better You Like It

READ THESE FACTS FROM THE PETERBORO CREAMERY:

1. BUTTERFAT — Every day's milk is tested for its Butterfat (richness.) Creamery patrons depend on our tests for all the pure, rich, wholesome, safe milk sent out on our milk waggons.

2. CLARIFYING — Cleanliness contributes to health and strength. Clarification means that our creamery patrons get milk from which all sediment and waste matter from the udder is removed, as well as all impurities which may come from the handling of milk. When raw milk is passed through the clarifier all objectionable matter is thrown out and the milk is made safe. Other methods of cleansing the milk with wire strainers, or filters, are not efficient.

3. PASTEURIZING—This process consists in heating milk to such a temperature for such a length of time as will destroy all tubercular or other disease germs. Pasteurising milk does not affect the food value of milk. No epidemic of disease has ever been traced to pasteurized milk. This Creamery sells the only Clarified and Pasteurized Milk in the city. It is contrary to City of Toronto by-laws to sell unpasteurized milk or ice cream made from cream which has not been pasteurized

4. BOTTLING—Our Creamery Milk is bottled under sanitary conditions. All bottles are washed and thoroughly sterilized every time they are used. No bottles are allowed out that have not been sterilized.

BRIDGENORTH, May 13.—The farmers are not making very good headway getting in the crop owing to the ground being too wet and so much rain.

Mr. Louis Green is expected in the near future to arrive in Mrs. J. D. Tully's cottage.

Mr. Percy Udy, our popular storekeeper, is making good headway running his new car.

Mr. John Forsythe and Mr. Jas. Grant has each purchased a motor boat that will be two more on the Lake this summer.

There is no improvement in the condition of Mrs. Alexander Morrison. She took a paralytic stroke three weeks ago.

THE CRITIC.

Dad reads about the weddin's and he snorts like all git out;
He reads the social doin's with a most derisive shout.
He says they make the papers for the wimmin folks alone;
He'll reads about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan.
He says of information it does not contain a crumb
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.
He's always first to grab it and he reads it plumb clean through
He doesn't miss an item or a want ad—that is true.
He says "They don't know what we want them durn newspaper guys
I'm going to take a day some time and go and put 'em wise.
It sometimes seems as though they must be deaf and blind and dumb.
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

PROF. ZAVITZ DEPLORES CONTINUED WET SPELL

Another Week of it will Bring "Serious Conditions"

GUELPH, May 13.—According to Prof W. H. Day of the O.A.C. the rests with the farmer whose land has been properly and sufficiently drained.

"As a general thing the farmer with the well-drained land is able to get on his acreage from two to three weeks earlier than the man who has paid little or no attention to this matter" says Prof Day. As a season such as the present gives an opportunity to demonstrate this point. There are farmers seeding right now on tiled land and again there are those with no drainage who are away behind. The advantages of drainage are apparent in a wet season."

Prof Zavitz, although hopeful a week ago, stated to your correspondent that the present wet spell was having a detrimental effect on the seeding. In some places the farmers have no seeding done at all. Prof Zavitz admitted that another week of wet weather would bring about a very serious condition."

MOOSE LEASE MUCH SPACE.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 12. — Nine floors of the LaSalle Hotel have been leased for convention week in the name of George W. Perkins, chairman of the Progressive National Executive Committee. The rental is said to be $36,000, and the space is in addition to large sections of other leading hotels engaged for the week in the same way.

This interesting discovery was made by a city official concerned in the preparations for the republican convention. He was seeking to find rooms during the convention period for a friend from the East. A large sized fortune, it is declared, has already been expended for room and hall rent for the delegates to the Progressive Convention.

The Florentine room at the Congress, as well as many rooms in that hotel, the Auditorium Theatre and many rooms in the Auditorium also have been leased for convention week in behalf of Mr. Perkins.

TWO MEN HAVE SAME WIFE.

Soldiers, Long Friends, Make Discovery in Discussing Marriage.

Two soldiers, one detained at the disciplinary barracks, Alcatras Island, and the other a member of the 148th Company, Coast Artillery Corps, have discovered that they were married to the same woman, says a San Francisco despatch. They had known each other for a long time, but had not met for months until a few days ago. While discussing their supposed respective wives, the astounding fact was revealed to them that they had married the same woman.

Private Robert L. Westfall of the Artillery Corps is the real husband. His friend, Fred A. Thomas, held at the barracks for misconduct, is the victim of an alleged bigamist.

Both immediately lodged a complaint with Lieutenant R. W. Dusenbury, and the case was turned over to a detective. His search ended with the arrest of Rasdney Younger, the wife. She was charged with bigamy.

The housekeeper should bring all the sunshine and fresh air into the home that she possibly can.

SECRET OF SNAKE'S GLIDE.

Method of Contraction That Enables It to Crawl and Climb.

A snake moves along the ground by contracting the ribs on one side of his body and separating those on the other side, says the Philadelphia Record. This forms one curve. Another contraction takes place at the end of the expanded side, and bends the body in the oposite direction. Thus there is a series of alternate constructions and spreadings of the numerous ribs throughout the length of the reptile as it lies on the ground.

When the snake is in motion some part of the body must secure itself against rough or projecting surface, from which the forward part can be impelled. Then the forward part takes hold and the hinder length is dragged to a new position. The row of shields along the snake's belly is very quick in seizing upon the slightest projection, so that any rough surface affords a good track.

In climbing a tree the snake uses the same process. It must find points of vantage for its curves.

It saves having the windows washed so frequently if the inside panes are occasionally wiped over with a dry cloth.

THE WEATHER

The thermometer was down to two degrees below the freezing point last night. While the nights have been quite cool lately this is the first occasion for some weeks that thin ice has been formed. W.P.

Mr. Andre's Lecture at George Street Church

Paris on the eve of war was one of the interesting topics in the lecture at George Street Methodist church last night by M. Audre of Paris France. He told of the retreat from Mons the second battle at Ypres and other striking incidents of the war, including the reception of the news that England had declared war on Germany. In a French restaurant this announcement was the signal for the singing of the British National Anthem by French officers dining there.

Attacks of Enemy on the British Front Are All Repulsed

GERMAN ZEPPELIN IS DESTROYED BY BRITISH WARSHIPS

ITALIANS PUSH ON TOWARD TRENT; HALF DISTANCE COVERED

Rome, May 14.—Persistently and steadily General Cadorna is winning his way to Trent. His campaign is passing almost unnoticed outside of Italy, attention being fixed on the hitherto spectacular fighting on the Isonzo line.

The outstanding fact in the Trentino campaign is that the Italian army has advanced 18 miles from the existing Austro-Italian frontier, which runs 34 miles from Trent.

While General Cadorna is thus pushing up the Adige Valley to Trent, the infantry operations on the Isonzo front are at a standstill. Desultory artillery fire is maintained, sapping and mining work proceeds actively, and the foot soldiers are kept in trim by night bombing attacks.

Experts who have recently visited the Isonzo front declare that the Italians could enter Gorizia any time they liked, but would be exposed to the fire of the Austrian batteries, which still command the town.

They could destroy Gorizia by shell fire and render the town neutral ground, but they refrain because it is Italy's policy to capture intact, as far as possible, all the towns and villages which it is hoped will form a part of Greater Italy after the war.

Cloud has abandoned his mining "prospect" thirty miles from Prescott, Ariz., spread his blankets in the shadow of the Tower of Jewels, outside the exposition grounds.

Tells of Treaty Between Turkey and Germany Made at the Start of War

Defensive Alliance Based on Terms of Equality---Lord Cecil Says Germany Has Not Made Peace Offer to Britain

BERLIN, May 15, (by Wireless to Sayville).—In reply to question by Dr. Joseph Herzfeld, a socialist member, Dr. Alfred Zimmerman, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, made a statement in the Reichstag recently regarding the Turco-German treaties.

"Secretary Zimmerman," says the Overseas News Agency report of his remarks, "stated that at the beginning of the world war a defensive alliance was concluded between Germany and Turkey, based on terms of equality and framed to endure for a long period. The details of the treaty were secret," he added.

"In addition," said Dr. Zimmermann, "there were negotiations between the two countries regarding consular representation, the legal status of citizens and residential rights." An agreemnt on virtually all points had been reached, he said.

"The terms were similar to conventions concluded by Germany with other countries," Dr. Zimmerman added, "and as soon as the text of the convention was agreed upon it would, before ratification, be presented to the Reichstag, according to the federal constitution."

NO PEACE OFFER MADE.

LONDON, May 15.—"The latest peace overtures, said to be of German origin, while not as insolent and impossible as previous statements on the same subject, certainly do not yet offer a basis for negotiations," said Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, in discussing the latest reputed German peace terms. Lord Robert continued:

"We have never received, either officially or unofficially, any direct peace suggestions from Germany, and the only indirect overtures we are aware of appear in the speeches of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and the recent German note to America. We would not think of discussing or even considering any overtures without consulting our allies. No formal or informal conference for this purpose ever has taken place.

"In diplomatic procedure a neutral is hardly likely to make any suggestion of peace terms unless certain they are acceptable to the recipient.

"If Germany should decide to approach us through the medium of the United States the latter would have to use its own judgment as to whether or not to deliver the request."

While disclaiming any knowledge of the internal condition of Germany, Lord Robert declared the increasing reports of peace overtures indicate there is some truth to the stories that the Central Powers are in desperate straits.

Canadian Ships Good Service in Russian Port

Ice-Breakers Kept Archangel Open All Winter—Men Return

Three months in the White Sea on the Canadian ice-breaker Bonaventure, is the interesting experience of wireless operator Thom now serving on the Donaldson liner Lakonia, which has arrived at Montreal. The operations of the ice-breakers were entirely successful in keeping the port of Archangel clear and in consequence of the Russian army got all the equipment or supplies needed.

In January, February and March of this year, Archangel was one of the busiest ports in the world. In that period Thom saw over one hundred large freight carriers at one time anchored in the roads outside Archangel. "They were big boats," he added, "the biggest and most modern of the merchant marine."

That even the White Sea is not immune from the hidden mine was also evident for many mine sweepers of the British navy were seen by the Bonaventure. These mines were layed by German ships flying the Norwegian flag. Their operations were successful at first, but lanes are now clearly marked and mine layers have been rounded up.

The ice in the White Sea is quite different from that of the Newfoundland Banks, Thom was told. Captain Andrews, a Newfoundlander, in charge, stated that while it is thicker it is not nearly so hard as Labrador ice and does not drift. From four to five feet was the thickest ice he found. Only when it jams under wind pressure is any difficulty experienced. Owing to this some boats were unlucky enough to be frozen in to the shore and it will be many weeks before they can get out.

The big ice-breaker Earl Gary was reported to be doing splendid work. It is the first time in the history of Archangel port that ships have been run in and out during the entire winter.

SAYS BERLIN BETRAYS IRISH.

Nothing so Significant in Whole Crisis, Herbert Samuel Asserts.

LONDON, May. 13.—Herbert Samuel, the Home Secretary, in an address at the National Liberal Club to-day on the Irish revolt said the uprising was a foolish one because its leaders rashly had put faith in German aid. He continued:

"I believe that when the full history of the rebellion comes to be writ ten it will be found nothing has been so significant in this crisis as the manner in which the German Government betrayed those whom they of the revolt anticipated substantial aid from those they called their Continental allies."

Look For A Good Harvest

C. A. Zavitz, Professor of Field Husbandry at the Ontario Agricultural College, said this morning that the late spring should not do much harm. "One thing it will do," he said, "is to show up the good farming from the bad. The farmers who have their land under-drained have all got their seed in, but the land that has not the under-drainage has hardly been touched.

"This is the latest spring we have had for seeding in the last twenty years. Quite a few farmers have wheat and clover in and much of it is through the ground, and there is no reason why the harvest should not be good and of good quality.

"A late spring generally tends to have better grain and lighter straw, and this year's harvest will be far more easier to handle, both in cutting and threshing.

"This will be a good thing for the farmers because of the shortage of labour at the present time. We are looking forward to a good crop and I cannot see what difference the lateness of the seeding will make on it."

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to secure lasting results.

Caller (looking at picture)—"Does your mamma paint?" Little son—"Yes; but she has finished that and is putting on the pwder now! She'll be down in a minute."

The girl—"Have you told your mother of your love for me?" The Earl—"Not yet; Mother has noticed that I've been queer of late but she thinks its billousness."

Crisp Granules

In making the food, Grape-Nuts, whole wheat and malted barley are ground into flour, blended, formed into a dough, and baked about 20 hours. This long baking converts a large part of the starch into dextrose or grape-sugar, making Grape-Nuts easily digestible— generally in about one hour.

Grape-Nuts comes from the ovens almost rock-hard and is reduced to crisp, sweet, nut-like granules requiring thorough mastication. An admirable quality—both for good digestion and sound teeth.

Grape-Nuts

(Made in Canada)

contains all the nutriment of the grains, including the valuable mineral salts—phosphate of potash, etc.—often lacking in the ordinary diet but so essential for well-balanced nerves and sturdy bodies.

Grape-Nuts is ready to eat direct from the package with cream or good milk—a delicious, well-balanced food for health, strength and efficiency.

14 YEAR-OLD GIRL ABDUCTED

Italians Carry Off Oshawa Young Lady—Were Committed for Trial

OSHAWA, May 15.—A little romance which began in the foreign section of Oshawa some time ago, had its sequel in Police Court this week when John Tarakki and Mike Pardechuk were sent to Whitby for trial on a charge of abducting the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Tomecsuk. John and Mike were boarders at the Tomechuk home and the latter became enamoured with the daughter of their landlord, although she was only 14 years old last January. She returned the young man's affectations and wanted to marry him, but her parents used her roughly, as the evidence said, and were determined she should wed a husband of their choosing. Her lover was asked to find lodgings elsewhere, which he did. However, his late room mate carried messages for him to the girl. Finally it was arranged that they should go to Guelph and be married, and their friend was to go with them. A jitney was engaged and they succeeded in getting to Waithy unobserved and there took the G. T. R. for Guelph, where they told the court they intended to be married at the home of some friends. But these plans were interrupted, for John Rainish, the local interpreter, received word from Guelph that the girl was there and that the intentions of the young man might not be as worthy as he claimed. The young men were arrested, and Chief Constable Mowatt and Constable Friend went to Guelph to bring the prisoners back to Oshawa. The case came before Police Magistrate Crysdale Wednesday morning with Col. Farewell acting for the Crown and Col. Grierson for the defense. The party left Oshawa on Thursday and were not arrested at least till Saturday, and yet no marriage had taken place, making it appear from the evidence that the men had planned to deliberately secure the young girl for doubtful purposes, consequently they were committed for trial and no bail accepted.

OUR SERIAL STORY

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

Like all the people in Freekirk Hear, Nellie had heard some of the rumours concerning Code's possible part in the sinking of the May Schofield. Nat, for reasons of his own, had carefully refrained from enlarging on these to her, and in the absorption of her wooing by him she had let them go by unnoticed. Now, for the first time, the consequences they might have in Code's life were made clear to her.

"I—I don't know," she faltered, unable to reply to his direct question. "But I know this, that all his life Code had been an honest man and one of my best friends. I grew up with him just as I did with you, and I resent such talk about him as much as I would if it were about you."

"Yes," he sneered, "he has been entirely too much of a good friend. What was he always over to your place for, I'd like to know? And, even after he knew we were engaged, what was he doin' down at Ma Sprague's that night I called? An' what did you go to his place for after the fire when I tried to get you to come to mine?"

The last question he roared out at the top of his voice, and the girl, now afraid of him, shrank back against the wall of the cabin.

She knew it was useless to say that she and Code had been like brother and sister all their lives, and that May Schofield was a second mother to her. All reason was hopeless in the face of this unreasoning jealousy. After a moment she found her speech.

"I guess, Nat," she said, "you had better go back to your schooner until you are in a different mood."

"Afraid to answer, ain't you?" he cried. "When I face you down you're afraid to answer an' tell me I'd better go away. Well, now let me tell you something. You're entirely too friendly with that crook, an' I won't have it! You're engaged to me, and what I say goes. An' let me tell you something else.

"The insurance company is after him because he sunk the May Schofield on purpose. But that ain't the worst of the things he did—"

"What do you mean?" she flashed at him.

"You'll find out quick enough, and so will he," he snarled. "I'm not saying what is goin' to happen to him, but when I'm through we'll see if your hero is such a fine specimen."

From fear to anger her spirit had gone, and now under the lash it turned to cold disdain. With a swift motion of her right hand over her left she drew off the diamond ring he had given her and held it out to him.

"Take this, Nat," she said, so coldly that for once his rage was checked. He looked stupidly at the glittering emblem of her love, and suddenly became aware of the extent to which he had driven her. The reaction was as swift as the rage.

"Please, Nellie dear," he begged. "don't do that! Take it back. Forgive me. Everything has piled up so to-day that I lost my temper. Please don't do that!"

But he had gone too far. He had shown her a new side to his character.

"No, Nat," she said calmly, but still with that icy inflection of disdain, "this has gone too far. Take this ring. Some time, when you have made amends for this afternoon, I may see you again."

"I won't take it," he replied doggedly. "Please, Nellie, forgive—"

"Take it," she flashed, "or I will throw it into the ocean!"

She had unconsciously submitted him to a final test. He was about to let her carry out her threat if she saw fit when his cupidity overcame him. He reached out his hand, and she dropped the ring into it. She stood silent, pale, and cold, waiting for him to go.

He moved away. He had reached the foot of the companionway when he turned back.

"He has brought me to this," he said so slowly and evilly that each word seemed a drop of venom. "But I'll make him pay. I'm goin' to St. John's, and when I get back it will be the sorriest day in his life and yours, too. His life won't be worth the thread it hangs on!"

With that he went up the companionway and, not noticing the greeting of Captain Turner, dropped into his yellow dory that swung and bumped against the Rosan's side. Swiftly he rowed to the Nettie B. and clambered aboard, bellowing orders to get up sail. In fifteen minutes the schooner was on the back track under every stitch of canvas she carried.

Bijonah Tanner stared blankly after the retreating Nettie. Then, knowing that his daughter had been with Nat, dropped down into the little cabin.

CHAPTER XIV.
A DISCOVERY.

Taken aback as he had been by the strange doings of Nat's schooner, his dismay then was a feeble imitation of the panic that smote him now. It had long been a favourite formula of Bijonah's that "A schooner's a gal you can understand. She goes where ye send her, an' ye know she'll come back when ye tell her to. She's a snug, trustin' kind of critter, an' she's man's best friend because she hain't got a grain o' sense. But woman!"

Now he was baffled completely. Here was a girl who was deeply in love, crying. He tiptoed cautiously to the deck again and stole forward to the galley as though he had been detected in a suspicious action.

A PAIN IN THE BACK
COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS.

When a pain asserts itself in the back you may rest assured that it comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and would be without a pain or an ache.

For Backache, lame or weak back, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills.

They take out the stitches, twitches, and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer as much from a weak, lame, aching back.

Miss Iva A. Ferris, Mill Cove, N.B., writes: "I suffered for two years from pains in my back. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, had was almost discouraged until I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I thought it would not hurt to try them. I had only used two boxes before I noticed a great difference, and after I had taken four boxes I was completely cured. I would not be without them in the house. I can recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 322 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

After a while the storm passed, and Nellie sat up, red-eyed and red-nosed, but with a measure of her usual tranquillity restored.

"Idiot!" she told herself. "To howl like that over him!"

Nellie finally regained her poise of mind and remembered that she had been at the point of writing a letter to her mother (to be mailed by the first vessel bound to a port) when Nat had interrupted her.

The table at which she sat was a rough, square one of oak, with one drawer that extended its whole width. She opened the drawer and found it stuffed with an untidy mass of paper; envelopes, newspapers, clippings, books, ink, and a mucilage-pot that had foundered in the last gale and spread its contents over everything.

Such was her struggle to find two clean sheets of paper and a pen that she finally dumped the contents of the drawer on top of the table and went to the task seriously. The very first thing that came under her hand was a heavy packet.

Turning it face up, she read, with surprise, a large feminine handwriting which said:

Mr. Code Schofield, kindness of Captain B. Tanner
Letter enclosed.

5 ——— 10s
10 ——— 5s
50 ——— 1s

$150

Nellie Tanner stared at the envelope. It was the handwriting that held her. She had seen it before. She had once been honorary assistant treasurer of the Church of England chapel, and it suddenly came to her that this was the handwriting that had adorned Elsa Mallaby's checks and subscriptions.

She knew she had solved the problem the instant the answer came. Elsa had been to Boston to school, and the fact was very evident. She sat and stared at the black letters, flexing the packet filled with bills.

"Why should Elsa Mallaby be sending money to Code Schofield?"

Everybody in Freekirk Head knew that Code Schofield went up to Elsa Mallaby's to dinner occasionally. So did other people in the village, but not so often as he. There had been a little gossip concerning the two of them, but, while Code was an excellent enough fellow, it was hardly probable that a rich widow like Elsa would throw herself away on a poor fisherman. They forgot that she had done so the first time she married, and that she had the sea in her blood.

These shreds of gossip returned to Nellie now with accrued interest, and she began to believe in the theory of fire being behind smoke.

She also remembered the night of the mass meeting in Odd Fellows Hall when Code had made his suggestion of going to the Banks. There had flashed between Elsa's velvet-dark eyes and Code's blue ones a message of intimacy of which the town knew nothing. Every one saw the look, and nearly every one talked about it, but they did not know that only a couple of nights before Elsa had been the one to put Code on guard against his enemies, and that he was more than grateful.

"I'd just like to know what's in that letter so as to tease him the next time we meet," she said gaily to herself. She was now out of all mood for writing her mother home, and, stuffing the contents of the drawer back into place, she returned the letter to the table and went on deck.

The sea was running higher. The new topmast was up, and within half an hour the Rosan heeled to the wind and plowed her way northward after the remainder of the fleet.

CHAPTER XV.

THE CATCH OF THE ROSAN.

At the forecastle head of the Rosan stood a youth pulling the ship's bell. The windlass grunted and whined as the schooner came up on her hawser with a thump, and overhead a useless jib slatted and rattled.

The youth could scarcely see aft of the foremast because of the thick mesh of the weather, but he could hear what was going on. There was a thump, a slimy slapping of wet fish, and a voice counting monotonously as its owner forked his forenoon's catch into the pen amidships.

"Forty-nine," said the voice. "All right, boys, swing her in." And a moment later the dory, hauled high, dropped down into her nest. Immediately there was a slight bump against the side of the schooner, and the slapping and counting would begin again.

"Eighty-seven, and high line at that!" said the next man. "I'll bet that's the only halibut on the Banks, and he's two hundred if he's an ounce."

The great, flat fish was raised to the deck by means of the topping haul that swung in the dories.

Exasperating.

A stuttering salesman called on a New York buyer with an excellent proposition. In well turned sentences he proceeded to lay before the buyer his superb argument. But, alas, in every well turned sentence there were "be" and "ras," and over these the salesman stuttered pitiably.

The buyer before whom he was pleading was a caustic, nasty sort of chap, and after five minutes of stuttering at a point where the salesman was floundering most dreadfully, the buyer held up his hand and said:

"I'm afraid I can't understand you. Call again when you're sober."

The salesman turned scarlet with mortification and rage.

"B-b-b-but"—

"No," said the buyer, waving him resolutely toward the door, "not now—when you're sober."

And the infuriated salesman departed.—Washington Star.

Macaulay as a Talker.

Where Macaulay's talk failed is clearly shown by Greville. "If he could travel less heavily on the ground, if he could touch the subjects he handles with a lighter hand, if he knew when to stop as well as he knows what to say, his talk would be as attractive as it is wonderful." It is all summed up in the sentence, "He gave society more than it required and not exactly of the kind." Macaulay, in fact, suffered from excess of the first requisite of talk, according to Johnson—"materials." As Sir Henry Taylor said, "His memory had swamped his mind." Flashes of ignorance as well as of silence are necessary to the perfect talker. And so, as has been said, Macaulay often exhausted his audiences before he exhausted the subject.—London Chronicle.

An Even Break.

Mr. Jinks—You've spent fourteen mortal hours and $35 and what have you got to show for it? One hat worth about $3.50. Mrs. Jinks—Trite. And last week you spent five days and $118, and what have you got to show for it? One fish story about a big trout that got away and an awful cold in your head.—Country Gentleman.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious—merry bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

both protects and beautifies—and has many distinct advantages over hand-mixed and cheap paints. It covers more surface—and does it more thoroughly; it is easy to apply, enabling your painter to do the work in less time; it wears from two to three years longer than ordinary paint and holds its color well; it fails only by gradual wear and leaves a good surface for repainting.

Changed Times.

In a meadow a half dozen young women golf players were practicing putting. They looked very smart in their trim golf suits, their skirts of rough homespun and their scarlet jackets. An old farmer and one of his farm hands approached.

"Boss," grumbled the farm hand, "them girls in the medder is scarin' our cows."

"Ah, Timothy," he said with profound truth, "times is changed since I was young. In them days the cows scared the gals."—Washington Star.

The Troubles of a Giant.

George Cumberland saw the famous giant Obrian Boro in the Strand in London in 1784, and in "The Cumberland Letters," edited by Clementine Black, gives this note on him: "His hand, from the ball of his thumb, actually measures eleven inches and a half and is large in proportion. When I stood up I could just with my forefinger touch the bottom of his chin—in a word, he is eight feet three inches high, and his bones are in proportion large—but the poor devil seems to be dying for want of air and exercise. He is nineteen years of age and expects to be nine feet high."

Curious Russian Law.

Russia has a law which to outside observers seems almost to put a premium on theft by which stolen goods become the property of the thief if he can prove that he has had possession of them for over five years. In the thieves' market—which is, of course, licensed by the police—goods that admittedly have been stolen (more than five years before) are openly offered for sale, and the place is a veritable Mecca for the light fingered gentry and their enterprising friends, as also for the more honest members of society, who secure many a tempting bargain.

One on Bernard Shaw.

It is not often that George Bernard Shaw is worsted in an argument, but on one occasion at least he met his match. He was at a dinner party when a young lady guest professed to be able to read character from writing. "G. B. S." scouted the idea. Now, it so happened that their host had just got a typewriter, and Mr. Shaw remarked that there at least was one kind of writing that would reveal nothing of a person's character. The young lady stood by her guns and declared that she could even read character from type as well as from handwriting, whereupon the famous dramatist challenged her to try.

Picking out his letters one by one on the machine, he wrote his name, but, as he was not used to handling a typewriter, when he had finished it read like this, "BERNARD shaw."

"Your character is as plain as day," said the young lady triumphantly. "It is your idea that, although there are a good many Shaws in the world, they are an undistinguished lot. But you think that you alone are Bernard and your name is great."

After that "G. B. S." admitted himself beaten.

GOD'S BENEDICTION UPON HIS PEOPLE

Conditions for Having and Abiding Under It.

What This Means to Spiritual Israel —Not Earthly Prosperity and Luxuries, but Favor, Rest, Protection, Joy—Those Thus Blessed Must Be Sympathetic and Helpful —The Only True Gospel—The New Commandment—The Christian's Proper Loyalty to His King and to His Comrades—Cultivation of Thankfulness Essential.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Dayton, Ohio, May 14.—Pastor Russell spoke here to-day from the text, "The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace." —Numbers 6: 24-26.) He said:

While many blessings were pronounced in olden times upon the Natural Israelites, we are not to forget that Natural Israel was a picture of Spiritual Israel. All of God's blessings to the natural seed of Abraham are still more abundantly applicable to the Church of Christ, which is the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. If the Lord shall bless us, will it mean that we shall have temporal prosperity? This is by no means certain; for temporal prosperity is not the promise to Spiritual Israel. To this class the blessing of the Lord is of a far higher kind than this.—1 Corinthians 10:11; Galatians 3:29; John 16)33.

The Lord's blessing was very richly with our Lord Jesus Christ and with His Apostles. Yet they did not have fine houses or chariots or great luxury of any kind. Therefore in wishing you the blessing of the Lord we are not wishing you earthly prosperity, but rather whatever the Lord may see best to give you as His children. The Bible treats the Church of Christ from the standpoint of a New Creation. Not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit, does our God deal with us. The Bible keeps before our minds continually the thought that those who have consecrated their hearts and their lives to the Lord are dead, so far as the flesh is concerned. (Romans 8:10; Ephesians 2:5; Colossians 3:3.) They are to be dead to fleshly hopes, ambitions, and pursuits, but alive toward God, alive to the Heavenly promises and ambitions, alive to the glory, honor, and immortality promised to the faithful overcomers, alive to the things which God has set before us in His Word. To this class our text is applicable.

The thought of having the light of God's countenance upon us is a beautiful one. It means that He will look graciously toward us, will give us His favor, His protection, His blessings; that there shall be rest and peace in our hearts. It is inspiring to think that the Almighty One who inhabiteth Eternity is our Father; and that He is prepared to do for us everything that could be expected from an almighty, gracious loving Father—provided that we are His children, that we have accepted His terms in Christ.

It does not matter to us, therefore, whether men shall bless us or whether they shall curse us. They cursed both our Lord Jesus and His Apostles. Moreover, it was largely the chief religionists who did this. Our Lord said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you." This hate came particularly from the religious world. "If ye were of the world," the Master continued, "the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15: 18-25; 1 John 3: 11-13.

God Seeks Strong Characters.

Our Lord proceeds to tell us that it is only a natural thing that darkness should be opposed to light. It has always been so, both physically and morally. Physical darkness cannot be in the same place with light; for the light swallows up the darkness, so to speak. Spiritual light works in the same way. If not quenched, it will scatter the darkness. In proportion, therefore, as your life emanates the light in the home, at your work, or in any other place, there will be opposition from those who are under the dominion of the Prince of Darkness. (John 3: 19-21; 1 John 2: 8-11.) This class do not wish to have the light reveal and thus rebuke their darkness, do not wish to have the Lord's way; for they have plans and projects of their own that would be thwarted by the way of the Lord.

But it is not for us to succumb to opposition. On the contrary, we are to overcome, to be faithful to the light, and to let it shine before men. Only to the overcomer is the proposition made that he shall sit down with Christ in His Throne. (Revelation 3:21.) The Lord is not looking for a company of weaklings, without moral and spiritual backbone. Those who will sit with Him on the Throne must receive the new spirit, the new disposition, the new mind, the mind of Christ, and must maintain it.

While these overcomers will not be contentious in the objectionable sense of the word, they will nevertheless "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," as the Apostle enjoins. (Jude 3.) This they will not do with fleshly bitterness, however; for at the same time they will be developing the fruits of the Holy Spirit—patience, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love. (Galatians 5: 22, 23.) These are the fruits that must appear in those who have received the Spirit of God.

Our main overcoming is in ourselves. We are to rule our spirit, to exercise self-control, to "be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might." We are to overcome our own natural preferences, our weaknesses, the spirit of the world in ourselves. This is our first victory. Then there are things that we are to overcome in the way of opposition from the Adversary and his servants. (Romans 6:16.) We may never "give place to the Devil," never yield to that which would be in opposition to the Lord and His Cause. But we are to be ready to lay down our lives in support of "the Truth as it is in Christ Jesus." We are not to contend about little matters that are purely personal, and that would not affect the Truth. We should be ready to waive any personal preferences where no principle of righteousness is involved. But where principle is at stake, we must stand fast. We may not compromise principle.

Responsibility Upon Christians.

When we look back to the time when the bishops of the Church began to call themselves "apostolic bishops," we can see what injury the compromising spirit has wrought in the world. Then it was that the Divine arrangement was set aside, and the creeds of men were substituted for God's Word. The Apostle Paul says, "The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." (2 Timothy 3: 16, 17.) No matter who may seek to teach us, we must not receive the teaching except as it is proved to be in full accord with the Word of God. Men have been in error in the past, and often are in error now.

We are to look for a "thus saith the Lord" to be back of all teachers and teachings. If anyone comes to us with any doctrine that cannot be proved by the words of our Lord Jesus or of the Apostles or of the Prophets, we should not accept it. St. Paul warns, "Though an angel from Heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Galatians 1: 6-9.) Even the angels are not authorized to be the teachers of the Church, as shown in the Word of God.

As we seek to be overcomers, seek to be wholly faithful to the Lord, and as we trust His promises, we abide in His love. As our Lord Jesus said: "If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love." (John 15:10.) He did not force these commandments upon us. He merely pointed out to us the opportunity and the privilege of becoming His disciples. Then we voluntarily said, "Dear Lord, we desire to be Thy disciples. We desire to give up all earthly interests in order that we may share with Thee in Thy sacrifice. Enroll us amongst Thy followers—this is our prayer." After we have been accepted of the Lord, He says to us, "Now, in harmony with your request, I give you these commandments. They are your instructions as to how to walk in My ways. If you wish to be faithful disciples and to continue in My love, keep these injunctions."

While our Lord endorsed the Ten Commandments given to Natural Israel, He made it plain that the essence of them all was contained in the one broad command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength; and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matthew 22: 37-40; Luke 10:27.

The "New Commandment."

To His disciples the Master said, "A new commandment I give unto you." (John 13: 34, 35.) This was an additional commandment, which went beyond the Law; for it means sacrificial love. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13.) This is the love which our Lord Jesus had for us. If we have the same love for the brethren that He manifested, then we have the self-sacrificing love. The Apostle John says, "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because He [Christ] laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16.) Our Master laid down His life for us. This is the measure of His love; and we are to love as He loved.

If we are true disciples, true followers of the Master, we shall be willing to lay down our lives for the brethren. We are to love and to desire to help all who love the Lord. We are to be forbearing and long-suffering with their frailties. Otherwise we cannot remain under the benediction of our text.

The Apostle Paul says that if we bite and devour one another we are in danger of being consumed one of another. (Galatians 5:15.) There would be a continual clash and warfare; and we would die as New Creatures. In order to glide along together without much friction we need much of the lubricating oil of the Holy Spirit. More and more we should learn to appreciate the good qualities of the Lord's people, to learn the lesson that if God shows favor to anyone we have sufficient reason for loving that one.

Whether or not we can see anything to admire in another of the Lord's people is another question. No matter how uncouth one may be according to the flesh, we must love him and be patient with him until he learns to do better; for we must recognize that the Lord must have seen honesty of heart there or He would not have received that one as His child. This does not mean that we are to ignore serious faults in the brethren, and to make no kindly effort to assist them to overcome their weaknesses and blemishes; but that as long as they give evidence of trying to do the Lord's will we should be patient, sympathetic, and brotherly with them.

Thoughts for Christ's Soldiers.

There are many lessons which the children of God may learn from the armies of the warring European nations. What heroism these soldiers are manifesting as they fight for their various countries. Because of patriotism or some other motive, those men over there endure most terrible conditions. If men will thus endure from love of country, what should the Lord's people be willing to endure for the Heavenly country? If these soldiers do such things for earthly kings, princes, and captains, what shall we do for the great Ruler of the Universe, who is our Captain and our King? How shall we fulfil our obligation as soldiers of the Cross of Christ?

As we consider how these soldiers of the warring armies labor under such unfavorable circumstances and conditions as are reported from time to time, in contrast with the favorable conditions which we enjoy, we should feel an increase of courage. We should be ashamed of anything like cowardice, of anything of disloyalty, when we see these earthly soldiers, without any such hope as inspires the soldiers of the Cross, without the backing of the Holy Spirit, yet displaying such courage and loyalty to their rulers. If they so endure, "what manner of persons ought we to be?"—2 Peter 3:11.

No matter what may have been their station in life, when these soldiers get into the ranks they are fighting for one general cause. If they had difficulties with one another before, this is all left behind in their desire to serve the common cause. In their fight against the common foe they must stand together; for they are enlisted under the direction of one commander, and they are fighting for the one ruler.

Likewise the followers of our Lord Jesus are all soldiers under one great Captain—our Lord. We are all enlisted under the banner of the Heavenly King, not for a few years, but until death. We have a common foe; and we are all children of one Father. We have not entered upon this warfare to engage hardship and trial, it is a battle all the way down to the close of our earthly life.

Closing Words of Benediction.

May the blessing of our text be our portion. May "the Lord bless thee and keep thee!" May each one of us enjoy the blessing of the Lord day by day! But should any one desire to leave Him at any time, He will not hold such a one back; for it was by giving up our own will that we were accepted by the Lord at all. Our remaining with Him is altogether a voluntary matter.

"The Lord make His face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace." As the Scriptures show, the peace of God is not that peace which comes from having no enemies to overcome, no difficulties to surmount. We have enemies within and without; and we shall have them, down to the end of our sojourn in the flesh; for we are assured that those who will receive the Kingdom will be those whose love will have been thoroughly tested on the way. Those who do not love the Lord their God with all their hearts, those in whom self or some other idol has first place, will be seduced by the world, the flesh, or the Adversary into some form of rebellion against the Divine Word or the Divine providences. They will have theories and projects which they will prefer to the Divine Plan.

Whoever escapes all trials, temptations, and difficulties has every reason to doubt that he is really in relationship to God as a son; for if he were a son, the Lord would surely find it necessary to give him trials and testings. (Hebrews 12:61.) But with the trials comes the blessed assurance that the Lord has permitted them, and that therefore some blessing will result to those who are rightly exercised thereby. The Master said, "Peace I leave with you; My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." (John 14:27.) He also declared that His peace would be of a kind that we might have in the midst of trials and tribulations.

"Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one Body; and be ye thankful," urges the Apostle Paul. (Colossians 3:15.) We have great reason to cultivate thankfulness. The more we study the matter the more we shall see how much we have to thank God for. If our hearts are filled with thanksgiving, all murmuring and repining will be crowded out; for there will be so much discerned for which to praise the Lord that there will be no room for ingratitude. As we go onward in the narrow way, we should note all of our blessings, both great and small. If we have trials, difficulties, and perplexities, we should realize that these are all working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Thus will the Lord bless us and cause His face to shine upon us. Thus will He lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace.

We trust that more and more we are coming to appreciate this peace of God, which passes all human understanding. May the Lord grant each of us more and more the wisdom, grace, strength, and peace needful to enable us to press on in the narrow way to the end of our course! "Faithful is He that hath called you, who will also do it." He will do "exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think, according to the riches of His grace" and His loving-kindness in Christ Jesus our Lord. Blessed are they that put their trust in Him! "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereas we are glad."—Psalm 126:3.

RAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.
Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A real Guarantee

To be more than a mere "scrap of paper," a guarantee must be absolute—and backed by a concern able and willing to make it good.

The General's guarantee is not only absolute; it is backed by a business operating the world's largest roofing mills, and making one-third of all the roll roofing made in America. That's the guarantee behind

Certain-teed Roofing

The guarantee is for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply (1, 2 or 3). There is no evasion about it—no attempt to substitute a high-sounding something "just as good." There is no substitute for a real guarantee. You get an absolute guarantee on CERTAIN-TEED because the General knows that no better roofing can be made. Its raw materials and method of manufacture are both certified by the General's board of graduate chemists, and he knows he's taking no chance in guaranteeing them to you. That's what "CERTAIN-TEED" means—certified and guaranteed. Experience has proven that the guarantee is conservative, and that CERTAIN-TEED will outlast the period of guarantee.

The roofing felt, as it comes done dry from the rollers, is given a thorough saturation of a special blend of soft asphalts, the formula of the General's board of expert chemists. It is then given a harder coating of another blend of asphalts. This keeps the inner saturation soft, and prevents the drying-out process so destructive to ordinary roofing. Roofing is impervious to the elements only so long as the asphalt saturation lasts. CERTAIN-TEED retains its soft saturation, and is in good condition for years after the harder, drier kinds have become useless.

CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls; also in slate-covered shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roofs, from the largest sky-scraper to the smallest residence or out-building.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers all over the world, at reasonable prices. Investigate it before you decide on any type of roof.

FOOTBALLS.

They Are Not Made of Pigskin and the "Bladders" Are Rubber.

When you refer to football players as pigskin chasers, state that Smithy can boot the pigskin, you display considerable ignorance, said a member of a firm which manufactures the spheroids used on many of the big and little gridirons.

For the football is not made of pigskin at all. In fact, no part of the lowly but luscious porker enters into its construction.

Football covers are made from the material that goes to make your best shoes—calfskin. And only the very best grade of skin is used for good balls. Cheap balls, such as kids buy at the corner store, are made of sheepskin. The bladder which is in the ball is rubber.

A visit to the factory where the greatest number of footballs are turned out elicits more interesting information. For instance, a shop sage says that the reason the ball is called pigskin is that in the old days a pig's bladder was used to give buoyancy to the ball. The bladder has been discarded and rubber substituted.

The regulation intercollegiate ball weighs from thirteen and one-quarter to fourteen ounces. The soccer ball weighs from thirteen to fifteen ounces.

Skins for football covers are carefully inspected and are sent to the factory after special treatment. The slightest flaw in a hide means rejection.

In the cutting room skill is required to prevent waste. Cutting is done with machinery. The cutter divides the hide into as many oval sections as possible and sends the pieces to the girls who take up the next stage, which consists of carefully lining the leather with cotton twill. This is the only work intrusted to girls. It is slow and must be done perfectly.

The liners are stitched together on one machine and the covers on another. From the last machine the covers come wrong side out, and the better grades are reversed by hand. The cheaper are turned right side out by machinery.

Turning a football cover by hand requires great strength. Some men do nothing else and as a result become exceptionally strong of hand, wrist and arm.

The rubber bladder is inserted, and when inflated the oval begins to look like the finished product now seen on many fields, but the ball is not ready for delivery. It is stamped on a hot press and "worked" until its outer surface is ready for the kickoff.

Although the game has changed greatly, the ball remains about the same as the old Rugby.

CONQUEST OF THE AIR.

First Public Flight of an Aeroplane in This Country.

In "The Curtiss Aviation Book" Glenn Curtiss describes the first public aeroplane flight in America, in the days before any one had ever heard of the young Yankee inventor, and he was experimenting with Alexander Graham Bell and others:

"Baldwin climbed into the seat, took the control in hand, and we cranked the motor. When we released our hold of the machine it sped over the ice like a scared rabbit for two or three hundred feet and then, much to our joy, it jumped into the air. This was what we had worked for through many long months, and naturally we watched the brief and uncertain course of Baldwin with a good deal of emotion.

"Rising to a height of six or seven feet, Baldwin flew the unheard of distance of 318 feet 11 inches! Then he came down ingloriously on one wing. As we learned afterward, the frail framework of the tail had bent and the machine had flopped over on its side and dropped on the wing, which gave way and caused the machine to turn completely around.

"It had taken just seven weeks to build the machine and get it ready for the trial; it had taken just about twenty seconds to smash it. But a great thing had been accomplished. We had achieved the first public flight of a heavier than air machine in America!"

Tacking Explained.

"What do people mean when they talk about tacking?" asked Bobby, who had listened to a detailed account of his sister's first experience in a sail boat, but in considerable confusion of mind.

"Oh, you'll know when you're a little bit older," said his sister, but the small round face wore an expression of injury, and she had to explain further.

"Why, it's just turning halfway round," she said, with slight hesitation, "and then—and then you sail on the other."

COMMERCIAL WAR KEEN AFTER ARMS ARE PILED

Europe Will Not be Exhausted, Claim United States Experts—Belligerents Will Have Super-organized Business

A vast industrial re-organization throughout Europe within five years after the end of the present war is predicted in a recent issue of "The Americas," a bulletin issued by the Foreign Trade Department of the National City Bank. It predicts that instead of being exhausted industrially by the war Europe will have learned a lesson in organization which will make the countries now fighting more formidable competitors for world trade than ever when the war is over. "The first five years of peace are expected to answer certain big questions that have come up in the minds of men watching war-time developments in the industries of Europe," according to the bulletin.

Europe at High Speed

"The questions and their answers have a considerable significance for industry. The gist of these questions is this: Will Europe, or a vigorous part of it, come back to commercial competition with the makings of better industrial organization than existed before the war, so that, in spite of being poorer through the war's destruction, some of the countries will actually put on higher speed in manufacture and commerce than ever before?

Britain Nationalized

"Nearly everybody appears to expect that Germany, if intact and under the leadership of the Imperial Government, will carry still further the principle of active Government interposition in the control of industry and trade, looking toward national co-ordination of everything. The people of England and France are individualistic in enterprise as yet. But if the war is prolonged, and necessity compels all the nations to continue or to go steadily further in nationalizing business activities for the purposes of war, nobody knows how the war may leave its permanent impress on the organization of manufacture and commerce. In fact, if the war should end in a draw the further concentration of industry that Germany is reported to have already decided upon as a national policy in case of that outcome might force, by production, something of the same kind in England and in France. Russia is naturally inclined to a certain measure of it. Japan has already gone farther than Germany in the imperialization of business.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S APRON DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

In making the girlie a garment for general wear or a frock for school or play hours we keep in mind that comfort is the first consideration—then add any interesting touches that you think necessary, but without making the laundering of such frock a work of labor. For vacation time who may begin now to plan, and an apron dress that will serve in many directions, before and during that time, is shown in No. 7,714. This dress developed in chambray, gingham, percale or anything on that order in wash materials will be very satisfactory. The pattern provides for separate bloomers—if you want the model to supply as more than an apron. The square neck has piping in solid color and down the left side of the front where the closing is made. The use of the right color for piping will tone up the dress and add to its style. A pocket at either side of the front is for decorative and utility purposes, and there is ample fullness at the lower edge. Sleeves may be long or short. Bloomers are cut full and elastic is used for the leg edges.

This pattern is cut in sizes 4 to 10 years. To copy in size 6 years use 3¼ yards 36 inch material for the dress and bloomers or for the dress alone 2 yards goods the same width.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Search For The Tin Box

The local police had come and gone, several private detectives had come and gone; men and boys, attracted by the reward, had peered and groped about the place, into the house, the cellar, the barn, through the orchard, woods, everywhere, over every square rod of the hundred or more acres, and gone.

And at last, with nearly a year gone, the offerer of the reward was alone with his daughter, who had suffered the loss. Two servants were in the kitchen, a gardener and chauffeur in the room over the garage. They, too, had taken part in the search for a time, and then, with loss of hope, their interest had gone.

The offered of the reward was pacing the floor, an anxious look on his face. The daughter sat in front of the piano idly strumming the keys. But her thoughts were evidently on the same subject as her father's for when he said "Only one week longer, Edna," she nodded and added, "Not a bit of hope left, of course."

"Not a bit," her father said gloomily. "Next Monday the law will turn the property over to your worthless cousin."

"It's a shame," declared the girl. "Aunt Margaret wanted me to have her fortune, for she despised Cousin Oswald. That's why she made the will leaving it to me. Oswald's a little nearer than we are, and would come into the fortune under the law but for a will. Aunt Margaret told me all about it before she died. She said Oswald was so dissipated he'd run through the fortune in a year, and that she'd left him an annuity, which would be worth more to him than the whole fortune in his hands. She gave me the will for fear Oswald might be prying round, or bribe some of the servants to.,"

"And you gave it to me for safety," said the father, with emphatic self-disgust in his voice. "Safety and I showed such a lack of business sense as to put it in my desk instead of having it properly filed and put on record. Where it's gone is a mystery that I'm afraid will never be solved."

"Could Oswald——"

"No, I believe the cause is some accidental one that nobody has chanced upon. The creditors have been holding off with the expectation that you would come in for some of your aunt's money. Just as soon as they find out it goes to Oswald they'll close in on us. The mortgage on our home is very little, comparatively, and wouldn't call for a hundredth part of the fortune, and yet is is far beyond and possibility of our raising. It seems——"

There was a tap on the door, which a maid opened, and stood aside for a young man to enter. 'Colonel Brooks!' he began, inquiringly, when the girl hurried forward.

"Why, Page Withrow!" she exclaimed, holding out both hands. "However in the world did you come here?" Then, to her father. "It's a boy who was at Swarthmore during my first year there. He was a mighty nice boy, too," with a mischievous glance at the newcomer—'good at both athletics and books and a favorite with everybody. Then he disappeared"

"Had to,' 'broke in Page Withrow, the anxiety with which he had entered now replaced by a grin. 'Money gave out. You see, I earned that first year by planting and selling ten acres of potatoes and a loan for the other years was promised by an uncle. But, when I went for it he backed out. Said he didn't believe in education for wergimuk aored rfolfwaw owiy for workingmen, anyhow. Since then I've been studying evenings, and at odd times and working at book canvassing and teaching school and reporting for a newspaper. Last winter I drummed mouse traps in Florida. Then I went back to the newspaper and ferreted out some counterfeiters, for which I got a small reward. Everybody said there was a better chance in the north, so I came up and have spent my money trying to find it. Yesterday I happened to drift into the next town, trying to sell some books, and heard of your loss. So I'm here to ask for a chance to do some more detective work, though I never dreamed of finding Miss Brooks of Swarthmore."

The colonel had stepped forward and shaken hands with his daughter's schoolmate, but at the last sentence he shook his head. "Better stick to your canvassing, Mr. Withrow," he advised. "It will pay better. Every detectives and policemen have shifted on every foot of the house and farm. My only theory is that in some unaccountable way the will got among some waste papers and was burned."

"I only ask the same privilege of looking as 'the others,' urged Page, "surely you'll grant that, and give me such information as you can."

"You're welcome to go ahead if you can't to, of course. I merely warn you there's nothing in it, and there are only seven days left."

During the next five days they occasionally saw him about the place and twice he came in to ask them some question. On the sixth, when he came into the library for this purpose, the colonel smiled a little wearily.

"I think I ust have answered that question about 100 times, to as many reward hunters," he said. Of course you haven't struck any clue?"

"Nothing definite, sir—only theory," Page answered. "But I shall work it up. I've found a little black girl of ten, Cindy who seems a privileged character in the house on account of her quaint ways and original remarks. She spends a good deal of time in this library, playing with the stuffed bear's head of the rug and watching the fire. When I questioned her, as I did the others, she grew sullen and refused to answer. That made me suspicious, for she was plainly frightened about something. After that I changed my tactics and tried to win her confidence. I gave her my penknife and made her whistles and dolls, and so got her to chattering. In brief, about a year ago—known because it was apple butter making time, as it is now—Cindy picked up a tin cigarette box of the colonel's. It pleased her very much, because when she pressed a spring the lid flew open. She called it her post-office and pretty soon began to hunt about for envelopes or letters to put into it. But none seemed to be of just the right size. One day, when alone in the room, she climbed on the desk and began to open drawers. Finally she found a paper that just fitted into the box. She didn't steal it, she declared, but hearing steps in the hall she sprang down and slipped off to the kitchen."

"The black rascal!" cried the colonel excitedly. "I've warned her never to get within touching distance of that desk! Maybe that paper was the will. What became of it?"

"Cindy declares to gracious she losted it. Her mother remembers to have seen the child playing with a tin box among the cores and parings of the apples she was getting ready for apple butter making. She was paring and quartering for nearly a week, she says. Cindy doesn't remember a thing about the tin box after it was 'lost-ed.' Her mother threw the cores and parings to some cows in an enclosure near the barn."

The colonel dropped back upon his chair. "Every inch of that enclosure, like all the rest of the place has been gone over and over," he groaned. "So there's no hope from that clue."

"Looks that way." Page agreed. "But there's a doubt, and I believe in following up a doubt until it explodes. The gardener says that a lot of cows were driven into the inclosure for a veterinary to examine and were condemned. They were killed, but he doesn't know what became of the bodies. Some stray negroes were about that day and he hired them to bury them. But he doesn't know where, I've searched the farm and the orchard from side to side, but can't locate the spot. I don't suppose you have any idea?"

"No."

"Well, I'll go back and renew the search then and see if I can't call a sixth sense to aid!"

The next day the colonel and his daughter were sitting in the library. One more day and all hope of the fortune would be at an end. A step across the hall.

Page opened the door and came in. He went directly to the colonel. "Is that the will?" he asked, offering a folded paper.

A hasty glance and the colonel sprang wildly to his feet. "Where—where'd you find it, boy?" he demanded, almost incoherently.

"Out in the orchard."

"But that's been searched over and over again."

"I know. I've searched it over that way myself. And the last two days I've searched it over and over. This morning I noticed an apple tree with more growth on one side than on the other. That seemed positive evidence. I rushed for a spade and dug down into a mass of bones under the thrifty side of the apple tree, and found the tin box."

"No one else in the world would have thought of it," declared the colonel, looking over the will beamingly. "I shall double that thousand dollars reward."

"No, no," protested Page, "only just what I earned. I shall take the thousand and go back to Swarthmore."

"But I must do something more to help pay that debt, objected the colonel. "At least, you can come and spend your vacations with us."

Page glanced toward the girl, who nodded slightly. "All right," he agreed, "and thank you. I'll be glad to do that, for I haven't any home of my own."

GENIUS AND VANITY.

Schopenhauer Was Not a Bit Afraid to Praise Himself Out Loud.

Schopenhauer, the great German philosopher, afforded one of the most remarkable examples of self complacency that has ever been known. His naive eulogisms on his own productions are almost beyond belief. In writing to his publishers of his work he says:

"Its worth and importance are so great that I do not venture to express it even toward you because you could not believe me," and he proceeds to quote a review "which speaks of me with the highest praise as the greatest philosopher of the age, which is really saying much less than the good man thinks."

"Sir," he said to an unoffending stranger who watched him across a table d'hote where he acted the part of the local "lion" habitually—"sir, you are evidently astonished at my appetite. True, I eat three times as much as you, but then I have three times as much mind."

Auerbach, the German novelist, also had a great appreciation of his own powers and work, and many stories are told of the obtrusive way in which he displayed his vanity. A German writer says of him: "Every year Auerbach visits three or four fashionable watering places, at each of which the following episode occurs at least thirty times. The novelist indulges in small talk with the little children of the natives and invariably ends the conversation thus: 'Knowest thou who has been talking with thee? Behold Auerbach! Tell that at home!'"

An Important Man.

"Always boasting, eh?"

"Yes; everything connected with him is always in the superlative. Even when he had a cataract on his eye it was a regular Niagara."—Kansas City Journal.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT'S TRIAL FOR HIGH TREASON COMMENCED TO-DAY

Fxchanged English Soldiers Testify That Casement Tried to Induce Irish Soldiers in Germany to Join the German Army---Auxiliary Sunk Off the Irish Coast Carried 20,000 Rifles and a Million Rounds of Ammunition---French Score a Success South of Somme.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 15.—Clad in a heavy dark suit, with frayed sleeves, Sir Roger Casement, once a favourite in the British Consular Service, went to trial to-day in the Bow Street Police Court on the charge of high treason, punishable by hanging, in his case, with a silken cord.

Sir Roger entered the court-room smiling and nodding to some of the men who knew him before he was knighted. His face was covered with a stubby greenish gray beard that gave his best smiles a ghastly look.

He wore a pair of shoes requisitioned from the stocks of the British Army.

Bow Street was packed.

Casement was accompanied to the prisoners' dock by Daniel Bailey, a soldier arrested in Ireland.

In his statement, Attorney-General Smith declared the Crown would prove that Sir Roger plotted not only the Irish rebellion but planned to land expeditions in Ireland and at several other places on the British coast.

"Several exchanged English prisoners will testify to this effect," he said.

Smith said that the vast majority of the Irish prisoners in Germany treated Casement's overtures with contempt.

"As a result," added the Attorney-General, "they were punished by the Germans, and the quantity of rations allotted them each day was reduced. A few, unfortunately, were seduced. Among these was the soldier Daniel Bailey, who occupies the prisoners' dock with Casement to-day."

"The German auxiliary, sunk off the Irish coast at the time Sir Roger Casement landed, carried 20,000 rifles, a million rounds of ammunition, ten machine guns and many bombs destined for the Irish rebels," Attorney-General Smith declared.

The first witness for the Crown was Police Inspector Parker. Parker testified that when Casement was first arrested he made no attempt to save himself, but insisted that Baily was innocent.

John Robinson, an Irishman, formerly a corporal in the British Army, was the next witness. Robinson was a prisoner in one of the German military camps visited by Casement. He testified that Casement visited 300 Irishmen in his camp, offering $50 to each one who would desert the British colours. Robinson said he refused.

"About fifty of the 300 Irishmen accepted the offer and enlisted in the German Army," Robinson said. His testimony was corroborated by that of John Cronin, another exchanged prisoner. Cronin said they were promised that if Germany emerged from the war defeated, the German Government would pay their transportation to America.

The Crown reserved much of its evidence for the formal trial to be held later. Enough was presented to-day, however, at the preliminary hearing to show that Casement planned, with German aid, to land not only one but several expeditions on the coast of Ireland and elsewhere on the British Isles.

Attorney-General Smith presented a statement from Bailey, a British prisoner in Germany, who confessed details of the plot. After deserting the British Army, Bailey said he was summoned to Berlin, and ordered to accompany Sir Roger aboard a submarine. The collapsible boat in which they left the submarine on approaching the Irish coast overturned, Bailey said, and he and Casement reached the shore with some difficulty. They went to shop in Tralee, where Sir Roger was to meet a rebel leader, but learned that he had not arrived. Bailey said he was arrested as he entered the motor car that was to drive them to the rebel meeting place.

Testimony that an American priest, Father Nicholson, aided Sir Roger in attempting to secure recruits for the German Army from among Irishmen prisoners at Limberg Prison Camp was offered by Daniel O'Brien, an exchanged prisoner, this afternoon. Michael O'Connell, annother exchanged Irish prisoner, gave similar testimony.

Seizing American Mail

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The State Department is collecting a mass of figures showing how far Great Britain has gone in seizing American mail. Secretary Lansing declared to-day that the entire subject of mails here "is under consideration."

The Government will be insistent upon the entire freedom of passage for U. S. mail.

It was learned on high authority to-day that the President, out of patience with the continued holding up of mails, is going to the mat with England on the question. It is probable that the note will be completed in a short time.

The Government has received during the last few weeks many protests from business men in this country and abroad regarding the inconveniences resulting from mail delays. The State Department already has sent one protest to England on this subject, but the reply was unsatisfactory. Increasing inconvenience has been suffered since that time.

EXPLOSION IN FACTORY CAUSES DEATH OF TEN

Terrible Accident in the Gibbstown Plant of the Du Pont Co.—30 People Were Injured

CONTRACT FOR ALLIES

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.— It is announced that ten people were killed and 30 injured in an explosion at the Gibbstown plant of the Du Pont Powder Co., according to a telegraph message from Woodbury this afternoon. They had big contracts for munitions for the Allies.

It is officially announced ten are killed at Gibbstown.

Fourteen Seizures Produced Just $2.15

Horses, Grain, Farm Goods, etc., But Expenses of Sales Were Considerable—Very Much So

Mr. O. A. Langley's estimated fourteen seizures on Leamon Garnsey's property to cover an initial mortgage of $200, which had grown to $292.89, produced the net sum of $2.15.

The Belmont seizure was a total of $39.85, against which were expenses of $14.40. The Otonabee seizure produced $68, but this was almost counterbalanced by $68.30 expenses.

To summarine for both sales, the total receipts, $102.85; total expenses in connection with sales, $82.70. Balance $20.15. But the law firm of Hall & Hall had a claim for $35, which they had reduced to $18. Hence with this subtracted the grand balance was $2.15. If fourteen seizures produced only $2.15 it is not a difficult mathematical problem to determine the number of seizures that would ultimately produce $292.89, supposing the expenses to be proportionate to those of the Belmont and Otonabee affairs.

608 Pairs of Socks Received

While the required number of socks was not received on Saturday at the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. sock shower on behalf of the 93rd Battalion, the splendid total of 608 pairs were sent into the recruiting room on Simcoe street. The time to receive them has been extended to the 24th, and all those wishing to secure yarn for knitting may secure the same from Mrs. W. H. Hill, Brock street.

Lift Lock Opened For Season To-day

Water was run into the Lift Lock on Saturday and down-coming boats could have taken the drop to-day, but the first navigation is not expected until to-morrow. Mr. A. L. Rillsly, Superintendent of the Canal, stated to-day that no boats were expected over the Life Lock until to-morrow. Everything is in the usual good condition for the season's work.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Richard P. Scrase, 356 Downie street, desires, through this medium, to collectively and cordially thank all those who showed kindness to her during the long illness of her late husband and on the occasion of his death—the Sons of England, her neighbours and the public generally.

OTONABEE CHAPTER I.O.D.E.

A special meeting of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. will be held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. this evening, Monday, May 15th, at 7:15 o'clock.

It is hoped that there will be a large attendance, as business of importance is to be discussed.

Back Up The 93rd

Mayor Duffus has acted promptly. Already the campaign to secure proper equipment for the 93rd Battalion is under way, and the City and County of Peterborough are to be given an opportunity to show their appreciation of their gallant sons who have come forward to do their share in the Empire's struggle. The Examiner wishes on behalf of the 93rd Battalion to thank Mayor Duffus for his business-like response to the appeal.

And now the question is up to the people of the City and County. In a few short days the battalion will be leaving us. In a few months these boys will be out there on the firing line fighting our battles, and some of them are not going to come back. It is too much to hope that all will be spared. They will undergo hardships and ordeals that we can know little of—make sacrifices that we can hardly realise. The best that we can do for them here is only an inadequate recompense for what they will have to go through.

And remember these are our boys, not soldiers gathered from goodness knows where as in some other battalions. Every walk of life in the city is represented in the 93rd—scarcely a factory, a store, a street, that has not representatives in the battalion. And the places in the county from which the boys come have as familiar a sound as the names of our own family. Gallant lads from Apsley and Lakefield, from Norwood and Havelock, from Warsaw and Bridgenorth, from Keene and Indian village, from the townships all around us all uniting to form a battalion that we can be proud of wherever it goes.

It will be a severe tug at the heart strings when the gallant 93rd marches down George street for the last time, but if we have seen that they are provided with every comfort that loving hearts and generous pockets can devise, the grief of parting will be deadened to some extent at least. When we read of their long route marches we can say with a glow of satisfaction—"Well, the boys will appreciate those field kitchens now," and when the weather is bad we can rest content knowing that our gifts have provided the 93rd with adequate shelter. And last, but not least, we can hold our heads up with all the world and say that Peterborough County not only sent out one of the best overseas battalions in the Dominion, but that her citizens saw to it that their battalion was one of the best equipped as well.

Let the response be hearty and immediate.

The service was held near the band stand, and was conducted by Major Davidson, the Chaplain of the battalion. Many citizens gathered in the park, and service was an impressive and hearty one. The band of the 93rd led in the singing of the well-known hymns, "O God our help in ages past," "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Onward Christian Soldiers."

To Raise $10,000 For The Local Battalion

Committee Formed to Start Campaign at Once—City, County and Township Councils Will Be Asked to Co-operate in Work.

EVERYBODY SHOULD HELP

A movement to raise a ten thousand dollar fund for the use of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., was given its initial impulse on Saturday evening when a meeting was held in the City Hall attended by a representative body of citizens, including the City Council, the Speakers' Patriotic League, the Daughters of the Empire, and other local organizations. Lieut.-Col. Johnston, Major R. Watt, and Major W. Lech, were asked to be present to supply the meeting with information as to the needs of the Battalion. It was generally agreed that the cause was a worthy one, and that no time should be lost in placing the 93rd Battalion on a par with other battalions that will go into camp within the course of the next two or three weeks. So far the local unit has not received any assistance with the possible exception of three hundred dollars which the City Council gave for recruiting purposes. In order to maintain a fair standard of efficiency and mobility, it is necessary that the battalion be supplied with such funds as will enable it to purchase field kitchens and other articles that tend to contribute to the welfare of the men. These are not supplied by the militia authorities as is generally supposed.

Will Call Meeting.

After some considerable discussion it was decided to call a meeting on Friday next of all the team captains that participated in the Patriotic Fund and Belgian Relief campaigns. The funds they will collect will supplement the grants that will be made by the City and Township Councils. It was also decided to meet the various township councils who will be asked to make a straight grant irrespective of the grant that may be made by the County Council. After this is done a special canvas of the city will be made for the purpose of giving the public an opportunity of completing the ten thousand dollar fund.

Arrangements have been made to have local speakers visit different sections of the county with a view of presenting the claims of the battalion.

On Saturday evening Mrs. Edward Thebeau, Sherbrooke street, received word from Ottawa, that her husband, Pte. Edward Thebeau, No. 412536, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported admitted to No. 6 Field Ambulance on April 29th suffering from a wound in the left thigh. Pte. Thebeau, who is Canadian born, enlisted here early in 1915 with the 57th contingent to the 39th Battalion, and went overseas with the 39th, afterwards being transferred to another battalion at the front, as were nearly all the other privates in the 39th. The official notice from Ottawa was in French, the Adjutant General's Department being evidently misled by the name. Mrs. Thebeau was unable to read the message and had to have it translated into English.

Word was received yesterday by Mr. Silas Bullied, 231 Princess street, that his son, Pte. Victor Bullied, Canadian Mounted Rifles, is officially reported admitted to No. 1 Canadian General Hospital at Etaples on May 3rd, suffering from a gunshot wound in the head. Pte. Bullied enlisted here with B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles. He has a brother, Pte. Percy Bullied, with the 39th Battalion overseas.

The management of the Empire theatre is particularly pleased with the patronage accorded this photo-play house. In an endeavour to give the citizens of Peterborough pictures by high class artists, pictures you would like to see yourself, or have your mother, wife or children see, there have been many discouragements, which we think are about over. However, we feel there is a demand for our pictures and will continue to give you the best and clearest that can be obtained. To-night and for Tuesday and Wednesday, we have Mary Pickford in "A Girl of Yesterday," and we can only say for this picture that it is one of Miss Pickford's best performances.

Forty Hours' Devotion

The Forty Hours' Devotion, held at the House of Providence, was brought to a close last night at eight o'clock. Very Rev. Dean McColl, of Immaculate Conception church, opened the ceremonies with High mass and recital of the Litany of the Saints.

The first evening devotions were conducted by Rev. J. J. McCarthy, of Norwood, at which he preached a very touching sermon on the love of God for His creatures. The second day was opened by Father McCarthy with High mass, and closed by Very Rev. Dean McColl, with an eloquent discourse on the institution of the Blessed Eucharist.

High mass was sung the last day by Rev. Father Scott, and the devotion brought to a most impressive close by the singing of the Litany of the Saints. Pange Lingua, and prayers by Rev. Father O'Brien and McCauley of Sacred Heart church, and Rev. Father Scott. Father O'Brien's clear, forcible and consoling sermon was much appreciated. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given by Rev. Father McAuley.

DID NOT PRESS CHARGE OF BREAKING THE MOTOR VEHICLE ACT

Lieut. Crisp, of the 93rd Battalion, was the plaintiff in the County Police Court before Magistrate Langley this morning having charged Mr. Perry Alexander with a breach of the Motor Vehicle Act. The complaint alleged that Mr. Alexander had driven a car past a horse and buggy without stopping. The complainant did not appear and the charge was withdrawn, he paying all the costs. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. Alexander, and Mr. Hatton for Lieut. Crisp.

SPECIAL DAYS.

Yesterday, Sunday, was what is called "Mother's Day," when the mothers or the motherhood of the land, were the subject of special services, sermons and services. It is a sweet and blessed thing to hold the memory of a mother sacred, but no one can claim that the infinite debt every born being owes to his or her mother, may be discharged by wearing a flower in one button-hole one day in the year. Mother's Day is every day in the year, and the spirit of it—not a conspicuous exhibition of it one day in the year—should be held in continuous sacred possession and exercise. As a condition mother's day is every day in the year, every day and almost every hour of a day, of tireless devotion and self-sacrifice. How infinitely happy, how cheered, upheld and comforted, the motherhood of Canada would be if every mother's son and daughter, would strive day by day to give to the mother the devotion she deserves, instead of being prodded into thinking of her one day a year and wearing a flower in honour of the living, or in memory of the dead old mother, who had fewer flowers than thorns in her daily pathway in life, and who went earlier to the only rest she knew from the day she became a mother, through the struggling toil, tenderness, devotion and self-sacrifice, that were the warp and woof of her life. "Mother's Day" is a synonym of remorse of conscience when we recall the undone duties, the neglect, the heart-breaking, we have inflicted on her whose every waking moment is full of thoughts and deeds for our welfare; but it is justified as a matter of sentiment, and is useful if it recalls what we are ready to forget, the undying duty we owe to the noblest work of creative Love.

We have other special days. We have "cleaning-up day," which is another concession to sentiment. In domestic and city management clean up up day should be every day. If civic authority should keep our streets and public places clean and wholesome by dint of daily attention; if householders would keep their premises clean and wholesome by dint of daily attention; if the housewife should keep her house clean and wholesome—which she could easily do by the help of her husband—we should have less reason to have a "cleaning up" day, less reason to have the house stood on its head twice a year.

If in the realm of morals we strove to live a life of cleanliness and godliness, day after day, we should not need the chastening discipline of Lent, nor the periodic "revivals of religion" that are found necessary by the church denominations that do not attach importance to Lenten observance. But man is so constituted, that morally and otherwise, life is a continuous process of demoralisation, and the necessity of being warmed over arises. And special days have a merit in that they focus our minds and consciences upon our neglected duties; they suggest postponed recognition, and they affect us upliftingly, if temporarily, by the enthusiasm of numbers and general cooperation. It was indeed well to have observed "Mother's Day" yesterday; and its observance, aside from the special object, will be well worth while, and will be fruitful, if we make it the beginning of a year of mother's days, when the devotion you have forgotten the filial duty that you have neglected, will be extended to every day, the love you have failed in will be shown, and when the blossom you were in honour and memory of motherhood will figuratively grow and multiply in the form of daily kindness, consideration and ministry, into softening flowers of flowers in the hard pathway of mother's life.

If you wish to set a dish on the table, prevent it from sliding by putting a fruit jar rubber under it

TOURISTS AND CANADA.

The people of the United States, where get-rich-quick schemes ripen rapidly and yield good crops, are strong on touring; and if we make things favourable there will be a great descent upon Canada this year. Before the war, United States tourists scattered themselves over Europe; and last summer the attractions of the Panama Exposition turned the tide to California. But the war has closed both tourist play grounds. Europe is self evidently impossible and the Mexican border disturbances eliminate California as a comfortable tourist field. Canada is the only country in the world easily reached that beckons the United States tourist. They will come upon us to fish and fight mosquitoes; they will perhaps descend upon us in touring cars, though our national neglect of good highways may tend to neutralise the fullest measure of advantage from gasoline tourists. In this case, money spent on good roads would have been a good investment. It is estimated that the average American tourist who does Canada, is himself done to the tune of about $75; that is each leaves that much money in the country. So the more the merrier, and anything we can do to encourage our neighbours to spend a part of the summer with us would be, so to speak, self-sustaining. Besides, the sordid advantage of gain is not the only consideration. We believe the people of the United States are good people; we know that Canadians are, and the feeling of mutual respect and esteem now prevalent will be strengthened by getting better acquainted. The government is sympathetic towards United States tourists and has given wide currency to an announcement that visitors from the United States will, at the border, be subjected to the least possible inconvenience, compatible with the interests of His Majesty's Customs and protection against German spies.

EVIL THAT GOOD MAY COME

The Manitoba Free Press is a poor exponent of Liberalism, when it advocates division in the Liberal ranks, as a means of strengthening it. It uses the debate on the bilingual resolution in Parliament and the vote upon it, in an endeavour to show that, because a few western Liberals voted against the Lapointe resolution and other Liberals voted on two sides of the question, there is a split in the Liberal ranks, that would be widened by the remedy it proposes. It is held by the Free Press that the vote will have a sinister effect in Ontario. It says:

"The leadership which has reduced the Liberal representation in the Dominion House from Ontario to 14 out of 86 seats is very strikingly revealed by the division list on the Lapointe resolution, and it will continue to work disaster unless drastic steps to right the situation are taken before the next Dominion election."

This is not the language of true Liberalism. It smacks more of Conservatism, one of whose claims is that of a divine right to office—not assertion of principle. Besides the reduction of the seats in Ontario at the last election, was not due to lack or defect of leadership; it was due to the propogation of a schismatic principle, leading to a breach of national unity, which alone is the condition of national progress and solidarity of organisation for national upbuilding. It was appeal to racial prejudice, plus appeal to capitalistic cupidity, that reduced the Liberal representation of Ontario at the last election. The Free Press seems to fail to foresee the result of what it advocates in these words:

"The time is ripe for western Liberals to decide that they will rely upon themselves, and thus do their own thinking, formulate their own policies, and provide their own leaders."

Surely there are enough forces and influences in play already against national homogeneity and all that that great desideratum implies, without injecting another, and a most fatal one, in the form of an organic split of the party which, since Confederation, has been the chief unifying element in Canadian political life. It is a pity that an academic discussion in the Dominion Parliament, though actually outside its right, to gain better understanding, and reconcile possible misunderstanding, of a vexed question, should be used as a plea for creating more serious misunderstanding and more serious results. It is the reductio ad absurdum of the allopathic principle of curing one disease by creating another.

Bread made from the true and undenatured whole-wheat flour is a true nerve, blood and bone food.

GERMAN HYSTERIA AND THE GERMAN PEACE PROPOSALS

The Kaiser sets his people a bad example by talking too much. There is nothing so catching as hysteria, and half the people of Germany are hysterical to-day. The Entente Allies all take victory for granted, and view with amused contempt the frantic excitement of the Huns who are squealing like rats in a trap, now pitifully pleading for mercy and now savagely threatening revenge and more frightful frightfulness. The calm confidence of the Allies is in striking contrast to the frenzy of the Huns, and seems to be getting on their nerves. The German Emperor is said to have written to President Wilson, appealing to him, as the greatest neutral authority, to urge the western powers "not to prolong indefinitely what seems to him their quite useless efforts of revenge." His Imperial Majesty is not telling the truth. It is precisely because he sees that the Allies' efforts are succeeding that he now roars like a suckling dove.

The Allies, however, are not fighting for revenge. They are fighting that peace may be established upon earth and permanently maintained. They are fighting for the overthrow of Prussianism and Hohenzollernism, and they will not stop until they have secured those ends. Among all the Allies you cannot find a sane man who would not regard anything short of this as failure, and the Allies are not out for failure. Incidentally the Kaiser, and that other arch-scoundrel, von Tirpitz, and some other blackguards, may find it hard to distinguish between the fate in store for them and a righteous vengeance. They are simply suffering from the inexorable law of consequences; which, like the law of the Medes and Persians, altereth not. You can no more change the law of consequences than you can suspend the law of gravitation.

If the Allies are wise they will not recognise the Kaiser in any negotiations for peace. They will only deal with the representatives of the German people, preferably a German Republic. Not even with regard to his own disposal should they hold any discussion with this false, treacherous and most murderous monarch. When Napoleon III. surrendered to King Wilhelm of Prussia there was no discussion with him as to the future of France. There should be none with Wilhelm as to the future of Germany. The man is not to be trusted and even if the Allies were willing to let by-gones be by-gones, we could place no confidence in his assurances. To him they would be mere scraps of paper, which he would feel justified in repudiating, whenever it was in his interest to do so. Peace with Germany is conceivable. Peace with Hohenzollernism or Prussianism is not. The German troops are reported to be living on short rations, which was precisely the object of the British blockade. They will not endure that kind of thing long. They will return home to spread disaffection throughout the German Empire at no distant date. When that time comes the German people will be glad to cooperate with the Allies in re-establishing Germany upon a basis of peace and fair play to all nations.—Montreal Herald.

CEMETERIES ALL OVER STATE MAY GIVE UP THEIR DEAD

Statement That Number of Inmates of Home for Elderly People Were Poisoned, Will Be Thoroughly Investigated—Number of Bodies Exhumed—Woman is Under Arrest.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 11.—Cemeteries all over this State may soon be giving up their dead from the Archer Home for Elderly People at Windsor, Conn., while Mrs. E. Archer Gilligan, its proprietor, is seeking release from prison under a writ of habeas corpus. Benedict M. Holden, her counsel, denounced the treatment of his client by the State detectives and a justice of the peace in Windsor, declaring she was urged to waive a hearing, not employ counsel and go to jail "to avoid notoriety." Mr. Benedict stated that he will seek her release to-morrow under the writ, and as the law of Connecticut is peculiar in this regard, he will apply to the federal court immediately if the local application fails.

All the evidence that any patient of the home was poisoned consists of a report from Dr. Arthur J. Wolff, a chemist, that he had found traces indicating the presence of arsenic in the organs of Franklin R. Andrews, sixty-one years old, of Hartford, who died in the home suddenly on May 30, 1914. His body was exhumed a week ago.

Mrs. Gilligan, whose age is given as forty-one, looks to be past fifty years of life spent in hard labour. Her appearance is stern, almost forbidding, with thin, tightly drawn lips, deep set eyes and a strong chin. She broke into tears, however, and exhibited her first emotion since her arrest Monday night when her daughter, Miss Mary E. Archer, eighteen years old, went to see her mother, accompanied by Mr. Holden, this morning.

The girl is attractive, with pretty blue eyes, and her smart attire today was of an expensive sort. She is a student of music and evidently the object of her mother's great devotion.

May Praise Mrs. Gilligan.

Three of the patients of the home in Windsor were removed to-day by their relatives, and one has been transferred to other quarters by the local prosecutor. He is expected to be a witness against Mrs. Gilligan. Those remaining and many of their relatives who called at the home spoke in strong terms of confidence in Mrs Gilligan, and the aged persons for whom she had cared were, many of them, warm in their testimony of her kindness and attention.

Opinion about the supposed poisoning case is sharply divided here. A local newspaper has been at work for two years seeking to establish a foundation for rumour of crime in the Archer home and actually promoted one investigation, which disclosed nothing improper in its conduct.

Forty-eight persons, all aged, have died in the home in the last five years. All of their bodies may be disinterred and at least four have been exhumed by order of Hugh M. Alcorn, State Attorney of Hartford county. Their identities, except that of Mr. Andrews, have not been disclosed, Mr. Alcorn and the other officials declined to make public any of their activities since the arrest of Mrs. Gilligan.

Neighbourhood creditors of Mrs. Gilligan, the butler, the baker and the like, filed attachments this afternoon against her realty. Her counsel obtained a transfer of the deeds to it from Mrs. Gilligan to himself to protect her.

Dr. Wolff stated this evening that his examination of the organs of Mr. Andrews had disclosed evidences of arsenical poisoning, but that his appointed work of separating the actual arsenic has not yet been done. He announced also that the examinaiton of the specimens from the body exhumed last week had not disclosed any evidence of arsenic.

In reply to questions, Dr. Wolff stated that the second body is not that of Michael W. Gilligan, second husband of Mrs. Archer. He died February 20, 1914, three months after their marriage. Neither was it the body of Mrs. Alice Gowdy, who died December 4, 1914, in the Archer-Gilligan home. Relatives of Mrs. Gowdy whose husband also was placed in the home and $1,000 paid for their care during life, sued Mrs. Gilligan and she repaid a large portion of the one thousand.

"There are a great many elements in this case," said Mr. Holden, "which are irresistibly reminiscent of the exploits of Philo Gubb, the correspondence school 'detectative' and paperhanger. All sorts of boy sleuth reporters have been sleuthing around for years. The official investigators have been at work for years and found nothing. Then a chemist says that there is a trace of arsenic in the body of a man buried two years and a frightful hubbub with charges of wholesale poisoning is the result.

"I did not accept this case until I was personally urged to do so by several of the elderly persons who have lived in Mrs. Gilligan's home. They came to me and told me they would spend their last dollar to prove her innocence, because they knew her, and that the charges against her are untrue. I sent a private detective to the home to-day. The first thing he found was a woman detective, who has been there as a patient for a year. If poison was kept around the place or any crimes committed it seems to me that a detective right in the house ought to have known about it.

"Mrs. Gilligan was arrested and stunned by the charge, was taken in court. When arraigned she asked the court what she would do. She was asked if she desired to be represented by counsel and in the same breath was advised not to do so, but to waive examination and go to jail 'to avoid notoriety.' Robert T. Hurley, the State detective who has been trying to fix murder on Mrs. Gilligan for a year, posed as her friend and adviser in court.

Report of Hurley Proposal.

"Hurley was with Mrs. Gilligan in the jail to-day when Frederick B. Hungerford, a lawyer, sent by her friends, arrived to consult with her. He was delayed by various devices being Hurley was with Mrs. Gilligan presenting a most extraordinary proposal.

"'We have got evidence against you of your poisoning of four persons' Hurley said, according to Mrs. Gilligan's report to me. 'Here, you just sign this one confession that you poisoned Mr. Andrews and we will let the other cases drop. This is what Mrs. Gilligan replied: 'I will sign one statement, and that is, that I never gave Mr. Andrews any medicine or anything like medicine while he was in my house.'

"The Gowdy case is easily explained. Mrs. Gowdy died a natural death, under the care of her own physician, not one supplied by Mrs. Gilligan. Mr. Gowdy was a nuisance. Mrs. Gilligan did not want him to remain in the home. His relatives knew that he was a nuisance and they tried to make Mrs. Gilligan keep him. She paid the relatives $750 of the $1,000 she had received, just to get rid of Gowdy. That left her $250 for the care of the Gowdy couple for a year.

"This whole charge is merely a case of amateur sleuths with influence seeking to compel something tangible for their years of sleuthing. They get a preliminary report from a chemist, not a conclusive report, because traces of arsenic will not kill anybody, and then they declare that a great poisoning plot has been in our midst. Bah!"

Mrs. Gilligan seemed stunned when arrested and arraigned and in the jail. She declined to undress, and sat up all night with her face in her hands, leaning on her bed. At breakfast time she asked for a cup of hot water, and would take nothing else. Mr. Hungerford spent several hours with her, taking a stenographer with him.

George Foster, Mrs. Mary C. Barnstead and Thomas Lee were taken away from the home by relatives today. Others there include Mrs. Mary Wagner, William Humphries, Charles W. Myers, James Andrews and George C. Scott. They also spoke in high terms of Mrs. Gilligan. Andrews said that she always fed him, and his only complaint was that Mrs. Gilligan gave him too much to eat.

Mrs. Emma Mead, daughter of Andrews, went with her husband to the home to-day. The Meads declared that Andrews had always appeared happy and well cared for, and he and the others of the patients of the home with whom they often talked, had always spoken well of Mrs. Gilligan and their care in her establishment.

George R. Maud, Town Clerk and Registrar of Vital Statistics of Windsor, vindicated Mrs. Gilligan in the matter of removal from her home at night of bodies of persons who had died there. He said that he had issued the necessary permits. Mr. Maud declared that several months ago women of the neighbourhood went to him with suggestions that he investigate the death of Mrs. Gowdy in the Archer Gilligan Home. He did investigate, he said, and discovered that the causes of the aged woman's death had been accurately described in the certificate of death.

"I know Mrs. Gilligan well and know how her establishment is conducted," said Mr. Maud. "I am confident of her innocence and that she will be exonerated completely."

One of the disclosures that followed the excitement over the woman's arrest was that she had given $1,500 a few months ago to St. Gabriel's Roman Catholic church, of which the Rev. J. J. Ryan is pastor. The money was used to purchase a pipe organ for the choir and it is now installed there.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A new year is here. It is a time for invoice. Business men take an invoice of their stock. Would it not be business of you to take one of yourself. Life, each life, is a business. Have you gained or lost last year? Have you used the talents that have been given you so as to gain other talents? Is there any prospect of your being placed over ten cities, or five cities or one city? Have you declared any dividends in the way of loving and helping others, and have you added anything to the capital stock of your character? These are pertinent questions that press us all for an answer.

HYPHEN PERIL IN ENGLAND

Naturalized Germans Rounded up for Treasonable Talk.

LONDON, May 3.—Discussing the necessity for the defense of the realm regulations, Herbert Samuel, Secretary for Home Affairs, stated today that within the last few weeks there had been discovered in the heart of London a public house (saloon) occupied by a naturalized German and a resort of other naturalized Germans, whose language of the most treasonable and anti-British character was used. He added that it might have become a most dangerous centre.

Mr. Samuel said he doubted whether any charge could have been formulated under the ordinary law, but it was obviously necessary to deal with such cases, and the powers in his hands enabled him promptly to intern all the men concerned.

The Clan Grant.

The Clan Grant, whose chief, the Earl of Seafield, has been killed in Flanders, has within the last hundred years been called together by fiery cross in defence of its head. It was in 1820, during an election in the city of Elgin, where lived the 5th Earl, a man of weak intellect. His sister, Lady Ann, fearing danger from the excited mob, sent to a youth who afterwards became the famous Field Marshal Sir Patrick Grant, this message: "Young as you are, rally the Highlanders, and come to the rescue of your Chief." He received it coming out of church in Cromdale, and there and then started with three hundred men down Strathspey for Elgin, a fourteen hours' march. Meanwhile he had sent the fiery cross into the remoter glens, summoning the Grants in them to follow with all speed.

Why the Prince Hid.

Lots of stories, old and new, have been told about the Prince of Wales at the front. This is really a true one, says The London Mail. Some Tommies of my acquaintance were discussing the Prince, his likes, dislikes, and general behavior. "I saw him in a blue funk one day," said one of them suddenly. "He came bolting into the room where my captain was shaving, and said, 'For the Lord's sake, let me stay here for a bit.'" "I don't believe it. What was he frightened of?" asked another Tommy. "He'd seen two newspaper men coming along, that's all," was the reply.

The Dahlia

Time was, and that not so very long ago, when the dahlia was considered so difficult a plant to grow that it wasn't worth while to experiment with it. It came into bloom so late in the season that few flowers were developed before frosts weather came, and after a little the average gardener gave up trying to grow it.

The treatment that was given it consisted in starting its roots into growth in pots or boxes in the house early in the season under the impression that because it came from a locality where the summer is long our northern summers were too short for it, therefore we must give it several extra weeks to grow in.

The ordinary result of such treatment was that the plants, started into growth in the house under conditions unfavourable to healthy development, became so weak before the weather would warrant one in putting them into the ground out of doors that when they were put out they were so checked by the change from in to out door conditions that it took them a long time to get a second start, and by the time they had got fairly under headway, cold weather put an end to them.

Nowadays we do things differently. We do not attempt to force them the same way [illegible] them in the house. We wait until the ground has become warm and the weather settled, and then we set the tubers out in the garden in a rich soil that has been made mellow to the depth of a foot or a foot and a half.

Here they get a strong start at once because conditions are favourable to satisfactory growth, and by the middle of August they begin to bloom, and from that time to the coming of frost we have a continuous supply of flowers from them. Under this method of culture the dahlia is speedily coming into general cultivation, and those who grow it successfully one season will not willingly be without it thereafter.

The secret of success—rich soil, plenty of water at the root if the season happens to be a dry one, and warm weather from start to finish.

Those who have grown it for a season generally set out the entire bunch of roots next spring. This is a mistake. Break the bunch apart and set out each tuber separately. You will get a more satisfactory plant in this way than you will from planting the whole bunch. Each tuber that has an "eye" or growing point on it, will make a strong, independent plant provided all conditions are favourable.

The stalks of the dahlia are extremely brittle, therefore are easily broken down by strong winds or heavy rains. To guard against this it is necessary to give the plants good support. Set a stout stake by each one, and see that the main stalk is kept securely tied to it. Use strips of cloth instead of twine in doing this, as the latter often cuts into the soft wood and injures it.

There are several distinct types of this plant, and each new season adds to them. The old, double variety is catalogued as the "show" dahlia. Showy this type really is, but because of its formality it is not as much admired as some of the other members of the family.

The "decorative" type has semi-double flowers, borne on long stalks, and is really a much finer flower than the "show." For cutting it is one of our best plants. The "cactus" variety has oddly twisted and curved petals, which will please those who admire the ragged Japanese chrysanthemum.

The "pompoms" are "show" dahlias in miniature. They are fine for bedding. The single flowered kind are quite as showy as the doubles, and many persons prefer them to any of the others. These can be grown from seed and give flowers the first season.

In colour this plant ranges from pure white to darkest scarlet, crimson and maroon, and there are innumerable shades of pink, carmine rose, purple, and yellow, and many varieties in which two or more of these colours are so blended in stripes, flakes, and petal tips that the list of desirable kinds is long enough to make it difficult to select from it.

I would advise choosing the colors preferred, leaving the selection of varieties to the dealer from whom you order your plants.

After frost comes and the tops of the plant are killed, dig the roots on a pleasant day and expose them to the sun until the soil cleaves away from them at a touch. Then store in a cool room and leave them there until cold weather comes, after which they should go into the cellar for winter.

Do not put them near the floor where it will be damp. It is a good plan to keep them on shelves about half way between floor and ceiling. If any tubers show signs of decay, throw them out at once, or they will communicate the disease to the others.

Dried Flowers.

Florists are anxious to obtain British dried flowers to take the place of the German products.

An enormous trade has been done for many seasons past in beech branches and oak-leaves, which are bought largely by the florists to help them through the winter months when flowers are scarce.

"Speaking just for my own firm," said a well-known Court florist, "I am open to place a fairly big order for dyed beech branches if any are to be had at anything like the old German prices."

These beech branches, sterilised, bleached, and dyed in brilliant autumnal colors in the German flower factories, are, he explained a favorite winter foliage in great demand with chrysanthemums and other late-flowering plants. Although the industry, so far as the supplies used in this country are concerned, has been entirely a Continental one, fully three-quarters of the total supplies coming from Germany and Austria, there is no reason why British enterprise should not take it in hand. The capital required is small, and the work could be done well by women.

The industry is a profitable one. The British demands alone were sufficient before the war to justify the presence of six or eight German travelers, who put up at the big hotels, and succeeded in selling hundreds of tons of dried products.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Says the End of the War is Near

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, May 15.—Germany is beaten and the end of the war is near at hand, according to Samuel Hill, associated with his namesake, James J. Hill, in railway enterprises, who arrived late last night from Liverpool on the liner Philadelphia.

"Germany cannot struggle against the overwhelming financial strain," he said, explaining why he believed peace would soon come. "There will not be another winter campaign, and peace will come just as suddenly as the war broke out."

Interest Shown in the Casement Trial

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, May 15.—A large crowd surrounded the Bow Street Police Court, where Sir Roger Casement was to go on trial on a charge of high treason to-day, and police squads were busy clearing the approaches. The exact nature of the proceedings before the presiding judge, Baron Reading, and two associate justices, was in doubt. Premier Asquith reached Belfast to-day in his tour of Ireland to study conditions leading up to the recent rebellion. Some of the newspapers said his visit to Belfast was connected with the proposal for either disarmament of all parties in Ireland, or for the incorporation of both Irish and Ulster volunteers into an auxiliary branch of the British Army.

French Troops Win First Line Trenches

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, May 15.—(French Official Communique).—French troops drove the enemy from the first line trenches near Vermandovilliers, south of the Somme, said an official statement issued here to-day.

Around Verdun a heavy bombardment in the region of Avocourt Wood constituted practically the only activity.

Parliament May Prorogue Wednesday

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15.—There is a general expectation that Parliament will prorogue on Wednesday, although it may be Thursday before the session is finally concluded.

The chief business before the House yet is a C. N. R. fifteen million dollar loan and the bill to provide a larger scale of pensions for Canadian soldiers.

HOUSE RAID.

On Saturday evening a raid on a house in the South end of the city was made through the combined efforts of the military and civil police. As a result three khaki clad members of Canada's Expeditionary Force were in Police Court this morning charged with being frequenters of a disorderly house.

Three women were arraigned on a similar charge. The case will be heard tomorrow morning.

Uncle Sam's Hottest Spot

New and Longer Thermometer Will Record Heat of Death Valley.

"Death Valley is the hottest place in the United States," says an article in Harper's Magazine. "It lies in the desert of Southern California not far from the Nevada line. A weather bureau thermometer was installed there some years ago at Furnace Creek, the only inhabited spot in the valley. There one or two white men and two or three Indian families maintain a little ranch.

"The thermometer is properly exposed above a gently sloping plain of gravel in a regulation shelter such as is used all over the country. No other out-of-door thermometer in the United States, or perhaps in the world, is so familiar with temperatures of 100 degrees or more. During the period of not quite 1,800 days from the spring of 1911 to May, 1915, a maximum temperature of 100 degrees or more was reached on 548 days or more than one-third of the time.

"One day in July, 1913—the tenth of the month, to be exact—the mercury rose to 134 degrees and hit the top of the tube. How much higher it would have gone no one can tell. That day marks the limit of temperature yet reached, according to official records in this country. A new thermometer with a greater range has been installed, and perhaps this summer we may hear of a temperature of 140 degrees.

CHARACTER

By J. P. Greene

(President William Jewell College)

Is it grown, or engraved, or forged? All these.

We are born without character, but it soon sprouts, and then grows rapidly. The soil is the home, the school, the social life, the business world—different kinds of soil, each contributing its element to the growth of character.

Parents, teachers, companions and business associates are the character-cultivators, and largely determine the quality of the product. But, after all, each one grows his own character.

The word "character" is Greek, and means "engraved"—an ancient and beautiful conception. We — it may be with the help of others—engrave our own characters when we begin to act on our own judgments, when we choose and do, and thus form habits. A habit is a groove, or a line cut in the soul, fixed, along which future action is almost sure to run. Many habits make an engraving, a permanent picture of the soul, character.

It may be truly said, also, that character is forged. The human soul is a piece of metal, without form and without beauty. Or probably it has been engraved without knowledge, and is inartistic, ugly. It must be worked over. In order to make it right it must go into the hot fire and under the big hammer. If properly forged it will come out with a permanent form of grace and beauty. False lines and deformities—bad habits of thought and action—must be hammered out. They cannot be brushed off.

What Is Character?

What is "character"? It is I, what I am, not what I seem to be, not what others think me to be (this is "reputation"), nor what I desire to be, nor hope to be, but just what I am—what I have grown into, what has been engraved on my soul, the form of my soul-metal as it came from the forge.

Character is a stable thing. Desiring and doing form character. But when it is once formed, it determines thought and action. If you know the character of a man pretty well you can tell what he will do in certain circumstances. A man that loves money inordinately is very apt to steal if strongly tempted.

A mood is not character. A transient virtue or vice is a mere shadow—a chalk mark on the soul, not an engraved line. Good men have sinful moods, and bad men have virtuous moods. You have read of the "polite burglar," or the "kind-hearted robber." And you have perhaps seen the generous man give the lowly the "cold shoulder." "Judge not the Lord by feeble sense," and do not judge your fellowmen by their passing moods. A man may be much better or much worse than he just now seems to be. But what he is will come out in the open. Character will triumph!

Mood and Character.

In the great fire in Pera, a Christian suburb of Constantinople, June 1870, Turks vied with the Christians in trying to save Christian women and children. One rich Turk offered a great sum to any one who would save a Christian boy from a burning building.

This was a mood. Nature, buried and almost crushed beneath a thousand strata of religious and race antipathies, sprang to the surface for a moment and spoke the natural language of the soul. But pity for Christians, or anybody else, was not and is not a characteristic of the Turks.

Here is an old proverb, nearly as old as the race: "As he thinketh within himself (in his heart), so is he." Will this man steal? That depends upon how he has been thinking in his heart, for a long time.

If he has long been willing to do almost anything to gratify some desire that calls for money, he will probably venture into the region of dishonesty.

A friend once stopped me on the street and said: "I want to tell you something. I have in bank, in my name, nearly two million dollars. A company was supposed to be bankrupt, and went into the hands of a receiver. The stockholders met to plan for their protection. They appointed me to look after their affairs. It is all settled. I made the receiver deposit all the money in my name. He protested every time, but always yielded.

"A while ago a friend suggested that I could lend this vast sum and pocket the interest. It will be eighteen months till the final settlement."

My heart stood still as I said: "Will you do it?" He had carried on a large and honest business for forty years. What an opportunity for making character! He answered in his every-day voice, gentle and firm: "I would not do such a thing for the whole two million. I am now going to call a meeting of the stockholders, to see what they want done with their money!"

The Root of the Soul.

A majestic oak is beautiful on a calm day in June. But as it writhes and groans in the tempest, it is awe-inspiring. The unseen roots hold. Character is rooted in thought. As a man thinks, so is he!

EMPIRE THEATRE MILL PAY WAR TAX

NO APPETITE—LITTLE SLEEP

Symptoms of a Run-down Condition, We Have a Remedy.

We ask every weak, run-down person in Peterborough to try our Vinol, with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not re-establish their health. Letters like the following give us confidence:

"I am in the millinery business and on my feet most of the time. I got so weak and run-down that I lost my appetite and was unable to sleep, had a severe chronic cold and lost my colour. I learned about Vinol through a friend, and within three weeks after taking it I noticed an improvement and soon gained in weight, health and strength. I am recommending Vinol to my friends and they also speak highly of it." Catherine Hoar, West Chester, N.Y.

In hundreds of cases where old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions have failed to restore strength and health, Vinol has succeeded, because while it contains all the curatives they do, its good work is not retarded by useless grease and oil.

Drivers Kerneghan, Walmsley and McPherson and Despatch Rider J. Barraclough, four Peterborough members of the Mechanical Transport, Toronto were home over the week-end. It is their last leave home as they are going overseas with a draft that is leaving within the near future.

A number of the Peterborough members of the 66nd Battery are home on leave from Kingston. Their battery is leaving shortly for Petawawa camp.

Gunner Clark Thackeray a Peterborough member of the Cobourg Heavy Battery was home for Sunday. A number of other Peterborough boys with the same unit were also home.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., May 13.—A cablegram announces that Capt. Harry L. Fisher, who went to the front last fall with a draft of the 59th Battalion, was killed in action. He was a son of A. L. Fisher, Brockville, and in his day a great footballer, figuring on the local team in its palmy days when it won the O. R. F. U. championship, without losing a game that season. Capt. Fisher enlisted at Montreal with the 24th Battalion, coming from St. Louis, Mo., to do so. He also served with the Canadians in the Boer War.

Sergt. Sam. Worrall, of the 39th Overseas Battalion, who returned from the Old Country for the purpose of instructing new troops, in bayonet fighting, was in the city yesterday, on his way through to London, Ont., where he will take charge of a class. He has been in Montreal, at the School of Instruction for the past several weeks.

His many friends here will be glad to learn that Sergt. E. Massey Cooke, of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 2nd Canadian Pioneer Battalion, and who has been at the front for some time, has just been given his commission as lieutenant in the Canadian Engineers.

This evening the soldiers of the 93rd who were confirmed on Friday night, will meet at St. John's rectory for a social hour, at 7:30 o'clock, and to receive their certificates.

Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, has received a number of presentations of a public and private nature in the past few weeks. He has received a field cassock and stole from the Women's Friendly Bible Class, and a sum of money from the Chancel Guild with which to purchase a water proof surplice. The Guild assembled for the occasion and made a most touching address.

KINGSTON, May 14.—(Special).—It was announced yesterday by Col. T. D. R. Hemming, officer commanding this district, that the 77th, 93rd, 109th, 130th, 136th, 139th, 146th, 154th, 155th and 156th Battalions will train at Barriefield. The 77th may, however, go overseas very shortly. Barriefield will, in any event, have over 10,000 men under canvas when the camp opens.

BEAVERTON, May 14.— The 116th Battalion leaves here to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock to march to Cannington, where it will remain for a day or so before proceeding on its march through the county. The 116th is the first county unit. A number of Beaverton boys left with the first contingent, and quite a number with the 17th Battalion.

Yesterday morning the regular training was participated in. In the afternoon the programme was varied, Mr. Ferguson, Public School Inspector, representing the teachers and pupils of the County of Ontario, presented the battalion with a motor ambulance. Col. Sharpe accepted the gift on behalf of the battalion and thanked the teachers and pupils. Captain James Moore, the Medical Officer, also told the teachers how much their gift was appreciated. The battalion then marched past and Mr. Ferguson received the salute, after which they manoeuvred to the admiration of the spectators. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in sports.

Among the Peterborough boys who have enlisted with outside units is Lieut. D. U. Gladman, son of Mr. Geo. Gladman, president of the Wm. Hamilton Co. Lieut. Gladman, who was born here, has been with the Bank of Montreal for the past fifteen years, the last four in Winnipeg, where he has enlisted in the 190th Battalion.

Pte. Theodore Quinn, of the second battalion, is expected to arrive in the city to-morrow or the next day. Pte. Quinn went to France with the first contingent and has been through some severe engagements. He returns to Canada, having been recommended for a commission.

G.T.R. SUPERINTENDENT HERE.

Supt. D. McMillan of Belleville, in his private car, was a visitor in the city to-day with his staff. He went over the Port Hope line to Millbrook and returning went to Belleville with the afternoon regular.

INTERESTING ADDRESS BY THE REV. WILLIAM PATTERSON, D.D.

Shell Investigations Would Be Unnecessary If Those Professing Christ Were True to the Faith, Said the Noted Divine—Ought to Be Shot Down.

THE EVIL POWER

Stirring and insistent was the message rung out to the ears of the large congregation that filled St. Paul's Presbyterian church yesterday morning. The speaker was Rev. William Patterson, D.D., of Toronto. Dr. Patterson held the rapt attention of his hearers for the best part of an hour as he rapidly argued his leading points, concluding with an earnest plea for a return on the part of the people and the church to the study and observance of the work of work, not merely to know it intellectually, but to obey it and incarnate it in the every-day life of the individual and the church.

SHELL INVESTIGATIONS.

Speaking of the evils of the present day, Dr. Patterson said: "Shell investigations would be unnecessary if all those within the confines of this Dominion professing Christ were true to the faith. The money these scoundrels are making, said Dr. Patterson, will burn where they are going to. Those who attempt to make money out of the war ought to be shot down, as the Irish rebels were shot down. They are traitors to their country as well as to their God.

THE APOSTLE'S INJUNCTION.

The speaker's text was taken from the 9th chapter of Mark, 19th verse "Bring him unto me." Launching into the subject of his address, Dr. Patterson dealth with the significance of the injunction written by the Apostle Mark. What is the trouble with the church to-day, and how much power has that church over the evils that exist? enquired the speaker. The latter described scenes he had witnessed of men signing the pledge who knew within themselves that they would be unable to keep it, as one within them was stronger than they. Yet there is one stronger than the evil power, and that is Christ. If individuals as well as the church would seek to keep strong the connection between themselves and Christ, there would be less sin in the world.

AN IMPOSSIBILITY.

When the Ethiopian can change his skin and the leopard change his spots then men can change their ways apart from Christ. Not until then. "I have seen any number of fathers and mothers," said the speaker, "who would have given their own lives to save the moral lives of their sons and daughters." Both man and the church is powerless to save if the connection with Christ is lost, said Dr. Patterson in conclusion.

FAMOUS WHITE HOUSE BABY TO TEACH BLIND SOLDIERS

New York, May 14.—Once famous all over the world as "the White House Baby," Miss Esther Cleveland is preparing to devote herself to the teaching of blind soldiers in France.

From her home in Princeton, N.J., she travels every day to Overbrook, a suburb of Philadelphia, to study the system in use in the Pennsylvania Institute for the instruction of the blind.

Miss Cleveland's companion in the daily study is Miss Maria Osborne, daughter of the president of the American Museum of Natural History. When they are thoroughly efficient in the work of teaching the blind how to take care of themselves in a world of darkness, and how to engage in handicrafts by which they can support themselves. The women will sail for France and attach themselves to the American hospital at Neuilly.

Already the daughter of the late Grover Cleveland is a trained nurse, he had designed to give her services to the wounded before this; but learning of the special necessities of the great number of soldiers blinded by poisonous gases and high explosive shellfire, she decided to equip herself for that particular branch of the work before going.

Esther Cleveland was born in the White House in September, 1893. Her horoscope was cast by Prof. Leonis, who said that she ought not to marry before the age of 25. He added however that she would marry between 21 and 22. The stars were wrong, or else the professor misread them, for "Baby Esther" is now in her 23rd year.

It has frequently been reported that Miss Cleveland was engaged to Randolph D. West, son of Dean West, of Princeton, but the report has always been denied by Miss Cleveland's mother, Mrs. Thomas J. Preston.

WAS A HERO IN EMERGENCY

Experience of a Montreal Officer—Night Bombing Raids Result in Losses About Even.

LONDON, May 15.—Matter on the Canadian front have returned to normal lately, partly owing to bad weather. A chaplain, returned on leave, tells how the other night he went out to bury a Montreal officer, killed by a shell. While the ceremony was in progress a shell burst close by. Nobody was hurt, but seventeen horses and an empty ambulance were smashed completely. He also speaks of being accompanied one night by a young Montreal officer who talked incessantly. Later he confessed his talk was to hide how nervous he felt at the shells, which then were dropping pretty close at intervals. A few days later this man was in the crater fighting at St. Eloi, and is now recommended for the D.S.O.

McGill Hospital at Boulogne is being increased to 2,000 beds.

Trench fighting continues. Every few nights there are sallies of bombing parties. Such operations fall to the Canadians, bringing little chance of serious advantage. As one participant puts it, it resolves itself merely into the Germans losing a few men every day per mile of trench and ourselves losing almost exactly the same number.

FOUR TABLETS HAVE BEEN PLACED

Yesterday at St. John's choir, Major Davidson referred to the fact that in the past month four tablets had been placed in the church. One of these commemorated the placing in the tower of the People's Chimes, so generously donated by the present and former citizens of Peterborough, on Coronation Day, June 22, 1911. The tablet is an extremely handsome one of bronze, with the letters in high relief.

Another tablet has been placed in the porch commemorating the large, handsome porch lantern, donated by Mrs. Emily Regan, a member of the congregation.

At Easter a memorial tablet had been unveiled in memory of Mrs. Clara Rubidge, relict of the late Geo. W. Rubidge, who died June 5, 1913, and who was one of the central figures in the congregation, and who by her good cheer and warmth of heart had helped to diffuse a general atmosphere of kindliness.

On Saturday a tablet was dedicated to the memory of Charles Weller Dean, who had grown up in the congregation and who had fallen at Festubert, May 20, 1915. He had enlisted as a private in the 16th Battalion and had carried his gay and cheerful temperament into the campaign. He had been greatly beloved by his comrades.

In the vestry a memorial has been set up in commemoration of the placing on the chancel of the church of the cross, subscribed for by several clergymen who had ministered in the church.

"PLUGGED THE BIDDING" BUT THE TEAM SOLD FOR ONLY $69

An Incident in the Sale of Leamon Garnsey's Gray and Roan Team Seized Under a Mortgage—Action Not Yet Concluded.

The hearing of the Garnsey action for $8,000 damages for alleged illegal trespass and seizured dragged through Saturday afternoon. Deputy Sheriff F. J. A. Hall for the defense said that the first team of horses seized, the gray and roan, said they were not a valuable team. They sold for $69, which he said was as good a price as could have been expected. The sale of Garnsey's goods on the Dummer farm realized practically nothing when the expenses connected with it were subtracted from the receipts. There were only five or six buyers at the sale. A buggy brought one dollar. Mr. Hall declared that it was so rickety he would not have entrusted himself to it to drive as far as the road. Eight acres of oats brought $30, one pair of shafts ten cents, 600 feet of lumber $2, and so on. The sale, at any rate, did not make any effect on the mortgage debt. Mr. Hall then made a seizure on the Otonabee property including the crop of grain, the black team, cattle, etc. When he went to Garnsey's to sell the goods, Garnsey forbade the sale. Mr. Hall was informed that Miss Hill had bought the crop, some one else owned the black team, the cows were claimed and nothing remained free from claim, but the pigs, which Mrs. Garnsey guarded with a pitchfork. Mr. Hall decided that discretion was the better part of valor and withdrew. This was another fruitless seizure. Later, the grain and team were seized and brought into the city.

In regard to the sale of the first team, Mr. Beatty, agent for Mr. Hall, stated that the mares were sold on the market. Beatty got Mr. Middleton to "plug the bidding," to bid against prospective purchasers in order to realize as large a sum as possible. Middleton plugged it as far as it was safe to go, and at that the team brought only $69.

The hearing was resumed this afternoon.

Rev. Dr. Flanders, whose name has Dundas St. Methodist Church, London, has received and accepted an invitation from George St. Methodist Church of this city to become its pastor at the expiration of Rev. R. G. Peever's term—June, 1917.

Mr. Peever has accepted the invitation to the First Church, London, which makes an exchange between the two conferences.

Rev. Dr. Flandres, whose name has been mentioned in connection with George St., has received an invitation to a Winnipeg Church in the Manitoba Conference.

REV. R. POGUE IN TORONTO

The Toronto Globe says: Cooke's church anniversary and re-opening services were yesterday conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's church, Peterborough. Special efforts have been made recently to clear off the church debt and these efforts culminated yesterday from the congregation at both morning and evening services. Large contributions to the debt fund were handed in by various departments of the church. The total receipts apart from the regular collection were $1,300.

Rev. Robert Pogue combined in his preaching the earnestness of the evangelical with the practical student of men, and his sermons were greatly appreciated by the congregation. He was a member of Cooke's church before entering the ministry, and he recalled many incidents of the old days. Rev. Dr. Patterson, pastor of Cooke's church, was yesterday preaching at Mr. Pogue's church in Peterborough.

YESTERDAY IN GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Mother's Day was strongly observed in George street Methodist church yesterday. A large number of aged people, some from their own homes and some from the Protestant Home were in attendance, having been brought to the church in motor cars, and white and red carnations were much in evidence. Appropriate services were held.

The morning service was followed by one of the largest sacramental services in the history of the church, many of the 93rd Battalion attending. Some thirty-eight new members were received at the reception, Chaplain Rev. Mr Cruikshanks, Rev. Mr. Lang and Rev. Mr. Annis assisted the pastor.

Silver is King

This year Silver is King, and is advancing by leaps and bounds—no man dare say what the ultimate price will be. Last summer silver was worth 46⅛ cents per ounce — today it is 74 cents and going higher every week.

The advance in copper last year caused a sensational market in copper shares, many low priced copper stocks advanced more than 1,000 per cent.

That was last year, this year it is Silver and now is the opportune moment to purchase high-class silver stocks.

We have underwritten 250,000 shares of Lorrain Consolidated Mines, Ltd., at 20 cents per share net to the Treasury of the Company, and are now allotting these shares to our clients at 22 cents.

The fact that we have underwritten this large block of treasury stock, thereby guaranteeing the Company $50,000 for development purposes, is the best evidence of our sincere belief in the future of the Company.

Lorrain Consolidated has, in our opinion, the three necessary elements of a successful mine. The Company owns outright, 53 acres in the South Lorrain-Cobalt silver district on which engineers have located four large and six smaller veins. $40,000 has already been spent in proving up the property and two shafts have been sunk, one 102 feet, and the other 110 feet. Drifting and cross cutting to the extent of several hundred feet has also been done.

The management of Lorrain Consolidated is in the hands of men whose names stand for everything that is honorable in mining.

Men of this character do not associate themselves with a mine unless they are fully convinced of its merit, and we never underwrite a stock until we are satisfied it has a good chance of making good.

This Company has a well located property, an honest and efficient management, and ample capital for development. We, therefore, feel justified in recommending the purchase of the stock.

Application will be made for listing the shares in Toronto, Boston and New York.

Reports of development work to date and extracts of engineer's statements will be furnished free on application.

Vessel Sunk, Crew Escapes To Ae Attacked By Arabs

LONDON, May 15.—The sinking of the British steamship Coquet by an Austrian submarine and the subsequent adventures of some of the crew, who passed six days in a boat and were attacked by Bedouins after having landed; are described in the following report from Captain Arnold C. B. Groom:

About 10:45 a.m. January 4, 1915, I was writing in the saloon, when I heard a gun fired. On reaching the bridge the third mate told me it was fired across the bow. Then another was fired across the bow, one over the bridge and one under the stern, from a submarine on the port quarter; at the same time one or two persons told me that there was another submarine on the port bow. I stopped the engines and indicated that I had done so by flag signals. The firing stopped, and a submarine was soon close to us with the signals flying, "Abandon ship immediately." I took a chronometer, sextant and chart in the starboard boat and we left the ship. The other boat left a little before us.

"We had no sooner got clear of the ship than the submarine started firing at her. Eight shots were fired; one of them broke the signal halyards on the bridge. They stopped firing and, coming close to the boats, ordered us alongside. This was a dangerous proceedings, as the submarine's deck was just awash, and there was a big swell.

"I was ordered to board the submarine, and then some Austrians were sent in our boats armed with revolvers and cutlasses and the two boats returned to the Coquet.

"All hands wer given twenty minutes to get what they wanted from the ship; at the same time the Austrians looted whatever they could in the time. When they had all they wanted they ordered the two liftboats to return to the submarine, then set two time fuse bombs under water abreast numbers 1 and 2 holds, and left the ship themselves. Shortly afterward there were two explosions, and the ship settled down by the head.

"'Mr. Grey' Responsible."

"While all this was happening the commander of the submarine asked me many questions as to my ideas of the progress, ultimate result, termination, etc., of the war. I think that he came to the conclusion finally that I was profoundly ignorant on the subject; he wound up by saying, 'When you get back to London, captain, tell Mr. Grey that if he does not want his ships sunk to stop the war: it is only being kept up by him and the young men of England.'

"The two lifeboats were near the submarine again now, and bailing was in full progress in each boat with two or three buckets. I remarked upon this to the commander of the submarine, and the fact that both their bilge planks had most likely been sprung alongside his awash deck.

"I told him it was nothing short of murder to send thirty-one men away like that, middle of winter, too, so far from land. He laughed and said he would save the next ship and send her to look for us.

"The boats were alongside by this time, and the Austrians searched them for anything valuable, taking chronometers, sextants and charts and also every scrap of paper they could find. They would not let me keep even the 'account of wages' of the crew or any of my bills, although I asked them especially for these latter, and remarked to them what they were and that they were of no earthly use to them. They ordered me back into my boat and then left us.

"As we were well to the northwestward, I deemed it wisest to steer south, especially as the wind was freshening from the north to north-northwest, as we should then be running right across all the tracks of the steamers between Port Said and Alexandria and Malta. We ran so until early dark, when a steamer was sighted. We saw her hull. The mate's boat, which was a good bit nearer to her than we were, showed three red flares, and we showed one, but if she saw them she took no notice of us. We were very soon all wet through and remained so practically for the next six days we were in the boat.

"Heavy weather, with a cold north and westerly wind, continued all the night. 'Allowance' of biscuits and water was started right away that night; viz., two biscuits and a half and two gills of water per man per day; latterly I increased the water allowance, finding that it was not enough with so much salt spray about. All the able bodied men had to take their turn at bailing, two at a time. The boat was very overcrowded with seventeen in it, and was ankle deep with water, in spite of vigorous bailing with the two buckets. Next day, the 8th, I got the carpenter to take out three of the watertight tanks on the side where the plank was spit and caulk it roughly from inside with bits of shirt. This stopped the leaking a little.

Part of the Crew Lost.

"The weather continued the same all this day and night, and not a sign did we see of anything. Just before daybreak on the 6th I thought several times that I had seen a dark object away to the leeward when we rose on a sea, so at last, thinking it might be a steamer without lights, I chanced a "red flare" on it; my disappointment was great when it was answered by another "red flare," and eventually turned out to be the mate's boat, of which we lost sight afterward and did not see her again. No change on the day or night of the 7th; everybody chilled to the bone with that cold northerly wind blowing right through our saturated clothes. We all had pains in our joints; our poor little Italian messroom boy was crying all night in his sleep with them.

"In the early morning of the 8th the weather moderated a little, and I decided to set sail and make for the African coast. So we steered S. again, and made fairly good weather of it. During the day the wind 'backed' to W.N.W.; this did not make things any more comfortable; however, we continued on our course. During the day of the 9th and during the rest of the day and that night I was only able to make S.E. instead of S. course. However, just after midnight I made out land to the S.W'd, and just then the wind started to freshen considerably and shifted to south. Such a bad and dangerous short sea rose that I had to take in the sail (I had tried reefing it at first, and got the mast and a couple of oars out as a sea anchor; and were attacked by Bedouins after such a disappointment when land was so near and our water so low, but there was nothing else for it.

"About five a.m. the wind moderated a little, also the sea, so we set our sail again and started to battle against a nearly dead head wind; a very hopeless job in a steamer's lifeboat with a 'regulation' rig (sail) We slowly banged and punched on a diagonal course for the shore all day, and then, as we got nearer, the wind fell lighter and lighter, and this nasty lumpy, swell still in evidence. We eventually took down the sail and got the vars out, as I could see a decent looking landing in a little bay, with houses in the background. We succeeded in making a satisfactory landing. We slept on the sands that night, after having slaked our thirst with some well water and eaten a quantity of limpets from the rocks with our biscuits. The buildings we had seen from the sea proved to be long deserted ruins, and there was no sign of life anywhere). The two engineers the second mate and I kept watch by turns during the night.

Attacked by Arabs.

"When I awoke, on the 11th, I considered that it would be unwise to leave this place, where we had plenty of water and shell fish, until I could find out in which direction the nearest civilized port lay. So after breakfast I set out with thre men to try to find some human being who could tell us. We plodded on until about noon without seeing anything that we wanted, and were just giving up hopes when a very tall Arab appeared. He came back to the camp with us. One of the firemen, a Greek, could speak Arabic, and the Arab suggested that I should go with him to the nearest town on foot. This I could not do, as I was utterly 'done up' with the six or seven hours' walking that day, but I sent two Greek firemen with him—one spoke Italian, and the other Arabic—and told them to try and get some boat to take us out of this as soon as possible.

"Next morning we were all surprised by several rifle bullets whizzing around us. On looking we found they came from two Arabs on a hill some distance inland, who, between shooting at us, were dancing wildly and laughing and yelling.. Thinking they were two Arab boys who got hold of rifles somehow and were just amusing themselves, I told my companions to take cover, which we did in a deep trench formed by the ruins of some old building, right at the water's edge; in fact the sea came well up in the trench at one end.

"Half an hour after that about 5 Arabs, with rifles, suddenly appeared over the edge of our trench, and after having given a preliminary yell, began jabbering hard in Arabic at us. The two closest to me had their rifles all ready to fire. I held up my arms to indicate that I was unarmed. One of them still jabbered at me but the other took careful aim at my head. I ducked forward and to one side a little as just about the same instant as he pulled the trigger, so that the bullet took a track through the flesh across the back of my shoulders instead of hitting my head.

"The Arab was only about six feet from me when he fired. The force of the shot knocked me backwards. I remember falling and my head hitting the sand. After that I must have lost consciousness as when I awoke everything was quiet, except for the groaning of the carpenter, who was rolling between me and the edge of the water about six feet.

"I found that he was horribly mutilitated, but still alive. He asked me to drag him away from the sea. I tried to but he was a big man and my wound was very painful. A little way out in the water the steward was floating face downward. Whether he was shot or drowned or both I do not know.

"Further up the trench the little Italian messroom boy was lying dead. I could see nothing of anybody else, and was afraid to go out of the trench thinking that if the Bedouins saw me alive they would come back to finish me off.

"I had been keeping my eye open for the boat that I hoped was coming to fetch us and after having given the carpenter several drinks of water I was overjoyed to see the smoke and funnel of a small steamer coming around the point and more still later when I made out that she was flying the Italian flag.

"When she headed into the bay and the boat was coming ashore I came out from the trench. There was not a sign of the Bedouins or the rest of our men except a sailor named Lord, who was lying on the sand some distance from the trench wounded by both bayonet and bullet. He said that the others, ten of them, had been carried off as prisoners by the Bedouins after having had every thing of any value taken from them.

"When the boat landed, the commander of the fort at Marsu Susu came ashore with a party of Arab soldiers who quickly ran to the top of the nearest hills to look for the Bedouins, and then made a thorough search in the vicinity, but found no trace of the Bedouins or their captives. The commander took us on board of the little steamer also the bodies of the steward and the messroom boy, and our wounds were washed and dressed as well as possible, the carpenter died just as we were starting to dress his wounds.

"When we were landed at Marsa Susu we were taken to the surgery of the military hospital and our wounds ere dressed properly by the head doctor, after which we were put in comfortable beds in the hospital, and I have had the most infinite kindness consideration and generosity shown to me throughout.

"The bodies of the steward, carpenter and messroom boy were given military funeral here on the 14th, and were followed to the burial ground by many officers and men of the Italian army.

"The submarine had no mark or number on her but I concluded that she was Austrian as the officers on her had the Austrian crown on the badges of their caps."

People Divided Against Jesus Who Had Come To Save Them

Rev. Dougald Brown Made an Appeal For Decision to Accept God —Anniversary at Park Street Baptist Church.

Largely attended services marked the anniversary of Park Street Baptist Church yesterday. In the evening, the pastor, Rev. Dougald Brown, preached a thoughtful and helpful sermon on the text from St. John 7:43 —"So there was a division among the people because of Him." He dwelt upon the baffling and tragic anomaly of Christ's mission that the very people Jesus had come to serve and save had divided against Him. One would have thought, Rev. Mr. Brown observed, that men would have been pleased with the work Jesus performed, that the world would have flocked around Him, that the religious motive in every heart would have seconded His efforts. But no, there was a division because of Him. There was something wrong with every sermon He preached; every miracle was attributed to satanic force. We find that the more He laboured the more was He opposed. Things grew worse and worse, and after a time they sought to kill Him, the Son of God who had come into the world for no other purpose than to save all men. At last Jesus said to them, "You seek to kill me who sought only to save you"; whereupon they replied, "Thou hast a devil and art mad." The multitude knew that Jesus was destined for death and that the priests were determined to kill Him. First the priests, next the multitude, then the mob and lastly the world turned on Him. How thankful, said Rev. Mr. Brown, we should be that Jesus Christ by His sacrifice prevented the devil from turning the whole world into hell.

Mr. Brown turned from his consideration of the division that arose because of Him when Jesus was performing His mission, to an analogous division in the hearts of men to-day because of Him. The travesty of Jerusalem was being enacted again to-day. In their hearts men were opposing Him. There were men sitting within sound of the Gospel, who had been there twenty-five years and had grown grey, who are unsaved. Why? There is a division in their hearts against Him. There were only two classes of men, the righteous and the wicked, those who were for Christ and those who were against Him.

"I pray to-night that there may not be a division but a decision because of Him. I pray that this decision be not against Him but a decision that I will accept Him."

The special music included an anthem led by Mr. A. Nicholls, organist and choirmaster, and a solo by Mrs. Hunt.

Hurled To Death From Racing Car

New York, May 15.—Carl Limberg, an automobile racer, and E. Paloti, his mechanician, leading the field in the fifth lap of the 100 mile race for the Metropolitan trophy, were killed when their machine crashed into a guard rail on the Sheep-head Bay track on Saturday afternoon. Limberg, who had been taking the turns near the very tip of the high saucer track, apparently lost control of his car while rounding the bend at a speed of more than 70 miles an hour. Both men were catapulted 150 feet over the rail and crashed to the ground thirty feet below. The driver was impaled on an upright piece of timber and was killed instantly. Paloti died on the way to the hospital.

The machine, one of three French cars imported for the race by Harry S. Harkness, crumpled up under the impact and burst into flames.

The blazing car clung to the rail as the other drivers flashed past without slackening speed ignorant of the fate of their fellow racer. A flash of flame and a cloud of smoke told the spectators that an accident had occurred but as it occurred at the far end of the two mile saucer few realized that it marked a tragedy.

Limberg's wife was in the grand stand. As the other cars dashed by she missed her husband's machine and realized that he was the victim of an accident. An attendant escorted her from the stand, and an automobile carried her to the hospital as she was told that Limberg had been taken there. Not until she reached there did she learn that he was dead.

Eddie Rickenbacker was an easy winner of the trophy in 1 hour, 33 minutes and 33 seconds, an average of 98.25 miles an hour for the 100 miles. A new world's record was established in the 20 mile race by Johnny Aitken, who won this event in 21 minutes and 1 fifth.

Missing Children Found in Cupboard

Playing in Empty House They Crept Into Cupboard With Spring Locks.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., May 15.—Arthur Haywood and Edith Wilson, young children who have been missing since Thursday afternoon, were found locked in a cupboard of an unoccupied house at 177 Frederica street at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, one block from their homes. The little girl was barely alive when found, but she will recover. The boy was also in a famished condition but is recovering.

They were found by a painter when he entered the house to do some renovating. They had turned on the water and could not turn it off, and afraid, had crept into the cupboard, the doors of which were fitted with spring locks, which immediately closed and imprisoned them.

His gestures are not a pose, his men obey too keenly and heartily for that, and the magnetism that rules the band sways the audience until the entire house breaks out, not in handclapping, but in spontaneous cheers.

Wonderful Career of Donald Dinnie, Scotland's Peerless Athletic Son

An Old Country sporting author writes:

One of the most wonderful athletes the world has ever known has just been gathered to his fathers in the person of Donald Dinnie, for, in addition to having held the all-round athletic championship of Scotland for many years, Donald had a reputation for doughty deeds wherever the English language is spoken.

The most outstanding fact connected with Dinnie's career is that he utterly disproved the "too-old-at-forty" doctrine, because a number of his greatest achievements were accomplished after he had passed the two-score limit.

In all, he won some 11,000 contests, and his championship cups and medals numbered over 180. No other athlete of any nationality can lay claim to a record of equal magnitude.

Donald Dinnie was in his seventy-ninth year when he died in London. That he should have exceeded the allotted span is not at all surprising, for he came of long-lived stock, both his father and mother being over eighty when they died. Dinnie owed a very great deal to his parents. It was certainly from them that he inherited his magnificent physique.

It was on the 9th of June, 1837, that the subject of this sketch first saw the light at Balnacraig, in the east end of the Parish of Aboyne, in Aberdeenshire. His father, Robert Dinnie, was a noted athlete and strong man. In the Deeside district there are many stories of his extraordinary feats of strength.

There were, and still are, two large stones, weighing about 8 cwt. the pair, placed in a recess on the granite stone bridge which crosses the Dee at Potarch. Large iron rings were placed in them for fixing ropes, on which hung scaffolds for pointing the bridge. One of these stones was somewhat heavier than the other. Very few strong men could lift the heavy one with both hands, while Robert Dinnie could raise one in each hand with apparent ease, and could throw the heavier of the two on to the top of the parapet wall of the bridge.

Donald Dinnie himself stood six feet and half an inch, and was as fine a figure of a man as one could wish to see. When he was fifteen Donald started to serve his apprenticeship as a genuine stone mason, and about the same time he was initiated into the mysteries of "putting the stone." He quickly became an adept, and won his first prize for putting the stone, hammer throwing, running, leaping, and wrestling when he was only sixteen years of age.

From the time of these early successes Donald Dinnie never looked back. With the passage of every year his ability as an athlete improved. One of his very best seasons was in 1866, when he was thirty-one years of age, a period when the great majority of athletes are generally on the decline.

In that year his first meeting with the famous John Fleming, of Tullymet, took place at Couper-Angus, where he put a 24-lb. ball on level ground 37 feet 9 inches, to his opponent's 35 feet 5 inches.

During that whole summer Donald easily kept his lead, and was never afterwards the least pushed at stone, hammer, caber, or wrestling. It was that same year he made his great effort at the high leap of 6 feet 1 inch at Turriff, Aberdeenshire. To make sure, a level was sent for, and it was found he was rising from ground over an inch lower than where the measure was taken. This is not a world's record leap, yet nothing better was ever done in Scotland on level ground.

It was also in 1866 he made his great "putt" on Lord Charles Kerr's bowling green, viz., with a stone weighing precisely 16 lbs. 2 ozs., he, with six trials, made 49 feet 6 inches.

In the same season Dinnie made an off-hand match with Fleming that with a 22-lb. stone he would beat Fleming 1 foot 6 inches on level ground, and send each putt over 39 feet, with three trials only! Fleming accepted, and after the three trials each the score stood; Fleming's best, 38 feet 3 inches; Dinnie, 39 feet 3 inches, 39 feet 6 inches, and 39 feet 8 inches. Fleming was then in his twenty-eighth year, and Dinnie in his thirty-first, and both were in their best form, which above records show.

Dinnie made his first journey abroad in 1870, when he went to the United States at the invitation of the Caledonian Club. He also toured Canada, and later Australia, Africa, and New Zealand. It was in the States that he earned his biggest day's pay, amounting in all to £320, and it was in that same country that a man who owed him salary presented a revolver at his head when he was asked to hand over the money.

The sight of the revolver did not put the fear of death into Dinnie, who coolly raised his hand and struck the revolver such a blow that it travelled a distance of ten yards before hitting the ground.

While touring America and Canada Donald attended all the most important athletic tournaments, and found little difficulty in winning from twelve to sixteen events at each meeting. He competed with many splendid athletes, but never met his match as a man-of all-round ability.

Ten years later Dinnie mad a second trip to America, being then at an age when most athletes are played out and retired. He toured from New York to San Francisco, mixed wrestling and dumb-bell lifting being the chief items on his programme. And well did the doughty Donald hold his own against all comers. He was received everywhere with the greatest enthusiasm, and he demonstrated that as an all-round wrestler he had no equal. He won the Police Gazette Championship Medal for mixed wrestling in America when over forty-five years of age, and a championship prize of £150 for winning six styles out of seven.

Several Fine Records.

As a hammer-thrower Dinnie was practically unbeatable. In 1873 he allowed James Fleming 13 feet, and every other man in the world 18 feet of a start, and even with this big handicap he remained undefeated. He could throw the 16-lb. hammer — fair stand, 4 feet 3 in.; stiff handle — a distance of over 130 feet, while with a 4 ft. 2 in. handle he threw the 22-lb. hammer 104 feet 5 ins., and the 21¼-lb. hammer 107 feet 7 inches, all on ground dead level.

At Perth, in 1869, he putted the 16-lb. stone 49 feet 6 inches, and in 1874 his distance for the same weight at Montrose was 48 feet 6 in. During that year, while at Glasgow, he registered 38 feet with the 14-lb. hammer.

As a short-distance runner one of Dinnie's best performances was 100 yards in 10 2-5 seconds, which is a very fine showing indeed when it is remembered that the great athlete in his best form never weighed less than 220 pounds, or, to put it more commonly 15 stone 10 pounds. The statement can be made with confidence that no other man of his weight ever attained that high rate of speed in a hundred yards' dash.

Donald's chest measurement in his palmy days was 46½ inches. His biceps 16¾ inches, thighs 26½ inches, and calf 17¼ inches. Perhaps his enormous natural strength was seen to best advantage in his handling of the 56-lb. weight, which, with a "fair stand," and without moving a foot till the weight was delivered, he threw a distance of 20 feet 7 inches — a world's record.

It is scarcely necessary to add that Donald Dinnie had countless admirers of his athletic prowess in all parts of the world. Irrespective of his abilities as an athlete, he was a genial, kindly man, and made friends for himself wherever he went.

In his latter years Donald became somewhat pinched for money. He had made a considerable sum by his athletic feats, but the great bulk of this was lost in the Australian land boom and the bank failures that occurred in consection therewith.

On his difficulties becoming known a movement was set on foot to grant him assistance, and many of his admirers readily subscribed to the fund which enabled the worthy old veteran to conclude his days in peace and free from worry.

It may be some time before Scotland looks upon his like again in the field of athletics.

Girl is Burned to Death on Her Father's Farm

Victim Was Lillie Alberta Dimma of the Township of Markham.

MARKHAM, May 15.—Lillie Alberta, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. James Dimma, ex-Reeve of Markham township, was burned to death early yesterday morning on her father's farm near Locust Hill.

Cleaning up the farm on Saturday Mr. Dimma started a number of bonfires, and it was at one of these that the girl met her death. She got up early yesterday morning and without the knowledge of her parents went out on the farm. She was missed later and her body was found with the clothing burned off close to one of the bonfires.

Her cries were not heard, the bonfire being some distance from the house.

September Morn

The offering at the Grand Opera House Saturday next, May 20th, will be the dancing festival "September Morn," with its wealth of song, mirth, melody, happiness and joy. The book and the lyrics are by Arthur Gillespie and the music by Aubury Stauffer, two young men who fairly outdid themselves in this successful musical play, for there are no less than six emphatic song hits. The title chosen from the famous painting by Paul Chabas serves its purpose in the story only and this novel entertainment will prove a treat to theatre-goers.

The story has to do with one Rudolph Plastric, masquerading as an artist and sets claim to the originator of the famous painting. Complications arise wherein Plastric gets himself into all sorts of trouble through the appearance of an actress, who claims to be the originator and actually was the lady who bathed in the open. There are a dozen principals and the show goes with a hurrah from the rise of the curtain. The leading comedy role is in the hands of nimble Wm. Adams, who has played in many Broadway successes supported by an excellent cast and a sprightly singing and dancing chorus who trip through the seemingly difficult dancing and ensemble numbers fetchingly.

Among the many song hits that are now being whistled throughout the country are: 'Oh! You September Morn.' "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl." "A Spare Rib from the Butcher Shop of Life," "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming," "Where is the Pleasure in Wine and Song if the Woman is not there?" etc.

"September Morn" scored a long run at the La Salle Opera House, (Chicago), and is making its Eastern tour in all its merry making.

CAPT. E. J. KYLIE HAS PASSED AWAY

First among the hundreds of officers who have been prepared for active service in the Training Corps of the University of Toronto now known as the C.O.T.C., to give his life for his King and Country is Captain Edward Joseph Kylie, Adjutant of the 147th (Canadian Greys) Battalion and formerly an associate professor in the University. After a brief hard struggle, in which every thing humanly possible was done to save his life, Capt. Kylie passed away yesterday morning at the General and Marine Hospital in Owen Sound, a victim of typhoid fever and pneumonia.

A despatch from Owen Sound last night said that the flags on the public buildings and the Headquarters of the 147th Battalion were at half-mast, out of respect to the late Capt. Kylie. The remains were conveyed to the pulic hall of the municipal buildings there with a guard of honor.

Three weeks ago, Captain Kylie was taken to the hospital suffering seemingly from a slight indisposition. He had just been inoculated for typhoid, and it was expected that he would be able shortly to resume his official duties in connection with his battalion. Typhoid fever developed and the case was rendered serious by an attack of pleurisy and congestion of the lungs. It became necessary finally to sustain life by the artificial administering of oxygen.

Last Attempt to Save Life

On Saturday, the supply of oxygen at the hospital was reduced to a very small amount, and would have been exhausted before the evening train from Toronto could have reached Owen Sound with fresh quantities of it, had not additional jars of oxygen and Doctors Thistle and McPhedran been rushed from here to Captain Kylie's bedside in Major Vincent Massey's motor car. All medical assistance, however, proved of no avail and death came early Sunday morning.

Death Widely Regretted.

The news of Captain Kylie's death has cast a deep cloud of sorrow over the University of Toronto, where prior to his enlistment in the 147th Batalion, he was associate professor in the Department of Modern History. Not only in University circles but widely throughout this city, in which diversified interest had created many friendly associations, the loss of Edward Kylie is deeply lamented. Farther still than the limits of Toronto, the news of the young professor's death was heard with heartfelt regret, because his world had extended across the Dominion and even linked his name closely to the very heart of the motherland. Speaking of Captain Kylie yesterday, following the receipt of the message of his death, one of his oldest and closest friends—one who had been an early teacher said: "When we learned on Saturday that his illness was likely to prove fatal, so many of his recent associates said to me "Kylie's death will mean a national loss to Canada."

President Falconer's Regret.

"Professor E. J. Kylie embodied the finest qualities of the training that may be got from the classical course of Toronto an the school of modern history in Oxford, being a distinguished graduate of both universities, and knew how to discern and to us in his teaching those things that are of real value, and to impart his own enthusiasm to others. He was a man of singularly good and conscientious judgment, refined, independent, governed by the ideal. Never hiding his own beliefs, he was modest withal and considerate towards those who differed from him—a gentle, pure-minded scholar, but also a man of the world, with a wide circle of friends who held him in great respect. Having himself drunk so deeply of the best that England can give, Mr. Kylie was ardent in his advocacy of a closer unification of the Empire. Indeed, this was a ruling purpose in his life. And as a result of this he threw himself at once on the outbreak of war into training himself as a soldier, at first in the Officers' Training Corps, and afterwards as Adjutant of the Grey County Regiment. He had no bent towards military life, but was led by duty, and doubtless in the thorough performance of that duty, his strength, which I should think never allowed him much margin for extra effort, being weakened, he succumbed to typhoid.

"We are hoping that a man so richly endowed and so finely balanced was only reaching his full powers, and that the University would long have the services of one of her best sons. We must simply close our ranks in this war-time and face forward. Another noble offering has been made to our country's cause.

Capt. Kylie was a nephew of Mrs. John Kylie and Mr. Martin Kylie of Peterborough and is widely known here.

Editor Examiner

Dear Sir,—For some time past I have been asking myself the question "What ails our city?" For some months a great effort has been made to raise a Battalion from the city and the county, and although there has been a modicum of success it is by no means as great as it should be. When I take an evening walk I am greatly struck by the large number of apparently fit young men standing in the market Arcade, at the Charlotte street corner and in front of all the pool rooms. Are they satisfied with themselves when they see the boys of the 93rd walk past, or have they lost all sense of shame? Are they fit only to stand at a corner and jeer at every girl who happens to pass without an escort, or are they really pro-German at heart wishing to see the Empire humbled before the world? If they are not, why do they so often jeer at the boys in uniform? Mr. Editor this city should be proud of the 93rd Battalion. There is not another Battalion in the Dominion so well behaved as our boys. I believe there are only seven military police to look after the 1,000 men here, whereas in another town not many miles from here there are 200 stationed, with 37 military policemen to manage them. That is quite a contrast, Mr. Editor, and something we should be proud of. What do our young ladies think of it? Do they feel proud when they walk along George street with a young man who has not made an effort to enlist? Do they think that a young man who would not go to fight the battle of the outraged women and girls of France and Belgium would do anything to protect their honour and virtue if the Germans should happen to get possession of Canada. I am afraid it was that class of young men that I noticed did not remove their hats during the National Anthem at the drumhead service on Sunday last at Victoria Park. The sporty class, Mr. Editor, seem to be the ones that hang back. Perhaps they are afraid that a pair of puttees would hide their pink socks, and they would not be able to wear a natty necktie of a dozen colours with a tunic. If the Germans would only agree to fight the matter out with cues at a pool table, what a glorious victory these young fellows could gain. But as the Germans will insist on fighting with men's weapons we can count the sports out of it. Badinage on one side. Sir, it is nearly time our young men got a move on and saved our city from shame, for the story that Peterborough has done her share is all nonsense, for no city has done her share that has medically fit young men walking around whilst the Empire is in sore need of men. I have been informed that there are at least 600 men in the city of military age and unmarried, and to say that the city has done its bit whilst those men are here in bunkum. There are many women here who have bravely given their husbands and sons so that those other spoiled darlings could stay at home in safety; and I for one ardently hope for the day when I can turn out to see them march down George street with a big C in the middle of their backs. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain.

"Disgusted."

IF YOU WANT

PURE, SAFE MILK

It must be Scientifically Clarified and Pasteurized, otherwise Raw Milk can never be considered Safe.

CLARIFICATION contributes to the cleanliness of all milk, by removing all impurities.

PASTEURIZATION is positively necessary for all milk for the removal of diseased germs. It is the only guarantee of Purity.

MILK as it comes from all cows is not Pure. Did you ever get a microscopic view of the sediment removed from milk by a clarifier? Didn't it open your eyes?

IT IS STATED that probably 40 per cent. of the dairy cows of Ontario are suffering from tuberculosis.

THAT IS WHY the danger to health from raw milk is greater, in many respects, than the danger from so-called pure water.

THAT IS WHY the Peterborough Creamery clarifies and pasteurizes all the milk sold to its patrons in sterilized bottles.

Why Not Give This BETTER MILK a Trial?

ITALIAN BIG GUNS DO EFFECTIVE WORK

Cause Heavy Explosions in The Austrian Lines Near San Martino.

ROME, May 15—Official statement follows:

"In the Upper Adige Valley some lively artillery actions have occurred. There were especially intense in the Col di Lana zone. We have repulsed attacks on Cukla and on the Arso Heights above Lucinico. On the Carso plateau the fire of our artillery caused explosions within the Austrian lines near San Martino and dispersed some marching columns near Devotaki and Oppacchiosella.

VIENNA, May 15—The official statement says:

'On the Doberdo plateau, west of San Martino, a violent attack by the Italians during the night with hand grenades was repulsed after a tenacious struggle. On the remainder of the front there was little activities.'

Free Scholarships Are Announced By the C.P.R.

The competitive examination will be held at the University, Montreal, and at other centres throughout Canada, in June, 1916. The candidates making the highest average and complying with the requirements of admission will be awarded the scholarships and have the option of taking a course in any department of applied science.

Women and Daughter Are Found Murdered

KENORA, Ont., May 15. — The murder of Mrs. Emil Huebner and Miss Erma Huebner, wife and daughter of Emil Huebner, caretaker of the Olympia Mine, Lake of the Woods, has caused widespread excitement in this town ad district. Coroner Kinney and party, who left here Saturday morning for the scene of the tragedy, returned yesterday, bringing with them the bodies of the victims. An inquest will be held Monday evening.

Very little new light can be thrown on the tragedy at present, owing to the mental shock of Mr. Huebner, who has become prostrated over the affair and is now at the Shoal Lake settlement.

Huebner left home Thursday morning to do some work on a farm he has a short distance from the mine. On starting for home Friday afternoon his canoe was gone and an Indian's canoe left in its place. He then recalled that two Indians had visited him where he was working Thursday and asked for bread. He told them he had not sufficient to last him, but that they might get some at his home. He started for home, arriving there about dusk. The house was in darkness, and on walking into the kitchen he was horrified to find the dead body of his only daughter lying on the floor with a gunshot wound in her right eye, also a wound in the index finger of the right hand which had severed the finger. Mrs. Huebner was not in the house.

Some time later her body was found in a pool of blood not far from the door of the office at the Mikado mine. She had been shot through the hip, the bullet penetrating the abdomen.

The authorities are now looking for the two Indians.

FATHER WAS SCOLDED.

Daughters In Ancient Days Not Unlike Those of To-day.

"Dear Dad—You went off to Alexandria without taking me with you. If you do that again I shall not write to you while you are away, nor will I speak to you when you return."

This rebuke was written by a little girl—not a Chicago girl who has asked the police to find her father but by a girl of Palestine, many hundred years ago. The authority for it is the Rev. C. M. Cobern, of Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., who has spent many years in the Orient making researches. Mr. Cobern told the Methodist Episcopal Ministers' Association of his researches.

"In a love letter to a wife or sweetheart," he said, "a man wrote: 'I am so sorry to have been away from you for sixty days that I have not bathed since last I left you.'"

WEDDING BELLS

KING—DELA FOSSE.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's Church this morning when Quartermaster-Sergt. Cyril Wardale King, orderly room sergeant of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., and son of Mr. Wardale King, of Stourbridge, England, was united in marriage to Miss Philippa Gabrielle Dela Fosse, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Dela-Fosse, Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Cornish and Major Davidson. The bridesmaid was Miss Elenor Latimer of Peterborough, while the groom was assisted by Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp, Machine Gun officer of the 93rd Battalion. The young couple left on the 7:30 train on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and other points.

DIXON—FOOTE.

On Wednesday evening, May 10, 1916, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon was the scene of a pretty house wedding, when their second youngest daughter, Meta Mae, was united in matrimony to Mr. Frederick R. F. Foote, of Peterborough, by the Rev. Mr. White, of St. Luke's, East City, in the presence of about fifty guests.

Promptly at five o'clock the bride entered the parlour leaning on the arm of her father to the strains of Wagner's Wedding March, played by the groom's niece, Miss Gertrude Thompson. The bride was handsomely dressed in a brocaded silk voile, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and maidenhair ferns.

After congratulations the bride and groom led the way to the dining-room, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served.

A number of beautiful and costly presents were received by the bride as a testimony of the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends.

After spending a pleasant evening Mr. and Mrs. Foote left for their new home in Peterborough amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a happy and prosperous life.

German Fleet Leaves the Kiel Canal For the Gulf of Riga

Russians March Through The Mountain Passes Into Mesopotamia

Forces Suddenly Appear Near Mosul Driving Turks Into Retreat---Advance of the Utmost Importance

LONDON, May 16.—A Russian column, perhaps operating from Lake Urumiah, has unexpectedly appeared near Rowanduz, 51 miles northeast of Mosul, having apparently marched through the mountain passes into Mesopotamia. As Mosul is on the projected route of the Bagdad railway, and one of the key positions of the eastern situation, the advance is of the utmost importance. The official Petrograd announcement says:

"In the direction of Mosul our troops in Mesopotamia have occupied the Rowanduz region, where they defeated enemy detachments, which, during their precipitate retreat, abandoned three guns and some war material."

Elsewhere in the East the Russians are holding their own. The army which marched west from Erzerum is still held up between Ashkale and Erzingan, and is reported in a stiff engagement. Petrograd's version follows:

"In the direction of Erzingan detachments of our regular troops in conjunction with territorial reserves, following a merciless night attack powerfully organized by the enemy on a lofty range dominating the whole adjoining region, took prisoner in the course of the engagement thirty officers and 365 soldiers of Turkish infantry.

"The troops forming the advance guard of our army easily checked an enemy offensive movement in the region of Mamakhatun.

"On the left wing of our army one of our column, having defeated the Turks in an engagement which lasted two days, made prisoners and captured an undamaged gun, over 2,000 rines, many thousand cartridges, and a large quantity of gunpowder and other material."

The battle "in the direction of Erzingan," is quite frequently described by Berlin as follows:

"In the Caucasus region the Russians having been driven from their positions in the Kope (near Ashkale) sector, northwest of Erzerum, and having resumed their offensive which failed on May 11, began a series of violent assaults with the object of capturing their lost positions on the Kope Mountains and at Bahtli, nor of Kope.

"The attacks were repulsed. Our artillery fire cut terrible gaps in the retreating Russian columns. We took about 100 prisoners."

THE ENEMY LACKS RESERVES

London Times Expert Comments on the Verdun Operations.

LONDON, May 16.— Col. Repington, military expert of the Times, says:

"The German staff boasts that their 25 divisions before Verdun have been opposed by 51 of the French. Of course, there have been 30 divisions of Germans fighting at Verdun, but for 25 or even 30 German divisions to attack an entrenched enemy who have double that number of divisions at his command is not an act of sanity and we are sure that the only reason General Von Falkenhayn has not piled on more troops is that he has no more to pile on.

"He has called to Verdun the one and only German division in reserve at his disposal on the whole eastern front, and has also probably brought up a few divisions from Siberia to try to make good. He can do no more without weakening the armies holding the rest of the line, unless he has fresh formations in the interior of Germany, and it is certain that no such formations have yet been at the front.

"Meanwhile, assuming that the German figures for Verdun are correct, we hold up 40 German divisions and enable 54 French divisions to exhaust 25 German divisions. This suits us all except Germany very well. And meanwhile we have our own idea of what we shall do and when we shall do it, and do not intend to allow the Germans to choose our hour for us.

"Similarly on the Russian front we must not expect too much at the present. Much of this theatre is without roads, and it would be impatience run mad to expect the great armies of Russia to move without roads."

Barn Door Blew Open Killing Aged Woman

Mrs. Matilda Merryweather, Aged 76 Years, Found Dead by Son-in-Law.

NEWMARKET, May 15.—A singular fatality occurred during the big windstorm by which Mrs. Matilda Merryweather, 3rd Concession, Whitchurch township, aged seventy-six years, lost her life.

Apparently she had gone out to put a plank against the barn doors to keep them closed during the storm, and in some way one of the doors was wrenched off the hinges, striking the woman on the head and killing her instantly.

Her son-in-law, Norman Gibney, with whom she lived, returned home from work and found her lying dead in the barnyard.

GERMAN BREAD BAN.

Government Now Regulating the Distribution of Dough.

Control of the production and distribution of all the dough used in the bakeries of the German Empire by the Imperial Grain Committee is announced in the following report sent out from Berlin on April 16 by the Wolff News Bureau.

"The temporary scarcity of the necessities of life, due in no small degree to the large and entirely unnecessary 'fear-purchases' made by mid dlemen and consumers, has caused the Imperial Grain Committee to make an arrangement with the Association of German Manufacturers of Dough Product of Frankfurton-the Main whereby, in order to see that the people's wants are supplied, the combined output of all the dough-making factories must be placed at the disposition of the Imperial Grain Committee until further notice.

"The Imperial Grain Committee will allow the dough products to be sent on to the district associations only and then in accordance with the population of the district and the conditions obtaining there. Through this method of distribution an equitable allotment of dough will be insured, something that will be primarily to the advantage of the less prosperous part of the population.

"Th reasons why the middlemen cannot be allowed the same freedom of action as in times of peace are to be found in the conditions and exigencies due to te war. It is therefore to be expected that the patriotic intelligence of those concerned will cause them to submit to these necessities. The consumers must also take these conditions into acount so far as to postpone their requests for the delivery of certain kinds that are obtainable.

"The majoity of the smaller bakeries in Germany do not manufacture their own dough, but buy it ready-made from the big dough-making concerns in the larger cities.

Papa—"Yes, my son, if you want to learn anything well you must begin at the bottom." Little Bobby—"How about swimming, pa?"

Brown—"Poor Jones leads a dog's life." Smith—"Really?" Brown—"Yes, his wife spends all her time waiting on him and calling him pet names!"

DEADLY LEWIS GUN.

One Accounted for 330 Germans in Half an Hour.

NEW YORK, May 16.—A London cable to the Herald says:—The Germans were for many months superior in machine guns, but the British now have a gun which can beat this and is beating it every day. Invented by an American officer, Col. Lewis, and made in Belgium, almost up to the moment when the German scouts entered the city of its manufacture, the invention narrowly escaped capture by the Germans. Its killing power may be gauged from the fact that in one trench recently one of these guns, manned by a crew of two men, accounted for 330 Germans in half an hour.

Suppose that instead of a rifle weighing ten pounds and firing fifteen bullets a minute and carried by one man, one had a rifle weighing twenty-five pounds and firing fifteen bullets a second and carried by two men, what would be the effect on any advance made by the enemy? No troops could meet such a weapon. Not one would live to raise his rifle to his shoulder. The new arm gives the greatest volume of fire in the least time of any gun known. It is working now in France and Flanders night and day.

The gun can be fired upside down from an aeroplane or sideways from a trench, from the ground, from a wall or from the roof of a house. It comes to pieces like a jig saw puzzle in a minute under expert hands, and only one tool is needed and that tool is an ordinary rifle bullet. These guns are being made in England now.

The Lewis machine gun is the type purchased by the Province of Ontario for supplying the troops. The 93rd Machine Gun Section is training with the Lewis gun at the present time.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLMOTT

Bijonah Tanner, who stood by the pen watching the silver stream as it flowed over the side into the pen, mussed his beard and shook his head. The fish were fair, but not what should be expected at this time of year. He would sail along to another favourable anchorage. This was his first day on the Banks and two days after Nellie's discovery of Elsa's packet.

It was only noon, but Bijonah was speculating, and when he saw the fog-bank coming he refused to run any risk with his men, and recalled them to the schooner by firing his shotgun until they all replied to the signal by raising one oar upright.

It must not be thought that it was the fog that induced Bijonah to do this. Dorymen almost always fish when a fog comes down, and trust to their good fortune in finding the schooner. Bijonah wanted to look over the morning's catch and get in tune with the millions under his keel.

By the time the last dory was in, the pile of fish in the pen looked like a heap of molten silver.

"You wellers fix tables fer dressin' down while the fust half mugs up," said Tanner. "Everybody lively now. I cal'late to move just a little bit. The bottom here don't suit me yet."

He went down from the poops and walked the deck, listening between clangings of the bell for any sound of an approaching vessel. The crew worked swiftly at dressing and salting the catch.

"Haul up anchor," he ordered when the work was done.

The watch laid hold the windlass rides and hauled the vessel forward directly above her hook. Then there was a concerted heave and the ground tackle broke loose and came up with a rush.

Under headsails and riding sail the Rosan swung into the light air that stirred the fog and began to crawl forward while the men were still cat-heading the anchor. The youth who had been ringing the bell now substituted the patent fog-horn, as marine law requires when vessels are under way.

With his eyes on the compass, Turner guided the ship himself. They seemed to move through an endless gray world.

For an hour they sailed, the only sounds being the flap of the canvas, the creaking of the tiller ropes, and the drip of the fog. Tanner was about to give the word to let go the anchor when, without warning, they suddenly burst clear of the fog and came out into the vast gray welter of the open sea.

Tanner suddenly straightened up, and slipping the wheel swiftly into the becket, he ran to the taffrail and looked over the side.

"Good God!" he cried. "What's this?"

Not fifty feet away lay a blue dory, heavy and logsy with water, and in the bottom the unconscious figure of a man.

"Wheelan and arkle, overside with the starboard dory. Here's Code Schofield adrift! Lively now!"

There was a rush aft, but Tanner met the crew and drove them to the nested boats amidships.

"Over, I say!" he roared.

The men obeyed him, and Wheelan and markle were soon pulling madly to the blue dory astern.

When they reached it one man clambered to the bow and cut the drag rope that Code, in his extremity, had thrown over nearly two days before. Then, fastening the short painter to a thwart in their own craft, they hauled the blue dory and its contents alongside the Rosan.

Code Schofield lay with his eyes closed, pale as wax, and seemingly dead. In his right hand he still gripped convulsively the bailing-can he had used until consciousness left him.

Man, boat, and all, the dory was hauled up and let gently down on the deck. Then the eager hands lifted Schofield from the water and laid him on the oiled boards.

"Take him into my cabin," ordered Tanner. "Johnson, bring hot water and rags. Cookee, make some strong soup. If there's any life in him we'll bring it back. On the jump, there!"

"Wal," said one man, when Code had been carried below, "I thought my halibut was high line to-day, but the skipper beat me out in the end."

CHAPTER XVI.
A STAGGERING BLOW.

"Here is something my father just asked me to give you."

Nellie held out to Code the packet that she had discovered in the skipper's drawer several days before. Code, seated on the roof of the cabin in the only loose chair aboard the Rosan, and wrapped in blankets, took the sealed bundle curiously.

He looked at the round, feminine handwriting across the envelope, and failed to evince any flash of guilt or intelligence.

It was three days after Code's rescue by the Rosan and the first that he had felt any of his old strength coming back to him.

For the first twenty-four hours after being revived he did nothing but sleep, and awoke to find Nellie Tanner beside his bunk nursing him. Since then it had been merely a matter of patience until his exhausted body had recuperated from the shock.

For once Nellie had command of the Rosan, and everything stood aside for her patient. The delicacies that issued from the galley after she had occupied it an hour, and that went directly to Code, almost had the result of inciting a mutiny among all hands; terms of settlement being the retirement of the old cook and installation of this new find.

Code ripped open the packet. He stared in amazement at the yellow bills. Then he discovered the letter and began to read it. Despite the healthy red of his weather-beaten face, a tide of colour surged up over it.

Nellie turned her head away and looked over the oily gray sea to where the men of the Rosan were toiling in their dories. In the distance there was a sail here and there, for the Rosan was slowly overhauling the fleet from Freekirk Head.

Code stole a swift glance at her, and forgot to read his letter as he studied the fresh roundness and beauty of her face. He vaguely felt that there was a reserved manner between them.

"The letter is from Mrs. Mallaby," he said.

"Yes? That is interesting."

The girl's cool, level eyes met his, and he blushed again.

"She has a good heart," he stumbled on, "and always thinks of others."

"Yes, she has," agreed the girl without enthusiasm, and Code dropped the subject.

"How did your father happen to have this for me?" he asked, after a pause.

"Well, you know, you surprised everybody by leaving the Head before the rest of the fleet. Elsa had it in mind to give you this packet, she says, before you left. But when you went so suddenly she asked father to give it to you. She said she expected the Rosan would catch the Lass on the Banks. At least, this is the yarn dad told me."

"She seems to know considerable about the Banks and the ways of fishermen," he said, with an unconscious ring of enthusiasm in his tone.

"Yes; you'd think she pulled her own dory instead of being the richest woman in New Brunswick."

Code looked at his old sweetheart in amazement. He had never seen her so disagreeable. His eye fell upon her left hand.

For a moment his mind did not register an impression. Then all of a sudden it flashed upon him that her ring was gone.

"Oh, that explains everything!" he said to himself. "She has either lost it or quarrelled with Nat, and it's no wonder she is unhappy."

Nellie was saying to herself: "The letter must have been very personal or he would have told me about it. He never acted like this before. There is something between them."

Suddenly astern of them sounded the flap of sails, rattle of blocks, and shouted orders. They turned in time to see a schooner come up into the wind all standing.

She was clothed in canvas from head to foot, with a balloon-jib and staysail added, and made her position less than a hundred yards away.

Schofield gazed at the schooner curiously. Then he leaned forward, his eyes alight. There were certain points about her that were familiar. With a fisherman's skill he had catalogued her every point. He looked at the trail-board along her bows, and where the name should have been there was a blank, painted-out space.

It was the mystery schooner!

Once more all the fears that had assailed Code's mind at her first appearance returned. He was certain that there was mischief in this. But he sat quiet as the vessel drifted down upon the anchored Rosan.

As he looked her over his eyes were drawn aloft to a series of wires strung between her topmasts. Other wires ran down the foremast to a little cubby just aft of it.

"By the great squid, they've got wireless!" he said. "This beats me!"

At fifty yards the familiar man with the enormous megaphone made his appearance.

"Ahoy, there!" he roared. "Any one aboard the Rosan seen or heard anything of Captain Code Schofield, of the Grande Mignon schooner Charming Lass?"

Code rose out of his chair, took off his hat ironically, and swung it before him as he made a low bow.

"At your service!" he shouted. "I was picked up three days ago, adrift in my dory. What do you want with me?"

This sudden avowal created a half panic aboard the mysterious schooner, and the man astern exchanged his megaphone for field glasses. After a long scrutiny he went back to the megaphone.

"Congratulations, captain!" came the bellow. "When are you going to rejoin the Lass?"

"As soon as the Rosan catches her," replied Code, and then, exasperated by the unexpected manoeuvres of this remarkable vessel, he cried: "Who are you and what do you want that you chase me all over the sea?"

Instantly the man put down the megaphone and gave orders to the crew, and in five minutes she was on her way north into the very heart of the fleet.

"I don't know who she is or why she is or who is aboard her," he told Nellie, after recounting to her the previous visitation of the schooner. "She reminds me of a nervous old hen keeping track of a stray chick. Pretty soon I won't be able to cause the wonder without being afraid my guardian will bear me. I say guardian, and yet I don't know whether she is friendly or merely fixing up some calamity to break all at once. You know I have enemies. She may be working for them."

The girl could offer no solution, nor could Bijonah Tanner, who had witnessed the incident from the forecastle head where he was smoking and anticipating the wishes of the one beneath him. He had walked aft, and the three discussed the mystery.

"Ever see her before, captain?" asked Code.

If there was any man who knew schooners that had fished the Banks or the Bay of Fundy, it was Bijonah Tanner.

"Don't cal'late I ever did. I've never saw jest that set to a fore-gaff nor jest that cut of a jumbo-jib afore."

Tanner watched the schooner as she scudded away.

"Mighty big hurry, I allow," he remarked. "But, Jimmy, doesn't she sail! There ain't hardly an air o' wind stirrin' and yet look at her go! She's a mighty-able vessel."

It was about four o'clock the next afternoon that the Rosan crept up in the middle of the fishing fleet. She had made a long berth overnight, dressed an excellent morning's catch and knocked off half a day because Bijonah did not feel it right to keep Code longer away from his vessel.

And Tanner managed the thing with a good eye to the dramatic. When he reached the rear guard of the fleet he began to work his vessel gracefully in and out among the sloops and schooners.

Code, seated in his chair on the cabin roof, did not realize what was going on until the triumphal procession was well under way.

SAILOR'S PIN MONEY

There are several official and many unofficial ways in which the British sailor makes extra money in his scanty leisure time afloat. Chief among the purely official means Jack has of adding to his hard-earned "screw" are by doing shorthand and typewriting for officers, acting as "schoolmaster," as ship's librarian, or as organist. For playing the hymns at Church service he will get an additional six cents a day; twelve cents a day extra is paid to the librarian, and the "schoolmaster" adds ten cents a day to his pay. Six cents a day over his ordinary pay is earned by the man who numbers shorthand and typewriting among his accomplishments, for he will get work as an officer's writer, or secretary, as we should say ashore. Then he may get work at an occasional court-martial. For attending these unhappy functions and taking the official notes of the proceedings he gets eleven cents for every folio (seventy-two words) that he writes.

But it is through the unofficial means that most sailors augment their wages. Aboard every ship-o'-war there is a "Jew." By birth he may be English, Irish, Welsh, or Scottish, but he'll still be called the "Jew" by his shipmates, because his odd-time job afloat is tailoring. This is probably the most profitable of all Jack's spare time trades. He undertakes anything in the needle-and-thread line, from sewing on a trousers button to making a complete suit of clothes, perfectly cut and fitting beautifully, if he is supplied with the material. His charge for this is $1.20.

Organize Women's Work

The British Board of Agriculture has ten women "organizers," who see that every county in England is organized down to its smallest village for the employment of women labor on the farms. Registers for women candidates are opened in each village, and both women and farmers are becoming acquainted with their purpose. Instruction is given in light farmwork and milking, and in the care of pigs and poultry. Already 15,000 women graduates of such courses of instruction are at work on farms.

Rare Laughter

In times of peace the King's laugh was often heard at dinner as he conversed with his friends. But since the war his intense feeling of anxiety as to the trend of events has made him silent and absorbed. One night a merry lady at dinner diverted him, and for once he laughed long and heartily. "Thank you for being so funny," said the Queen to her afterwards; "that's the first time I've heard the King really laugh for a year."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Happiest Delay

"I can't dear; I just can't do it, you must see that yourself. I want some beauty in my life, boy. I'm starving for ease and luxury and freedom. The girl's eyes were sorrowful but firm.

Dodney Taft, young, slim, boyish turned away in grieved bewilderment.

A week later Clairabelle Kent promised to marry Thomas Atwood, her employer, who was president of the company, and a very nice man indeed. Even Rodney agreed with this Mr. Atwood was middle-aged and a trifle thick at the waistline, and one would scarcely notice that his hair was thinning. He would not let Clairabelle go to the office any more, but employed a lank young man in her place. He urged an immediat emarriage, but Clairabelle pleaded for three months' delay. "I've never been engaged before," she protested, "and I want to taste every single experience other girls have."

Thus began a regular story book life for the little stenographer, for Mr. Atwood did it up in perfect form. First, he brought her the ring—a monstrous solitaire pearl like a creamy bubble, Clairabelle gasped at the beauty of the great gem. "They say pearls are unlucky," she murmured as he fitted it upon her finger.

Mr. Atwood laughed. He was not much swayed by signs and tokens. "It was unlucky to my bank account, that's all. Get rid of your superstition, sweetheart, for I mean to restoon you with pearls after we are married. You are like a pearl yourself, darling, with that pale pure coloring." He placed a satin lined limousine at her disposal and sent flowers every morning. There were matinee tickets, too, for any theatre she cared to attend in the whole big city, and season cards for all the finest concerts. Mr. Atwood himself did not care for such things.

People were nice to them, at least Mr. Atwood's people were. Clairabelle had only a fragile little mother, who was tremulous over her girl's romance, while secretly disappointed that the hero should be so near her own age.

They were invited to many dinner parties, where everybody petted Clairabelle and paid her compliments. Small wonder they admired her—slender fashioned, quaint of manner, with dove's eyes, and a delectable profile. She spoke in low throaty tones which pulled at the hearer's heart-strings.

Thomas Atwood's set was an old fashioned conventional circle, serenely secure in their own importance. At first Clairabelle suffered qualms of diffidence in the dignified, handsomely furnished houses; she rather dreaded the stately dining rooms with their long banquet boards, or great round tables, candle gemmed and banked with roses. The trim, capable maids and awe-inspiring butlers overwhelmed her with their perpetual comings and goings through an interminable number of courses. On these occasions Clairabelle felt immensely proud of he fiance; he held his own so grace fully in the midst of people whose names were famous throughout the land.

By the time Clairabelle found herself at ease among Mr. Atwood's friends she began to be a trifle bored; they were so much older than she was, and the call of youth to its kind is the strongest note in nature. She was delighted one evening when Mr. Atwood suggested that they might with propriety dine at some public place, since they had no other engagement for the night. They went to the newest and most luxurious hotel in the city, where the orchestra was composed of individual artists, and the dancers and singers were world renowned. There were softly shaded lights, beautiful women in miraculous frocks and exquisitely worn jewels; handsome, smoothly groomed men and velvet footed waiters. Clairabelle was so charmed with the enchanted atmosphere that her escort promised to take her to all the best places in town.

So it came to pass that many evenings they patronized some famous cafe or hotel, joining the pleasure-mad throng, yet unmistakably removed from any real participation in the merriment. Always Clairabelle felt herself to be an outsider, a looker-on at the fun of others.

One night at the close of their dinner Mr. Atwood narrowed his eyes, fixing one of the rainbow bubbles to the light. "Rather good glass service they have here don't you think?

Clairabelle tore her attention from a laughing roup of young people at the next table, who were exclaiming over a dance trophy one of the party had just won. "Very pretty," she said politely.

"We might pick up some of this for our house," he suggested.

Clairabelle started. "Are we going to have a house?' she faltered.

"Why, yes. I thought so, when we tire of travelling and settle down."

Her eyes were once more irresistibly drawn to that other table, where the young folks were now in a perfect fury of mirth, but again her fiance's voice crossed its way to her attention. "What color should you choose for your reception room? he was asking.

Clairabelle dug her teeth into her lips and listened patiently. She did not yawn once, but when at the end of the evening he gently kissed her good night, and she found herself in her own shabby little boarding house hall bedroom, she heaved a deep sigh of relief.

The flaring gaslight beside her dressing mirror reflecting her wan, white image with startling distinctness, and she leaned forward with a horrified cry. "How old and faded I look," she thought in dismay, and could it be possible? Yes, at the outer corners of her eyes were faint sprays of wrinkle lines. "It's not making me happy," she moaned.

Then deliberately Clairabelle sat herself down to think of the future which stretched before he—a long, slow future like one of those formal dinners. She would go to live in a very correct house with a conventional reception room, and would have people in to tiresome entertainments. Thomas Mr. Atwood ,would always be very, very good to her and never deny her anything she wanted—he had promised that much, but he would never laugh with her over nothing, as those boys and girls at the other table were laughing, as she ached to laugh. He was the best man in the world, but there were no dreams in his eyes, and no thrill in his touch.

Impulsively she wrote a note to Rodney Taft asking him to come to her, and the next morning, when phoning Mr. Atwood as usual, to thank him for his flowers, she told him rather peremptorily not to call that evening.

At 8 P.M. Clairabelle garbed in one of her oldest and shabbiest frocks, met the bewildered youth in the stiff parlor, hat on and wrap in hand. "You're to take me to the movies," she declared ;at sight of him a radical glow had suffused her luminous pallor.

Even as they descended the front stoop Clairabelle began to pretend just as in the days before her engagement. "We're eloping," she whispered, 'and there's your hated rival passing across the street; he's hurrying so that you won't catch a glimpse of his face'.

Rodney, ever quick to respond, instantly caught her mood; "Let's overtake him and see if he will dare defy us."

And so the aged-old game of youth was on again, and Clairabelle chattered and giggled, and played silly jokes until they got back to the boarding house."

"I suppose this is the last time," he said. "I—I thank you, dear, for the evening."

Clairabelle held him with a bewildering smile. "Do you still like me a little bit? she asked him provokingly.

His arms shot out, but swiftly eluding him, she ran up the front stoop. "I'll telephone you in the morning" she whispered back. "I can't say any more now, because you see, I'm still engaged to him."

That night when Clairabelle turned up the sputtering gas jet a glorified vision answered her smiles. Sharply she peered at her silk smooth skin, but the faint sprays of wrinkle lines had been driven away by the evening's laughter.

"Oh!" she sighed ecstatically, "this is the happiest way," and a thrill tingled to her fingertips at the thought of Rodney's slim boyishness and the dreams which slept in his glad, young eyes.

SWEDE FLAG VIOLATED.

Germans Board Vessel Flying it and Burn the Former.

Stockholm, May 15. — The captain of the Swedish schooner Harald gives in The Dagens Nyheter an account of the sinking of his ship by a German submarine in the North Sea on May 5. The ship was halted by the submarine, the commander of which gave the crew fifteen minutes in which to abandon the schooner. The captain of the Harald refused to obey the order and hoisted the Swedish flag. The Germans then boarded the schooner and poured petroleum over the ship, which they lighted. They then attacked the captain with cutlasses, forcing him into a small boat. The blazing petroleum not destroying the Harald quick enough, the ship was sunk by gunfire from the submarine.

RAILWAYS SAVED CALAIS

Rapid Concentration Despite Difficulties Won Ypres

"The battles of the Yser and Ypres were, in the first instance, won by the French railroads, and though the German lines possessed certain initial advantages over them, they have held their own throughout the war," says an officer closely concerned in the mobilization, concentration and deployment of the French troops. "The Germans had the advantage of distance, since the line took the form of a triangle; inside that triangle their points of concentration are nearer to the Yser or any other part of the front than the Allies' concentration points on the other side where it is necessary to turn the angle instead of going across the inside of it." It appears that General Joffre foresaw the German flanking movement toward Calais during the last days of the battle of the Marne, and began sending troops to parry it as early as Sept. 8th. Between that date and the beginning of October 800 trains carried 17 army corps and three divisions of cavalry northwards.

BRITISH TRENCHES

Many of Them Have Boarded or Brick Floors

Enormous improvements have been made in the British trenches. Most of them have boarded floors, others have brick floors. They have a system of trench pumps to get rid of the water, and pipes which run a mile and a half back from the front of the trench supply drinking water to the men. The dug-outs are comparatively comfortable. The men have rough beds to lie on, and many contain tables. Many of them also have small braziers with fires.

One of the most valued presents which the men receive are boxes of nightlights, which they are allowed to burn in their dug-outs. This year the men have been served out with long indiarubber boots. When a battalion of men is coming to the trenches, it finds in the supporting lines these boots waiting. They remove their own boots, get an extra pair of thick stockings, and put on the rubber boots. When coming away after a turn in the trenches they leave these boots at the same station, and receive their own boots and socks, which have been dried for them.

Put Him in Petticoats

Displaying much nervousness, an accounts clerk read a statement to the East Ham Tribunal, which ran: "I am of far too sensitive a nature to have anything to do with military matters. I work in an office in the city, and find it very difficult to go there on account of the fearful sensitiveness of my nature. It would have suited me better if I had been born a girl instead of a fellow." Three months' postponement was granted on domestic grounds.

COUNTRY LACKED FOOD

King Nicholas' Grandson an Italian Prince, Guessed Truth

King Nicholas of Montenegro, who felt quite at home in his small palace at Lyons, and who is the most easily accessible of monarchs, told the following little story of his little grandson, Prince Humbert of Piedmont, son of the King and Queen of Italy, to a Parisian journalist who called on him there after his recovery. "My grandson," said the king, "was a veritable ray of sunshine to me during these dark hours of my life when I was still asking myself if I had acted right in leaving my native soil instead of fighting there sword in hand to the last. He was very respectful and it did not take him long to discover that I was not happy.

"'Why are so said, grandfather? Who has done you any harm?'

"I answered: 'Your poor grandfather is a beaten man, my boy.

"'But who has dared beat you, who are so big and strong?' the boy asked. 'Where did they beat you, tell me.'

"I was beaten all over, on the arms and legs, in the head and on the chest by those who are my enemies.

"The boy looked at me with tears in his big dark eyes, thought for a moment and then said: 'Then you had nothing more to eat in your country?'

"That is how this little boy of twelve years discovered the true reason of our defeat far quicker than any diplomat or chancellor. He, at least, did not suspect me as others did, in the most unjust and cruel manner, but had instinctively felt that his big old grandfather would never stop fighting, as long as there was food in his country."

BOASTS 520 GODSONS

Splendid Frenchwoman Looks After Many Boys at Front

Almost every woman in France has adopted at least one soldier at the front or prisoner in a German camp as her godson, but the record as godmother is held by Mme. Robin of Paris, who has no less than 520 godsons and who is constantly adding to the number. She did not hesitate though her maternal duties took up her time entirely. No more visits, no concerts, even her daily walk in the Bois she has given up in order to devote herself to her numerous godsons.

"You see, I had no son of my own to offer to France," she said, "so it was quite natural that I should want to do something for the soldiers who are fighting and who have no relatives of their own." All Mme. Robin's godsons come from the French departments now occupied by the Germans. She sends them parcels of food and clothing regularly, corresponds with them and has even succeeded in locating the wives and children of some of them. She employs a staff of three secretaries to whom she dictates her letters and half a dozen young girls who work all day making up parcels which are daily taken to the post office in a motor moving van.

"My boys are exceedingly thankful to me and more than reward me for what I am doing for them," she said. "The only ones who occasionally grumble, are those who are in the East. Here is one who writes 'Your letters take twenty days to reach me, your parcels a whole month. Fortunately, we have got rid of the submarines now, so I hope the service will be better."

"THIS IS OUR HOUR"

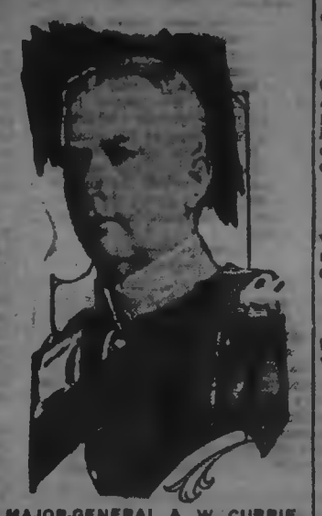
Australia's Premier Says Now is Britain's Opportunity

"Britain is thoroughly aroused. It is stirred to its very depths. Like a strong man called upon to fight for his life who casts his outer garments aside and strips to the buff, so party shibboleths, cherished doctrines have been put away and quietly but determinedly the nation is throwing its whole energy into the fight." So said Mr. W. M. Hughes, the Australian Premier, in a vigorous and outspoken speech. "The British people," said Mr. Hughes, "recognize amongst the chief causes of this war the desire of Germany to wrest from Britain her industrial and commercial supremacy. We must kill the hope that still buoys Germany up.

"The task which the people of the Empire have set themselves—the extirpation—root, branch and seed—of German control and influence in British commerce and industry is no light one.

"The German cancer has eaten into our national body in such a fashion that we cannot cut it without seeming in some cases to cut into the healthy flesh. This war has rung the death knell of a policy of cheapness that took no thought for the social and industrial welfare of the workmen, that mistook mere wealth for greatness, no matter whether the wealth was in our hands or those of German Jews.

"To delay the public declaration of what our trade policy is to be is to make the work of attempting to eradicate German influence in our midst infinitely more difficult and to make any radical change after the war impossible. This is our hour, our opportunity, which, being let slip, will pass for ever."



MAJOR-GENERAL A. W. CURRIE
who commanded the 2nd Infantry Brigade in Flanders at the time of the Battle of Ypres. He was awarded a C.B. and the Cross of a Commander of the Legion of Honor. He came from Vancouver.

Asphyxiating Noises

All English battalions were warned to keep a careful watch for any contrivances which the Germans might use with the object of producing poisonous gases. Shortly afterward a certain regiment on taking over some trenches found an old bagpipe left in the lines. At once the colonel, who possessed a rare sense of humor, sent the following message to brigade headquarters: "A weird instrument has just been discovered in my trenches; it is believed to be used for producing asphyxiating noises."

Japan Paying Her Debts

The war prosperity of Japan is shown by the fact that Japan for the first time in her history has floated a foreign loan, besides taking steps to redeem an unprecedentedly large amount of her own debts. That Japan should become a creditor nation even on a small scale took her bankers by surprise and the foreign loan of $25,000,000 to Russia was a failure owing to the manner in which it was handled.

Could Not Stand The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WAR'S "CRIPPLE CITY" FLOURISHES AT VIENNA

Austria Teaches Trades to Ever-growing Army of War Victims—Thousands in Training

To get an idea of all the awful misery created by the present world war one has to visit the "Cripple City" of Vienna. Far out in the tenth district, away from the noise and bustle of the heart of the Austrian capital, a small town of maimed soldiers has sprung into existence. Every one of the 3,000 inhabitants, with the exception of the surgeons, attendants and instructors, has lost one or more limbs on the battlefield. The "Cripple City" was originally a school for war invalids founded by Dr. Spitzy late in 1914. The institution soon became too small, as cripples arrived from all sides. When the founder found himself unable to receive more unfortunates he appealed to the Austro-Hungarian war department for aid and a military hospital with forty-two other large buildings was turned over to him. Many workshops, and dormitories have been erected and the colony now consists of about eighty buildings.

Their Training

Many of the inhabitants of this strange, sad town have lost both legs and are helpless when they arrive, but within a comparatively short time, in three to four months, they not only walk about with artificial limbs but also do useful work which makes them self-supporting. After the legless invalids have been examined by Dr. Spitzy and his assistants their training begins. Short stilts are fastened to the stumps of their amputated limbs and, hanging on ropes guided by trolleys, they begin to hobble about. In a week or two most of them are able to walk without the supporting ropes. Then they receive higher stilts and these are lengthened from week to week until they reach normal height.

After more practice, artificial legs with joints take the place of the wooden stilts and the cripples are soon able to throw away their crutches. They not only walk with ease, but also run, jump, dance and are now ready for instruction in some trade. In thirty-two workshops and twenty-two classrooms the cripples work or study six to eight hours every day. Each one of them is taught to make the best possible use of the limbs he still possesses and the artificial substitutes of his amputated arms or legs. In most cases special tools have to be constructed for the maimed men. In one of the workshops we see a watchmaker who has lost both of his legs in one of the battles in the Carpathian Mountains busily at work at his old trade. In another shop carpenters and cabinetmakers with one or two artificial arms handle their saws and planes and in the barber shop barbers with cork legs and one artificial arm shave their comrades and trim their hair. A wood-carver whose right leg has been torn off by a shell in Serbia is making an artificial hand which will enable his friend, a clerk, to write again.

See Others: Take Heart

When the cripples first arrive it is generally hard to convince them that they will ever be able to earn their living and enjoy life, but they soon take hope when they see their comrades who came before them at work. The "Cripple City" contains workshops for machinists, tinsmiths, electricians, opticians, watchmakers, painters, compositors, masons, stonecutters, bakers, sign painters, butchers, barbers and shoemakers, and also schools for stenographers and typewriters, telegraphers, bookkeepers, chauffeurs and photographers. Even a school of music has been organized, and the colony has an orchestra of fifty, all cripples. Farmers and laborers receive their training and instruction on a large tract of land which belongs to the army department and has been transformed into a garden.

Cripples who are not able to handle any tools are taught to run automatic machines. In one of the factories of this unique town machines daily turn out 10,000 pairs of shoes for the soldiers in the field, and in another shop hundreds of sewing machines produce uniforms, while in one large building dozens of machines make fine embroidery. The machines represent a capital of more than a million dollars and have been donated to the cripples by manufacturers.

Curious Recruiting Custom

The Russian army in the early part of last century had a curious way of raising troops. A levy of two to four men out of every 500 were selected and then medically examined at the army's headquarters, either at Moscow or Petersburg (now Petrograd). If the recruit successfully passed, he was then turned over to an officer, who saw to it that he was correctly measured and, if the proper height, was sent into another apartment, where the front part of his head was shaved. If rejected as being medically unfit or short of the necessary height, the back part of his head was then shorn of its locks to prevent him from appearing again among new levies.

A Long War

A staff officer was sitting in the front seat of the car, and the chauffeur, who had been chatting away, asked: "How long d'you think the war will last, sir?"

The staff officer replied that it looked as if it was likely to last some time. The chauffeur said nothing for a bit, and then was heard to murmur to himself: "Well, I suppose the first five years will be the worst!"—The Minden Magazine.

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, so you must have something also to lift you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jos. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for several months so bad that I could not get a night's rest. I used several medicines recommended by the druggist. My doctor also prescribed but nothing he gave me brought any relief. Instead I got worse and worse until I could scarcely do anything or bear the least bit of noise. My nerves were all upset.

"My husband read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and got me some. Although I had no faith in it, I began its use, and after a few doses began to sleep well and the neuralgia left me entirely. I used six more boxes and have never had any trouble from neuralgia or the nerves since.

"This is to certify that I know Mrs. Jensen and believe this statement to be true and correct. Fred Freeman, J.P."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The growing demand of fashion for simpler styles forces a woman to depend a great deal upon the right selection of beautiful fabrics offered and combining them in a way to show art and express individuality. A dress that is a novelty in combination of materials is No. 7,747. The important features that speak its appeal are an overblouse in solid color material of dark tone, very deep armholes and a four gored tunic skirt. The high-at-the-back collar is effective in light tone and a deep cuff of the material in the blouse is a pleasing detail for the sleeve that matches the collar. From the waist, a panel down the front marks the tunic at the side and back gores. This model is one quite appropriate for semi-dress occasions, cut on practical lines. The material that makes it will determine the service it will do. The necessary flaring fulness is given the skirt with a graceful fall. The surplice closing is also noteworthy.

This pattern is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches, bust measure. You may have an exact duplicate with just 3¾ yards of 36-inch material in 36 inch width, 3¾ yards of dark material in the same width and 2¾ yards of lining that is as wide for a 38 model.

To obtain the pattern it is only necessary for you to send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

WITH CONSCRIPTION ASSURED, LLOYD GEORGE GOES A-FISHING—Compulsory Service in England had its most forceful advocate in Rt. Hon. David Lloyd-George, regarded by some as the most powerful man in the British Government. After the passage of the second reading of the Bill he went home for a short holiday and can be observed enjoying his favourite sport of fishing on the River Dwyfer, at Criccieth. In one picture he is showing his two young daughters how to bait a hook. The report says he did not hook a single fish, but enjoyed the day's recreation immensely.

THE PRUSSIAN SPIRIT: "PUNISH" THE WORD

How the Kaiser Helped to Brutalize Germany—Seeds of Rancor Also Sown

The word "Strafen" has passed into our language. At the front it is the standing joke among the men and the spirit that it implies has become symbolic of the war, it being our business to-day to get to work with the punishment of those who set out to punish us.

To punish—the soldiers are quite right. In that expression, Germany's entire male philosophy is epitomized. All her reason of State is embodied in that word. In the Court of Potsdam, in the barracks, in the nursery, in public and social life the spirit is punishment. The corollary of strafen is, of course, discipline. It is thus easy to see that in effect strafen is militarism, and those who have read history will remember that militarism has been the hereditary gospel of Prussia since the rise of the Hohenzollerns.

Hun Brutality

Strafen, again, implies brutality. Is it to be wondered that the Hun is brutal? When we know his philosophy, can we marvel at his handiwork? We have ceased to be astonished. We know that the Lusitania was celebrated in Germany as an act of glory. Not a thought for the hapless women and children disturbed the Hunnish glee. England was punished, the Germans said. Strafen! Splendid! Strafen again.

The curious thing about this German brutality is the fact that it is largely artificial and indeed cultivated, and in recent years has become the standard of virility aimed at by the military for the deliberate purpose of hardening the people for the sufferings and blood lust of the coming world war. Having lived in Germany as a boy, as student, as journalist for many years, I have often seen this distinction. The German individually is not a pugnacious fellow, though often a very hot-tempered one; but his attitude is ever before him, and it brutalizes him.

If a horse stumbles, thrash as hard as you can. Any day all over Germany you will see horses unmercifully flogged and boys beaten till they can't walk, and that spirit of the bully always on the look out for a mistake to get one back with a blow.

Largely this is the result of the deliberate policy of the Kaiser acting on Hohenzollern traditions. He is a very cruel man, utterly ruthless, implacably stern. I remember as if it were yesterday watching him at a Kiel regatta. We were crowding about the royal yacht in pleasure boats, while he was standing on the upper deck majestically acknowledging the bouquets of flowers flung by women at his feet. Suddenly he got annoyed.

The Kaiser's Holiday

"Back with those boats," he cried. In an instant the river police were on us, pushing their heavy barges in against ours, rapping the knuckles of the women clinging desperately to the sides of the boats, which in the push and thrust began to roll dangerously from side to side. In three minutes some half-dozen boats were upset. Wild screams, shouts, yells and curses took the place of Hohenzollern tribute. A few people got drowned, as many more were injured, boats and oars were smashed—it was an indescribable scene of confusion without the smallest reason, unless it was that the Kaiser did not fancy the odor of his subjects so close under his nostrils. That was a little holiday strafen. A spirit of that kind cannot fail to influence a people. Small wonder if Germans are brutal and bullies. They are so at the wish of their Emperor. His object is the enforcement of blind discipline for military. In the army the brutality is terrible. I have seen sergeants strike men savagely across the shins with the scabbards of their swords, punch them on the face, and kick them at drill like dogs. No doubt that was the reason why officers and sergeants went behind their men in the early days of the war—they knew they would be shot by their own, and many unquestionably were.

Rancor, Also

The Germans have another favorite word—Groll, which means rancor. There is a lot of groll in Germany, the result of strafen, and in their armies there must be thousands and thousands of men who would rather pin their own regimental officers than the enemy and have found the means to satisfy their rancor.

When recently a Berlin newspaper complained of men offering their seats to women in railway and public places, it meant this admonition to be taken quite seriously as an educational precept. The idea is virility. To sacrifice all for virility, by which Germans mean the ruthless military spirit—that is the German spirit or kultur, which means an attitude to life. And this is what the Kaiser has made of his people, and this spirit is what we are fighting and what we in turn must now beat down into submission or ourselves be strafed into humility.—The English Review.

KAISERISM ACTIVE ON THIS CONTINENT

Insidious Lobby and Misuse of Press and Other Methods of Organized Hyphenates Are Exposed

From the first it was suspected that the agitation in the United States Senate and Congress against the stand taken by President Wilson on Germany's submarine policy was instigated by the Kaiser. The New York World later published fac-simile documents which prove beyond a doubt that the Kaiser's representatives actually were formed into a secret organization for demanding of the people's representatives in Congress that in a controversy between the President and the Kaiser, they repudiate the President. It shows that the whole proposal to repudiate the President's stand was instigated by representatives of the Kaiser, and that a powerful German lobby was at work in Washington trying to get the proposal carried through. The organization at the back of this work is the "National German-American Alliance," and their proposal was to get Congress to pass measures refusing passports to Americans travelling on neutral ships; to place an embargo on the export of munitions of war; and to prohibit Federal Reserve Banks from subscribing to foreign war loans.

Letters to the inner Council of this organization, giving reports of lobbyists in cornering representatives at the Capitol, and treating them to cajolery or threats, are published by the World. The World also gives copies of "confidential" circulars in German sent out by the organization. In one of these it was stated: "In view of the serious political position of all Americans of German blood, arising from the unjust and unfounded statements of President Wilson, it is our holiest duty to revenge to the utmost our curtailed rights as citizens of this country." Emphasis is laid in one of these circulars on secrecy so that while "newspapers may suspect this movement of being pro-German," they shall not be able to place their hands on the prime movers.—Montreal Herald.

Alkali Makes Soap Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soap or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

"LION" FAMOUS IN NAVY

Scarcely a Big Naval Engagement In Which a "Lion" Has Not Taken Part

The battle-cruiser Lion bears one of the most famous names in the navy list. And it is not an English one, either, though it sounds so—it's Scotch. Some four hundred years ago the Scotch had a navy of their own—or, at least, the kind of sea force that passed for a navy in those days. The pride of this was the Lion which the English took away from them, though the Scotch cannot very well complain of this, as they have had the worth of the ship back again many times over out of the Saxon. Getting possession of her was not an easy task; it is against Scots nature to "give up gear" without a struggle; and over the Lion the struggle was a pretty tough one.

We find the story of it in an old ballad which tells how the merchants of London stopped King Henry the Eighth when he was riding by the Thames and complained that they could not trade with the Continent. "King Henry frowned and turned him round and swore"—or the chronicler alleges that he did—and asked who it was that dare despoil his subjects; that was a privilege Henry reserved exclusively to himself and would brook no encroachment upon. "It's Sir Andrew Barton, a proud Scot, who robs on the sea," replied the merchants. Having no Cabinet nor War Council to bother with, Henry arranged on the spot for the robber to be pursued. Lord Thomas Howard undertook the task. A few days later he came up with Barton, who sailed in the Lion, defeated him after a stiff fight, and took his ship from him. She passed into the English navy, where there has been a Lion ever since. So pleased was Henry that he created Howard Earl of Surrey, though later on he had his head cut off. Further, Henry inaugurated the custom of paying prize money for the capture of an enemy's ship by distributing five hundred marks amongst Howard's sailors.

Since that time there has scarcely been an important British naval action in which a Lion has not taken part. As for the present bearer of this great name—well, her fame is more world-wide than that of any other warship in the Grand Fleet. She is senior ship of the most formidable fast squadron ever formed, and carries the flag of Admiral Sir David Beatty. Her first taste of blood was on Aug. 28, 1914, when the Germans got such a sound drubbing in the Bight of Heligoland, several of their ships being sunk. Again in the Dogger Bank fight the Lion was hotly engaged, and left her claw marks upon the German raiders before she had the bad luck to be put out of action by a shell in her engine room. Being at the head of the line in both engagements, she came in for the stiffest part of the fighting, and her crew behaved in a way which showed that though ships, and men, too, have changed in many ways, the old dauntless spirit of the British remains unabated.

Endless Barbed Wire

A German military expert calculates that 600,000 miles of barbed wire have been used by the fighting armies in the construction of entanglements on their different fronts in Europe. The combined length of these fronts is nearly 1,900 miles, but this figure has to be doubled, because a wire entanglement is always faced by one on the side of the enemy.

Some idea of the great number of troops from India in Egypt is given by the official decree that the rupee shall be legal tender in the land of the Pharaohs.

Boys are being drilled to take the places of the men of the Limbach fire department, as the latter are all at the front.

The little son of Mrs. Albert Sawyer, of Midland, pulled a vessel of boiling water over him. Mrs. Sawyer writes:

"When the accident occurred, I called in a doctor, who gave me some ointment, but it did not seem to give the child any relief, and his sufferings were terrible. I then commenced applying Zam-Buk, which gave him ease almost as soon as applied, but to make sure I was doing the right thing, I called in a second doctor. I told him I was applying Zam-Buk, and he said: "The very best ointment you could use; just continue the Zam-Buk treatment." I persevered; the soreness was soon drawn out; new skin began to form, and finally the scalds, which had been very deep, were completely healed."

Mothers! You should never be without Zam-Buk; it is so good for the accidents which are of daily occurrence amongst children. There is nothing stops the bleeding of a cut, ends the pain of a burn or scald so quickly, or heals skin diseases so surely as Zam-Buk. Besides being the best remedy for home accidents, Zam-Buk is equally good for eczema, ringworm, boils, blood-poisoning, piles, abscesses and sores of all kinds. All druggists 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, or direct from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp to pay return postage on free trial box.

WAR'S HOPEFUL SIGN

Daughter Nations Rally in Cause of Human Liberty

If at times depression besets us, says the Round Table, it is well to remember that for all their faults the people of this Commonwealth have not been false to its principles and its traditions. Not only have four million men from the British Isles given themselves voluntarily to the service of the cause of liberty and public right, but the Dominions have made provision for contributing more than 900,000 men to the common cause, and India itself, touched by the same high fire, has sent men and money with a generous hand. This is the most hopeful augury of the times. For it means that these young communities, at the beginning of a career which must, before many years are past, make them collectively far more important than Great Britain, have dedicated themselves to that same cause of freedom and justice in human affairs which Britain itself has always upheld. In essence the war is a renewal of that ancient struggle for liberty which has devastated all the centuries of history. The longer the war lasts, the more certainly will liberty prevail. For the free commonwealth is founded not upon fear, but upon the devotion of its citizens to the right, and every day that passes strengthens their conviction in the justice of their cause, and their determination to see it through. Victory is not yet. Heavy sacrifices and heavy burdens have yet to be borne. But who can doubt that right will prevail, if we endure to the end?

"Johnny," not "Tommy"

The Greeks in Salonika have dropped quite naturally into the habit of calling our soldiers "John" and "Tommy," just as Greeks, Turks, and Bulgars hailed them as "Johnny" in the Crimean war.

Decorations For War Horses

It is the custom in Paris to decorate horses with a plate attached to their harness announcing that the wearer has seen active service, but has now been sent home as only fit for civilian work.

Kerry County Farmer Upset Plans For Irish Rebellion

Saw Footprints in the Sand and His Suspicions Led to the Arrest of Sir Roger Casement Now on Trial for Treason ---Strong Evidence Against the Prisoner Heard at To-day's Session of the Preliminary Investigation.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 16.—John McCarthy, a Kerry County farmer, with a thick Irish brogue, upset the plans prepared months in advance at Berlin for Sir Roger Casement to lead the rebellion that was planned to sweep all Ireland.

This fact was disclosed to-day when the preliminary hearing of Casement, and one of his Irish soldier confederates, Daniel Bailey, was resumed in Bow Street Police Court.

On the morning of Good Friday, McCarthy said he was walking along the Irish coast near Tralee when he noticed a small boat floating toward the shore. He walked down to the beach to pull it in and saw fresh footprints of three persons in the sands. They aroused McCarthy's suspicions. He sent word to the barracks and immediately officers were sent out to investigate.

Sergeant Herne, of the Irish Constabulary, said they found Casement in an old fort known as McKenna's Fort. The prisoner protested vigorously against arrest, stating his name was Richard Morton, an author.

In spite of his protests he was escorted to Ardfert Barracks after he had dropped a paper upon which were the words: "Await further instructions. Have decided to stay. Further ammunition and rifles are needed. Send another ship." Sergt James Butler, of the Irish Constabulary, testified that Sir Roger broke down and sobbed when informed of the death of two Sinn Feiners drowned in a motor accident.

Inspector Sandercock, of Scotland Yard, said Casement admitted his identity when he was removed to the Tower.

LONDON, May 16.—The Crown began clinching its case against Sir Roger Casement when the treason hearing of the brilliant Irishman and Daniel Bailey, one of his soldier confederates, was resumed in Bow Street Police Court to-day.

Mary Gorman, a pretty servant girl, identified Casement as one of the three men she saw landing on the Irish coast near Tralee from the collapsible boat which carried them from the German submarine U-19.

John Hern, of the Irish constabulary, told about the circumstances leading up to the prisoner's arrest.

Sir Roger moved uneasily throughout their testimony, stroking his short beard and tousled hair, twitching his head from side to side, and tapping his note pad nervously with his pencil.

German Fleet Is Heading For Riga

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 16.—Rumours that the Germans are about to begin a great sea and land offensive against the Russian Port of Riga were revived to-day by Copenhagen reports that a German fleet has left Kiel for Riga.

Copenhagen reported that the new super-Dreadnought Hindenburg and other fighting monsters were included in the fleet. Petrograd despatches recently reported that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg was displaying great activity on the northern front as if in preparation for a renewal of the drive on Riga, checked by the Russians last fall.

Swedish newspapers report that a large German fleet appeared in the Cattegat, off the southwestern coast of Sweden, Saturday, but was forced to retire by British submarines.

Austrians Anticipate Italian Assaults

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, May 16.—Austrian troops have abandoned their advanced positions before Revereto in expectation of a heavy Italian offensive in the direction of Trent.

All villages in the Adige River Valley, up which Italian armies might be expected to move, have been cleared of non-combatants.

The Austrian authorities put the order of evacuation into effect Sunday, according to several Italian citizens of Trentino villages who slipped by the Austrian lines.

Famous Rugby Star Gave Life For Friend

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, May 16.—Details arriving here of the death of Major E. Norman "Tout" Leckie, prominent Canadian football player, killed in action Easter Sunday, bring feelings of pride and honour to Canadian athletes. It seems that "Tout" was killed while going to the assistance of a comrade who had been wounded by a fragment of shell. Shells and bullets were sweeping around like hail, but Leckie figured out there was a chance of bringing the disabled man into cover. He started out and had reached the side of the wounded man when he met death in that fearful storm of shot and shell.

Food Supply More Important Than Verdun

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, May 16.—Organizing food supplies for Germany's seventy millions of people is of greater importance than the capture of Verdun, Berlin newspapes declared to-day in urging the greatest care in the choice of a new Minister of Provisions.

German Grenade Attack Fails

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official Communique), May 16.—A small German grenade attack northwest of Thiaumont farm, northeast of Verdun, failed utterly, the War Office announced to-day.

Elsewhere on the Verdun front only artillery struggles occurred last night, Avocourt Wood and Hill 304 being rather violently bombarded.

In the Woevre there was artillery struggles.

In the Champagne region there was little activity last night. The Germans made no attempt to return to the attack in the region of Le Mesnil-Les-Maisons de Champagne, where they made several simultaneous attacks yesterday.

PLAN OPENS TO-MORROW FOR CREATORE'S BAND

Has Been Changed From Armouries to Grand Opera House

The plan for Creatore's Band at the Grand Opera House on Friday night will open to-morrow morning at the Grand. Arrange to secure your seats. While the billboard advertising states the band would appear at the Armouries it has been found that they are not the best place for a band to do itself justice, and on the advice of bandsmen in the city the change was made.

IS LOOKING AFTER SIR SAM

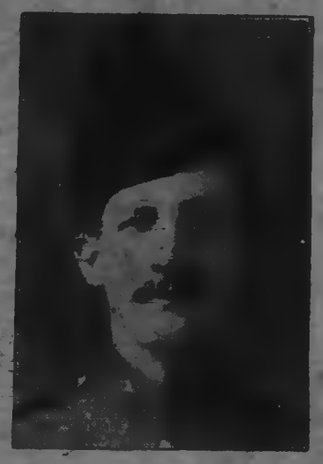
OTTAWA, May 16.—An old lady with grey hair and motherly face has attended every session of the Royal Commission. She takes a deep interest in the proceedings, and particularly in anything referring to Sir Sam Hughes. For days it was supposed she had some interest in the probe, but reason for her attendance has only just leaked out.

She told her story to a lawyer who wondered why she paid such close attention.

"Years ago," she said, "General Hughes did my family a kindness. I am watching to see that nothing happens to him now."

Two Peterborough Boys Who Are Back From Front

PTE. THEODORE ("BARNEY") QUINN, 2nd Battalion.



PTE. ROBERT H. MUIR, 21st Battalion.

PTE. T. W. QUINN HOME FROM FRONT SAW MUCH FIGHTING

Peterboro' Boy Who Was Through Langemarck, Festubert and Givenchy is Here to Take Out a Commission--Pte. R. H. Muir Also Returns From Firing Line---Field Kitchen Arrives For the 93rd Battalion---To-day's Orders and Military News.

Pte. Theodore W. (Barney) Quinn, one of the Peterborough boys who left here with the 57th Contingent to the 2nd Canadian Battalion in August, 1914, arrived home at 6 o'clock this morning on furlough after an absence of over twenty-one months in which time he saw some of the hardest fighting the Canadians experienced. Pte. Quinn came through the big battle of Langemarck unhurt, although most of his comrades were shot down around him. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Quinn, East City, and is home to take out a commission in the Canadian forces as a reward for good service at the front. Pte. Quinn will be remembered by hockey fans as a member of the Y.M.C.A. team, which gave the Boston exploits such a battle for the championship several years ago.

Pte. Quinn arrived on the Missanabie, which reached Quebec on Saturday night.

On board the Missonabie was another Peterborough boy, Pte. R. H. Muir, of the 21st Battalion, the first local member of that battalion to be invalided home from the firing line.

Died of Wounds.

Word was received to-day of the death from wounds received in France of a well-known former Peterborough boy in the person of Pte. William Ernest Hillier, Canadian Infantry, son of Mr. H. H. Hillier, of Toronto, and nephew of Mr. Dan Hillier, corner of Park and Patterson streets, city. Pte. Hillier, who was born in Peterborough, lived here until a few years ago, when the family removed to Toronto. He had many friends here who will be shocked to learn of his death, which occurred on May 3rd.

The first travelling kitchen for the use of the 93rd Battalion arrived at the Armouries this morning and was the centre of attraction all morning. The moving "cookery," which was manufactured by the Gurney Company, will cook meals for a whole company. The cooks, provisions and fuel are all carried on the kitchen, and as the battalion marches along, the meal is being prepared. Kitchens of this kind are of the greatest convenience. It is proposed to supply one for each of the four companies of the battalion. The citizens may get an opportunity of seeing the kitchen in use before the battalion leaves.

The dance and card party under the auspices of the Band of the 93rd Battalion last night in Victoria Hall, was a very enjoyable event. Music for dancing was supplied by the Grand Opera House Orchestra. For those who did not want to dance card tables were provided. Mrs. Musgrave won the ladies' prize, and Sergt.-Major Miller the gentleman's prize. Refreshments were provided by the Canadian Kitchener League. About sixty couples were in attendance.

PETERBOROUGH MUST STAND BEHIND ITS FINE BATTALION

Only Regimental Fund is Needed to Make 93rd One of the Finest in Canada---Some Lucid Reasons Why the Fund is Necessary and Some Breezy Notes on the Campaign That is Going to Stir the City.

This City of Peterborough is eternally doing things, and most of them just a little better than most places. Not as a surprise, but as a habitual thing. So there is a civic reputation to keep up. Understand, not a reputation for a city council, but for the city at large. The Council can and will take care of itself and some other things as well before the year is over. But one thing for the citizens to get down to brass tacks and do something on is a regimental fund for the 93rd Battalion.

We are sending out a battalion that any city would be proud to adopt as a mighty fine specimen of war baby. War baby is now a generic term that applies to anything raised and fostered in a place no matter what the parentage may be. And this fund that is coming to a head is our particular pet baby. Just how strong and lusty a sample it will be depends on you and others. The fame of the battalion has gone abroad, and when it marches into the camp at Barrie field other troops will line the roads to see who's coming. They will hear the finest, the very finest, military band in the province, for Colonel Hemming has so said, and goodness knows he has heard many bands, and has gained experience in all kinds of music that is perpetrated under the name of reed and brass band. The rank and file and the officers will speak and show for themselves. But the regimental fund, the war chest will not be on exhibition, but will be clamped in a secure place ready for action. It will put the finishing touch on an otherwise perfect three—band, battalion and fund. One and inseparable.

A number of people are of the opinion that the City Council, has so far, given no thought to this matter of a regimental fund. Wrong, again. Mayor Duffus has said, repeatedly, and it was so ordered in the bond, that provision had been made in the estimates for a sum in aid of this same fund. It was always contemplated, if aldermen may be said to contemplate, which is outside the question, for they only think, to do what was fairly handsome. Now an alderman's idea of doing something handsome, and the idea of a newspaper or of the general public, to say nothing of the military, may be some distance apart. But when the returns are all in you may say that Peterborough has risen to the occasion. It simply has to. By ginger, we can't think of anything else: This was resolved at a meeting on Saturday night. Mind you, Saturday night, when reasonable people were spending money in the stores and the balance arranging for attending church on Sunday, quite a grist of people got together and did things, starting the ball rolling. Let 'er continue to roll; gathering impetus and size as it progresses. And here is what was arranged.

But first. The question is a natural one, what is a regimental fund to be used for. Quite right. In a quiet way the officers and men of the 93rd were consulted and it appears that the following housekeeping requisites are absolutely necessary if the regiment is to hold up its end, and the men are to have good treatment and be as well fixed as their fellow regiments. The fund is needed for:—

1. Extra rations for the men. The government provides necessities. The men need and should have more than is provided. Men accustomed to home fare and its plain variety.

2. Recruiting expenses. The regiment has already incurred so much as $2,000.00 of expenses in recruiting, and this expense will be still incurred after it goes into camp. The officers and men should not be required to pay this.

3. The regiment could not leave camp for a route march without kitchens to provide meals. One is needed for each company.

4. Extra care and comforts for the sick.

5. Music for the band, and repairs for instruments and drums.

6. Extra marquee tent for use of the men. Sort of headquarters, and as a gathering place in rainy weather, and for recreation purposes.

7. Sporting goods for the men of the rank and file. Games and sports benefit the men and aid in good feeling, comradeship and esprit de corps.

8. A small motor truck. A very great convenience. There is much to fetch and carry.

Now all this seems a large order, but it is a big regiment. You can't tell these men to go find a yarn ball and a few clubs and go to a game of baseball. For all drill and no play leaves the routine of camp less palatable. And in a serious way all the other things mentioned are necessities. They belong to the family and go with it. There is nothing there for frills or ornament, but all for use. What do you think of it, as laid out? Meets with your approval. Thanks, knew it would.

To get back to that meeting and what was arranged. First, it was decided to approach the several townships of the county to catch hold and lift. Then it was learned that the lifting had already started, and that Norwood and Havelock were conniving to present to the regiment a field kitchen; this with the aid of the townships in which they are situated. Three other townships will pool receipts and present another kitchen. North Monaghan, Smith, Ennismore and another will be urged to provide a third, and will very likely follow the fine lead already given. The fourth kitchen is already assured through the liberality of an estimable citizen. His name will presently be mentioned in the despatches, as it should be. That clears off the cookery crib, as the lumber jacks would define. What remains is to raise about $7,000.00 in cold cash. Can it be done: (Chorus of "yes," from all parts of the hall.)

The Old Guard has been called in. Not the Home Guard, that is already in the ranks. But the Old Guard of the Patriotic Fund Campaign. Sort of right bower in all times of extremity. The Old Guard never fails. Won't fail now. The men are called together for Friday night, next, at the recruiting rooms, on Simcoe street, when the work will be allotted for Monday and Tuesday of next week. Further details will be made known after the guard gets limbered up and ready for business. A thorough canvas will be made of the city in a whirlwind campaign. The money is waiting, only it has to be picked up. It is just as well to intimate that this is going to be a cash transaction. Notes, drafts, due-bills, orders are all barred. A sort of catch-as-catch-can sample of financial hostilities. And may the best man win. So get ready. The factories where men are employed are looked to do the handsome. Lots of men are getting as high as $5.00 per shift, and the war-time that permits of such a high wage is the same war-time that takes away the 93rd Battalion, while the mechanic stays at home and reaps a harvest. So if he has any decent sense of appreciation he will subscribe. If he won't he will have to be shown.

The 24th of May fete should be a money-bringer. It will be a field day par excellence. Likely the Exhibition Grounds will be needed to accommodate the crowd at so much per head. The programme will be well worth the price of admission, and any one who can't get in without paying, can pay without going in and see how he likes it. The committee feels that it can offer no fairer arrangement than this. The ladies of the several Pa-

TRAINING TREES.

We must, and do, train our children from their earliest infancy. If we neglect to do this we have them grow up bad men and women. If we neglect training till fixed habits are formed it is too late to begin with satisfactory results.

The same applies to our street trees. If we neglect from the beginning to train them, to trim them properly, we have unsatisfactory results. We often, if not always, neglect this till the tree has grown, and to remedy our neglect we have to lop off large branches and imperil the life and beauty of the tree.

A striking example of the results of this neglect is shown in the western part of the city. The grounds of a school was some years ago planted with maple trees. They grew thriftily, for the soil conditions are good. But they were neglected in the matter of training. They branched too low and it was impossible to grow grass or move about freely under their too dense shade. A remedy was drastically applied; the low branches were mercilessly cut off and the branching point raised, so that the direct sunlight could penetrate. This action was necessary; it was the proper thing to do if done properly. But in the process the trees were terribly mutilated. In some trees it was necessary to remove large lower limbs. One or two of the trees are to be seen with five or six limbs from three to four inches in diameter lopped off. This is a terrible shock to the tree and means impairment of the trunk, and possibly destruction of the health of the trees, which as they stood were remarkably thrifty and healthy. Especially so since in the removal of the limbs they were not cut closely enough to the trunk; long stumps were left and these ghastly wounds will take years to heal. It will take years for the enlargement of the trunk to close over the stumps, the only way it can be done. The stumps will probably rot and thus start centres of destruction of the life of the trees. We see similar results on the street trees in the vicinity. Timely trimming of them was neglected and, as with the trees in school grounds mentioned, large trunks had to be removed to the permanent injury of the trees which, instead of standing with smooth, healthy bodies, are studded with protuberances, unsightly knobs, this resulted from leaving the stumps too long. It is probable that many of them are rotting at the heart and likely yto die.

This result came from neglecting timely trimming. It is to be noticed that the street trees mentioned have been trimmed up till they branch out at from twelve to 15 feet from the ground. But in doing this trimming and neglecting it too long, big trunks have had to be sacrificed, involving the destruction of the beauty of the trees and of their vitality.

The proper time to begin to trim street trees is at the beginning. No young tree should be allowed to throw out its foliage branches less than ten or twelve feet from the ground, and this height should be reached by timely and regular trimming from the time the tree is planted. We see young, healthy trees growing, with the lower limbs left seven or eight feet or less from the ground. This is too low, and as the trees expand, these lower limbs will have to be cut, to permit of the branching of the ... Ultimately. If this cutting is delayed, as is usually done, till the lower limbs reach a diameter of three or four inches, a fatal shock is given the tree. But if these lower branches are removed, while still small, as the top develops the tree will be more symmetrical and will not have to be butchered when the lower limbs grow large.

On Hunter, on the boulevard in front of Dr. Scott's residence, a thrifty young maple is growing in ... to as an example. The lower limbs are too low. If they were removed now the tree could be developed into a beautiful, shapely tree; but if left too long it will become like the savagery, gaunt, strangling older trees in the vicinity. Further down the street on the same side, some young elms have been planted, without a much-needed trimming. The lower branches are only a few feet from the ground, and in a few years will have to be removed. The removal should be done now, the top shaped and the growth directed upward. Only by beginning now can a fine, symmetrical top be developed. Besides, by removing a part of the top growth, the remainder will grow more thriftily, the militated and lessened roots of the newly planted trees will do their work better, and the trees have a better chance for a thrifty and beautiful life.

Trees need care and attention from the time they are planted till they die, and until we get this, we shall not have the full benefit we should get from our beautiful street trees. When in full bud the defects of our trees are concealed under the merciful mantle of foliage; but if one were to note all the street trees of the city there would not be found a score of perfectly healthy, symmetrical and properly cared-for trees.

We shall never have satisfactory conditions till our street tree planting and care are placed in charge of somebody, that knows about trees and their proper treatment.

CHIVALROUS AND LOYAL.

Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, shows both loyalty and chivalry towards a political opponent. The nominations took place in the General Elections in Quebec yesterday. Twenty-two Liberals and three Conservatives were elected without opposition—by acclamation. Among the Conservatives elected by acclamation was Col. Smart, now at the front. Sir Lomer on this account did not wish Col. Smart's election, for the Westmount Division, Montreal, opposed, and as a result he was returned without a contest. There is not much question of the loyalty that places patriotism above party politics.

WAR TAXATION.

Loyalty involves respect for the law of the land, so long as the law is constitutionally within the powers of the law-makers. Yet Toronto, the ne plus ultra, the flower of perfection of, and the seething centre of, loyalty, has kicked against paying the provincial war tax imposed upon municipalities by the legislature of the province. The objection is that the province has no right to levy this tax. The British North America Act empowers the provinces to levy direct taxation for provincial purposes, and it is a mere quibble to try to evade this tax on the grounds that giving to war purposes is not a provincial matter. It may not be technically; but in the broad patriotic sense, it is justifiable. It may be straining a point to impose the tax for war purposes, but when the Empire and Canada are straining every nerve to help bring victory, it does not seem amiss to strain a point in the matter of giving the most essential help the province can give—the financial. The action of Toronto, though its mayor, is, whether or not it is so intended, a scheme for shirking duty and evading the common responsibility. Toronto is the only place that has developed the "yellow streak" in this taxation matter. It may feel justified in so taking such a lead. It has posed as an exemplar of loyalty and it no doubt feels that it has a right to pose as a leader in disloyalty. We scorn the citizen who shelters himself behind the flimsy pretext of conscientious scruple, to escape enlistment. Shall we be, without a similar feeling for the big municipality that shields itself behind constitutional quibble to avoid doing as strongly indicated a duty as enlistment?

If the province has no right to impose war taxes, then we may assume that the municipalities have no such right either. In that event the thousands of dollars voted by hundreds of municipalities towards various forms of war funds is illegal, too. In this matter, however, the end justifies the means. We are justified in winking at irregularities for the sake of the great cause. Besides, the levy of a general tax is the fair way to discharge public responsibility and brings in all people to the contributing ranks. Private subscriptions and contributions are made by only a small proportion of the population, who patriotically continue to give, although they have paid their share of the common contribution through municipal or provincial taxation. In these ways everybody is brought to do his share and some more than their share.

The city and the township municipalities are called upon to vote money for the regimental fund of the 92nd. This seems the fair way: the battalion represents them all; all enlisted for the benefit of all, and by the municipal tax all are permitted to contribute according to their means and equitably share the comparatively slight sacrifice that the tax involved.

The British Navy is the Dominating Factor in the Present World-wide War

The longer the war lasts, the more is it made clear that the great dominating factor in it is the British Navy. From every reliable source in touch with German conditions, the verdict is unanimous, that the tremendous and ever-increasing pressure of the British Navy is strangling the Prussian dragon to death. The Germans have fought against the silent might of the British Navy by every means that frightfulness could suggest or science devise. It is in vain. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg has stated that German naval experts "no longer believe in the ruin by submarines even if the war lasts another two years." That is another way of acknowledging that the British Navy is supreme, and that there is no hope of Germany ever raising the blockade against her by force. And that again means that the Chancellor now recognizes that defeat is as certain as that to-morrow the sun will rise.

In view of the frequent attacks on the Imperial Government for unpreparedness and blundering, it is well to realize the mighty factor which the British Navy is in this war. We have heard a lot about Britain's unpreparedness, but was there any single nation so supremely prepared to play its part in this war as the British? Britain had ships far superior in numbers and in individual power and effectiveness to those of any other nation. In the science of naval warfare, whether friends or enemy, She not only had the material, but she had every battleship exactly where it ought to be, every man in his place, every gun mounted, and full steam up all ready and prepared to play her full part at the very instant when war should break out.

From the very moment when the war came the British Navy has dominated the seas, and not once has Germany ever dared to challenge that supremacy, work as she might to undermine it. As to Britain's efforts on land, it is true that the British were unprepared for the mighty part they are now playing but they were prepared to the full extent to which it had been mutually agreed their help would be available in case such an emergency arose. Britain speedily flung the expeditionary force that her agreement called for into Belgium, and her subsequent organization and mighty help on land has become one of the wonders of the war. But Germany's dream of world domination was blasted at the instant of war's outbreak by the instant preparedness of the British Navy to assume the role which was to prove the dominant factor in the whole war.—Montreal Herald

Canada Must Aid Railways Because She Can't Avoid It

Pleasant Information Which the Finance Minister Submits to Parliament and People—Loans Keep Roads Solvent

OTTAWA, May 11.—When Samson was shorn and tied hand and foot, Delilah shouted, "The Philistines be upon thee," and the alleged strong man had to take his medicine. So it is with Canada in this the day of the Empire's stress. The Dominion has been shorn, she is apparently bound hand and foot, and Sir Thomas White rises in the House of Commons to shout yet once again, "The Philistines be upon thee." And, said Philistines being Mackenzie and Mann, the House throws up its hands and takes its medicine.

To go through all the harrowing figures presented by the Minister of Finance Monday is hardly necessary. Everybody knows that Canada's two newest transcontinental railways are loaded to the guards with debt, are in no immediate danger of proving paying investments, and are questions in finance so intricate that the lay mind refuses to grapple with them.

The C. N. R. Position.

To sum the condition of the Canadian Northern up briefly, and as accurately as its muddled finances will permit, it has bonded indebtedness of $283,000,000, floating indebtedness of $93,000,000, bonds on rolling stock and equipment to the amount of $17,000,00, and probably a few minor items that enable us to figure its entire debt at $50,000,000. It would probably sell to-day, being a pretty fair railway as railways go, for half that amount. All we, the people of Canada, are asked to do is to float it along for a few years to see whether it is ever going to shoulder this mountain of debt and hustle along as a going concern. If it does, Mackenzie and Mann will probably consent to keep it; if not, we can have the pleasure paying its debts. In the meantime, Bill and Dan will spend 15 to 20 millions for us each year and threaten annually to spoil our credit at the New York and London grocery stores if we do not come across and smile while we are doing it.

The Simple Calculation.

Of course, things are all dressed for parade before the annual collection plate is passed, and the fixed charges are put at $15,000,000 per year, while the net profits last year were $6,000,000. That leaves a deficit of $9,000,00. But it is easy to make ends meet. All you need is a lead pencil and a piece of paper. Here's how it is done, and net earnings will jump from six to nine millions this year. Next year they will be eleven millions. That only leaves four millions, and it can be made up of the interest on the mountain division, which the Dominion and British Columbia Governments have agreed to pay for a period of seven years. Easy figuring, isn't it? All you need is a point on the other end of the pencil to turn the Government's nightmare into a dream of peace and plenty.

Canada's Credit Tied Up.

Meanwhile, though, it must have the $15,000,000, not only to keep it as a solvent concern, but, as Sir Thomas White solemnly assured us, to save Canada's credit from going to the bow-wows. "And look," he says, "the Dominion has guaranteed $104,000,000 of bonds and the provinces have guaranteed $167,000,000 more. The credit of Canada is tied up in this railway to the extent of $211,000,000." And he trembles to think what would come to this great Dominion if it should fail to keep on pouring money into the sink hole.

Sir Thomas White wants us to believe what he believes himself, viz. that the investing public thinks these railways are solvent because sustained by Government pap. He wants us to think that just as long as we stick our heads in the sand so we cannot see the untold millions of debt behind the C.N.R. and its great political rival, that the money lenders will believe us something else be sides the victims of private promoters and political grafters we really are.

Benefit of Receivership.

It is Canada's credit and Canada's cash that is maintaining those railways. Canada would have just as much credit and more cash if she threw those roads into the hands of a receiver who would straighten out the financial mess and see that every dollar the Dominion is now putting into the roads was honestly spent for the betterment of the system. If the Government were honest with itself, with the people it represents and with the money markets it fears so much, its credit would be better in New York, in London and everywhere the gold is to be had on the best securities the world affords—the bonds of the Dominion of Canada.

An Answer Delayed.

Sir Thomas White hemmed and hawed and wove his fingers through his hair when asked how this $15,000,000 for the C.N.R. was to be apportioned. He would tell that in committee, he finally said. To the man in the gallery it looked as if he didn't know, beyond a general conception that it was largely to be eaten up straightening out the muddle which the juggling of securities for forced loans, etc., has made. And yet he told us what an awful load the Government would assume if it took the road over. It is not assuming a more tremendous load when it undertakes to provide the cash for the hand-to-mouth financing which is in vogue on the entire system. Right at the present time to put the thing in a nutshell, the Government is too small. It feels equal to providing the money in dribbles It lacks the size to grapple with the situation as a whole.

THE VERY PRESENT HELP.

It lacks the size and it lacks courage and it turns to its usual refuge—a commission to investigate and report. Oh, yes, it is also going to appoint three directors on the board of each railway. Which recalls that a year or two ago it was to appoint one director for each board. This director has not yet been appointed. Will it be easier to appoint three than one? Misery may love company but there is nothing in history to show that said company ever accomplished much. Then, too, there is to be an audit. Ten thousand dollars has been provided for that purpose, and the kind of audit of that mess that $10,000 will buy will simply help to mystify the public when the time for the next hand out comes along—and you won't have long to wait for it.

THE GOLD-DUSTING TWINS.

The G.T.P. is the twin brother of the National Transcontinental. The two are the prodigal sons of parents, one of whom resides in London and knows as little of Canada as possible, and the other in Ottawa, and confines its studies to a very mediocre brand of politics. Neither of the two sons ever had a chance. They were trained to avoid the centres of commerce to look on the cheap transportation of the Great Lakes as something to steer clear of, and to demonstrate to the world that utter disregard of the principles of business is the first essential of the successful commercial career. They may in the long years to come find themselves in the midst of a country that will make them rich in spite of these slight drawbacks. But not if the government can help it.

ADDITION TO N.T.R.

Just for fear the National Transcontinental has not liabilities enough it has decided to add to them by buying the Quebec and Saguenay. This road never can pay for the reason that it has to compete with the St. Lawrence river boats in the summer and the climate in the winter. In other words it will be blocked up with snow all winter and idle because it cannot compete with water carrying in the summer. But it has been well promoted. It has furnished an annual stock boom but is nearly worked out for that purpose. There is nothing left but to unload it on the government. The loading is now being carried on with all celerity. Of course it is a mere detail. Its estimated cost is only $4,000,000, but what a lot of yarn for sox $4,000,000 would buy. It might almost bring our wounded soldier boys home from the front in cleanliness and comparative comfort.

Boy Shot Father in Defence of His Mother

EDMONTON, Alta., May 16.— The young son of William Gray, a farmer living 14 miles northwest of Wainwright, has been taken into custody by Corporal Banford, of the Mounted Police, at Hardisty, on a charge of shooting his father through the body Thursday afternoon, after the latter is alleged to have abused his mother.

It is said the boy has been a bone of contention between the parents for some time. On Thursday afternoon the mother and father got into an argument over the lad, and the former is said to have hurled a baking powder tin at the parent's head. He threatened her, the lad said, and started to struggle with his mother, whereupon the boy picked up the weapon and fired a shot through Gray's body and then made his escape. Physicians attending Gray have out little hope for his recovery.

GERMAN TRENCH DODGES

"Devil's Walls," Tread Mines and Battle Forests Against Slavs

From a statement made by German prisoners whom the Russians have captured, it would appear that the Huns used some ingenious and complicated trench devices in the fighting about Riga. The German entanglements in that neighborhood are sometimes 200 yards deep, and are made of a tough wattle which takes as long to break through as it takes to clip through wire. The Germans burn off the leaves and small twigs of trees and plant the bushy pointed branches as "battle forests," an obstruction in the shape of a beam, with points projecting towards the enemy. These plantations are sometimes a mile deep. Russians, in attacking, had to march through them and exploded "tread mines" hidden under a sprinkling of soil.

Another protective machine used by the Germans is called the "devil's wall," a steel or steel sheeted barrier breast high, mounted on wheels, from ten to fifteen yards long. Sheltered by it from all missiles except hand grenades, the men march to the attack. The latest "devil's walls" have artificial arms with clipping and hacking appliances, which are manipulated by soldiers behind them. The walls are telescopic and can be narrowed to suit the ground over which the attack is made.

BRITISH SPY ESCAPED

Wireless Operator at Antwerp Had a Close Call

To be caught redhanded sending German military secrets by wireless from Antwerp to the British forces, condemned to death and kept in a dungeon twenty-one days only to escape a few hours before execution, were the experiences told by George F. McWilliams, former English marine, who arrived in Augusta, Maine, in search of relatives. "I was a British spy," said McWilliams, "and it had fallen to my lot to make observations in Atwerp. I communicated information to England by wireless telegraphy, having studied it aboard ship and it was because I was an operator that I was assigned to the particular task of observing the construction of guns at the gun works in Antwerp and reporting by wireless.

"I worked my wireless at night only and took the wires down in the day, selecting as secluded a spot as possible. Finally I was caught at the work redhanded and in climbing down from my wireless perch at the command of the German soldiers I fell and broke my wrist. I was thrown into a dungeon and kept for twenty-one days and on the night before my execution escaped from the dungeon by removing a loose stone through which faint streaks of sunlight had come the day before."

His Nerves Weak

Poor Memory, Lacked Vigour, Lost Employment

Proof That You Quickly Get Bracing Health From Ferrozone

There's a real reason why Ferrozone cures.

No other tonic in the world like Ferrozone, nothing else is so quick and lasting in its effects on a run-down, nervous system. "I used enough medicine to appreciate an honest one," writes J. B. Beattie, from his home in Newcastle. "From babyhood I was not overly strong and was always nervous. I smoked a good deal, but on the whole my habits were good. My trouble first began with a shortening of the hours of sleep. I would awaken too early, my appetite was poor, and to whip it up I used highly spiced and sweet foods. First thing I knew I had palpitation on doing a little extra work, and then an awful tiredness came upon me, and a strange feeling of dread—almost of fear—made me think I was losing grip of myself. My power of memory weakened and I lost my position. Then I read about Ferrozone. Say it's awfully good to get a medicine that help you right off. I don't mind telling you I was badly scared, and every dose was almost like sunshine. At once I began to feel better, and permanently better I really was, for less than a dozen boxes made me a well man. Now I can do my work with any man and I am grateful to Ferrozone."

Ferrozone corrects all enfeebled conditions of the system, builds up and gives the body great resistive power against disease. To use Ferrozone assures lasting robust health. 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers. Try Ferrozone, do it to-day.

Doctor Says:—Iron Will Make You 200% Stronger In Ten Day

Ordinary Bonised Phosphorus and Iron Soothes your Nerves, Makes Rich, Red Blood, Makes Rosy Cheeks, and Generally Builds You Up.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. S. Sauer, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you chose to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the enormous number who lack iron, and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good: you don't get the strength out of it. Your food simply passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation people become generally weakened, nervous, and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at nights; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless; but all lack physical power and endurance in such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your lagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well one of the best ways to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Bonised Phosphorus with Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous and run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good round, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that one tablet of this newer form of iron is worth a whole bottle of some medicines. It is dispensed in this city by F. G. Webber, two stores at 50 cents a box

British Have Gun Called the Hose of Death

Germans No Longer Are Superior in Machine Guns—Killed 330 Men in Half an Hour

NEW YORK, May 16.—A London cable to the Herald says:

The Germans were for many months superior in machine guns, but the British now have a gun which can beat theirs, and is beating it every day. Invented by an American officer, Col. Lewis and made in Belgium almost up to the moment when the German scouts entered the city of its manufacture, the invention narrowly escaped capture by the Germans.

Its killing power may be guaged by the fact that in one trench recently, one of the guns, manned by a crew of two men, accounted for 330 Germans in half an hour. It has been described as the "hose of death" and whether in advance or retirement it is going to be the supreme battle arbiter of the coming year.

Suppose that instead of a rifle weighing ten pounds and firing fifteen bullets a minute and carried by one man, one had a rifle weighing twenty-five pounds and firing fifteen bullets a second and carried by two men, what would be the effect on any advance made by the enemy? No troops could meet such a weapon. Not only would live to raise his rifle to his shoulder. The new arm gives the greatest volume of fire in the least time of any gun known.

It is working now in France and Flanders night and day, sending a steady sweep of lead across the far flung German line. It is as if a comb of bullets were carding out the men in their trenches. The gun can be fired upside down from an aeroplane, or sideways, from a trench, from the ground, from a wall, or from the roof of a house. It comes to pieces like a jig saw puzzle, and only one tool is needed, and that tool is an ordinary rifle bullet.

These guns are being made in England now, and in the factories you may find many a maimed hero of Liege and Haelen, proud to think that he can still work as efficiently as if he were in the firing line.

3 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

March Snowball Saved the Wheat From Spring Frost

OTTAWA, May 16.—Owing to the heavy fall of snow during the month of March, which protected the young plants from the spring frosts, the fall wheat is reported as being in exceptionally good condition at the end of April. In Ontario where 820,600 acres were sown, as estimated last fall, not more than 5.6 per cent. is reported as winter killed, and in Alberta with 260,500 acres estimated as sown, the proportion winter killed is placed at 4.9 per cent. These proportions are lower than in any previous year, on record, for these provinces. In 1914 the percentage winter killed was 19 in Ontario, and 45.5 in Alberta, while last year it was 6.8 in Ontario and 6.2 in Alberta. The area winter killed this year was 45,899 acres in Ontario and 12,800 acres in Alberta, as against 71,000 acres in Ontario and 14,260 acres in Alberta last year. The area of fall wheat to be harvested this year is placed at 774,800 acres in Ontario, 247,700 acres in Alberta; 9,400 acres in Manitoba, 4,100 acres in Saskatchewan and 6,200 acres in British Columbia, being a total for the Dominion of 1,042,200 acres as against 1,398,- in 1915, and 973,500 acres in 1914.

The general condition of the crops on April 30, which measured by the standard of 100 as representing a full crop, is 89 in Ontario, as compared with 93 last year and 78 in Alberta as compared with 83. For Ontario the figure was only surpassed last year and in 1910. The condition for the whole of Canada on April 30 was 88, which converted into a standard of 100 as representing the average condition at the same period for seven years 1908 to 1915 indicated a condition of 108 or an anticipated yield per acre of 8 per cent. in excess of the seven years' average, provided that conditions between now and harvest time are not abnormal.

Hay and Clover.

The proportion of hay and clover meadows winter killed proved to be unusually small, being only 3.5 per cent. for all Canada as compared with 10 per cent. last year, 14 per cent in 1914, and 22 per cent. in 1913. The average condition was 92 per cent. of the standard crop as compared with 91 per cent. last year, 86.7 per cent. in 1914, 89.6 per cent. in 1913, and 74.6 per cent. in 1912.

To People Who Are Under Normal Weight

Good Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women Who Want to Put on Flesh

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness, and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and any there is a large demand for it.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

While this new preparation has been reported given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitalizer, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

STORY OF A GREAT MISSIONARY WHO DIED OF LEPROSY

Told by Rev. J. R. Webb to a Large Congregation at Murray Street Baptist Church on Sunday Night

At Murray Street Baptist church Sunady night Rev J. R. Webb preached to a large congregation on the subject "Lessons from the Lazaretto". The text chosen was Acts ix. 15-16. 'He is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings. For I will show him how how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." The story was told of the conversion in 1873 of Rev. John E. Davis, who became a missionary to India under the Foreign Mission Band of the Baptist Convention. He was one of the most useful men on the foreign field that the denomination ever had. In the year 1903 he had taken down a wooden building with his own hands in which a leper had died. No person knows how, but probably through that piece of work he had contracted the disease that later had been pronounced by the most expert physicians in England to be leprosy. Mr. Webb quoted from a letter written from India on July 3rd, 1904, in which Mr. Davis said: 'I see the ship on which we are to sail but God only knows how I will reach it, for there is scarcely three inches of my body that is not covered with boils." He came with his family as far as England, but could come no farther. The wife and three children stayed for some days at the home of the present pastor of Murray Street Church when he was located in Montreal. Some months later the father came across the sea and settled on a small farm, living in a room adjoining the house occupied by his family. When the mother died, there was only one place in Canada for the poor leprous missionary, the Lazaretto at Tracadie.

Here Mr. Webb paid a splendid tribute to the Roman Catholic sisters who in that institutin never faltered in their task, never neglected their duty, but showed the spirit of Christ in their ministry to one who was in late years deaf, blind, and his body literally decaying. The missionary before his death had calmly arranged for his own funeral, having purchased and stored a hermetically sealed casket that his body might be assured conveyance to the side of that of his wife. He desired to be buried in the cemetery at Wicklow, near Colborne, Ontario, in which village he had been converted forty-three years ago. He asked that Rev. Dr. Brown should preach his funeral service.

Dr. Langis, a French Roman Catholic doctor, who had been with him during his illness, came with the remains to the village of Wicklow on the 6th of May, when the wishes of the poor sufferer were fully carried out.

Mr. Webb drew lessons from the life and death of the missionary. With such testimony as Davis had left behind him, no man could fail to be convinced that Christ is not only able to save but to comfort and sustain in life's most trying hours. The strong faith of the man who cried out: "I am a son of God and need not be afraid to meet my Father; I can no more be lost than God Himself could be lost"—such faith, said the speaker, proves that the body is not the man, but only the tabernacle, the tent, the covering.

There were many tears shed while the story was told, and the congregation sang at the close of the sermon:

"For all the saints who from their labors rest,
Who thee by faith before he world confessed,
Thy name, O Jesus, be forever blest.
Hallelujah.

Smooth Swindler Got $85 at London Station

Wallaceburg Man Notifies Police that He was Robbed.

CHATHAM, May 16.—A Wallaceburg glass blower is reported to be the latest victim of swindlers who are operating so successfully on the trains in and around London.

On Wednesday evening the man in question was a passenger on the same train which carried the deputation to Ottawa, and while the Chatham men were standing in the depot in London a man entered the car with pencil and pad, sat down by the man from Wallaceburg, asked where he was going and why, as well as several questions regarding where he lived, etc., all of which he wrote down, concluding by telling his victim that owing to the war young men were not allowed to travel from place to place unless they had a certain sum of money. The glass blower produced his roll for the supposed official who proceeded to count it over. There was $160 in the roll. After counting it he handed it back.

When the train had pulled out and was nearing Galt the Wallaceburg man began to think about the peculiar occurrence and took out his money to see if it was intact. After counting it several times he discovered that there was only $75, or in other words the swindler at London had made his escape with $85.

Accompanied by Warden Hinnegan and a couple of Wallaceburg sugar men, the victim went through the train, but the artist had evidently left the train at London.

Full particulars were wired the London authorities, but up to date the mysterious party is still enjoying his ill-gotten gains.

This is the fourth case of this nature reported at London within a month

Just One Application and the Hairs Vanish

(Toilet Talks.)

Any woman can keep her skin free from unsightly hair or fuzz if she will follow these simple instructions: When hairy growths appear apply a little paste, made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. Apply this to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a harmless treatment, but be sure you get the real delatone.

Mrs. W. A. Greenslade's Recital

It was a large and appreciative audience that assembled last evening in the Conservatory Music Hall to hear the splendid recital presented by the piano and vocal pupils of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade. The appreciation of these several young people was evident in their enthusiastic reception, and it indeed must have been encouraging to Mrs. Greenslade, to note the fact that her work along musical lines in this city is so well thought of, as was shown in the large number of music lovers who were present last night. The singing as well as the work at the piano was a striking tribute to the ability and painstaking industry of Mrs. Greenslade. The vocalism displayed, clearly points out that Peterborough is not lacking in soloists of more than average talent, who under proper training are fitting themselves for a high place in the musical world. Some of the vocalists have been with Mrs. Greenslade for some time, and show the result of careful and continued study. Others have only been under her tutelage a comparatively short period, but judging from the ability displayed, have a splendid future before them. Of these latter might be mentioned Miss Keitha Kidd of Fraserville, who though very young possesses a voice of remarkable range and beautiful purity of tone. Last evening she sang 'Who'll buy My Lavender?' receiving prolonged applause, and also Miss Florence Emmerson who sang with much sweetness and a sympathetic interpretation of her number "Rose Softly Blooming".

The programme opened with a piano solo, splendidly executed by Master Oscar Freeburn, whose playing of 'Chopin's Nocturne, Op. 9 No. 2 was a wonderful revelation of ability. Miss Beasie Logan who possesses a rich contralto voice sang "What the chimney sang" and Miss Isabel Morphet delighted all present with her delightful rendition of "Carmena", a waltz song.

A most pleasing feature of a rather extensive programme was the solo of Mrs. A. A. Perrin. She sang "Berceuse from Jocelyn, with a violin obligato by Miss Laura Logan. Mrs. Perrin sings with such true expression and correct enunciation that her numbers are always a delight. Her notes too are full and clear, her singing on this occasion being a great treat indeed.

She also sang in duet with Miss K. Masterson "My true love hath my heart," the two voices blending beautifully. Miss Masterson possesses a lyric soprano of wie range which she uses to advantage. Her solo "Villanelle" was a difficult one but she handled it well, winning fresh laurels for herself in its rendition.

Miss Ruby Quartermain's number 'Maytime' received continued applause, and a recall was gracefully acknowledged. Miss Quartermain sings with perfect enunciation, and her lovely, full, round notes were delightful to hear.

Miss Phyllis Dawson has made phenomenal progress in her vocal studies. She has a soprano voice of wonderful volume, and her solos are alway a pleasure to listen to. She sang a dual number 'In my little garden' and 'An open secret' with splendid effect.

The singing of Mr. Ed. Bartley was a great treat to all present. He sang 'I hear a thrush at Eve', and so insistent was the applause that he came back and repeated the last verse.

The ladies' quartette was heard in two numbers, but probably the latter one provided the greater enjoyment to the audience. The quartette is composed of Misses Masterson, Quartermain, Logan and Mrs. Perrin, whose voices blended in lovely harmony. Their first number was a difficult one, and they did it full justice.

Miss Norma Moore, a senior pupil of Mrs. Greenslade, played 'the two larks' displaying a brilliant technique. She had to respond to an encore. Miss Aileen Braund is also a remarkably clever pianist and won great applause in her dual number last night. Her work was of an extremely difficult character, but was well executed.

During the evening Mrs. Greenslade was the recipient of a handsome cut glass water pitcher and a beautiful bouquet of flowers from her pupils.

Before the programme commenced Rev. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's Ashburnham, on behalf of Mrs. Greenslade, welcomed those present, and asked them not to be too critical in their judgment, bearing in mind that it was a pupils' recital, some of whom had only been studying during the past year.

BELLEVILLE TRAIN HIT SEVERAL COWS

The Belleville train hit two cows yesterday afternoon about one mile and a quarter below Madoc Junction. They were on the right-of-way grazing, where the driver, Mr. Homer Lavoie, expected they would remain. But when the animals saw the train they dashed on to the track. The engine was then too close to avoid hitting them, although the train was brought to a stop. It happened that Supt. McMillan's car was attached to the train. The killing was unavoidable.

Peterborough Must Stand Behind Its Fine Battalion

triotic Women's organizations, or rather the Women's Patriotic organizations, which ever way you like to put it, will have charge of a constellation of refreshment booths that will make the places up-town envious. People will be thirsty and hungry, and if they haven't these desirable attributes they can manufacture them on the spot. So come to the grounds with a trifle to spend. The cause condones the offence.

On Empire Day, which is the 23rd of May, the school children will be asked to make a small contribution per child. This plan is to be put forward if the Board of Education consents. You can build Dreadnoughts on five-cent pieces if you can get enough of them, so the school mites might amount to considerable. Anyway it all helps.

The ladies who have the grounds refreshment scheme in hand will meet in the reception room at the Armouries on Wednesday night, to carry on details. No doubt an announcement will be made.

To bring the outside municipalities, or rather the councils of the several townships up to concert pitch, it has been arranged that speakers will address the councils on evenings during the next few days. Citizens have been picked out who have known powers of persuasion, and they will go to it. No doubts are expressed but that the several missions will be successful. As the returns come in due publicity will be made.

The above is about all that it worth while telling just now. Something has to be left over for dessert, so-to-speak. And then others things of interest will crop up. In the meantime the City Council will consider things.

Police Chief in New Role

LINDSAY, May 16.— The chief of police acted in the role of auctioneer at the market on Saturday last, when an old horse with had been thrown upon the town by its owner, was offered for sale to pay for its keep for the past week or ten days.

The bidding was spirited, considering the "package" that was offered, Mr. John Jackson of North Ops. being the purchaser at $27.

A law suit may yet eminate out of the transaction, but the part taken by the chief constable was in conformity with the law.

Sir Roger Casement— Whose formal trial on a charge of high treason, is being held by the British authorities. TEMPORARY HALT IN DAVIDSON ENQUIRY

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 16.—The Davidson enquiry adjourned this morning after Captain John Thompson, K.C., had officially announced his retirement as the result of the criticism that as junior officer of the overseas forces he was not in a position to independently examine Sir Sam Hughes and Quartermaster General MacDonald in matters before the Commission.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which then assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was very pleased to read the letter signed "Disgusted" in last night's Examiner, for I think it is near time some one protested against the apathy shown by so many young men in our city. But I think your correspondent is a little too hard on them, perhaps it was only ignorance that explains them not removing their hats during the National Anthem, probably they thought it was only an air from a comic opera. When I go into one of our local stores, and am attended by a husky young man, who is doing work a young girl could do; I can hardly refrain from showing my contempt, especially when I think of my own husband and my brothers, away doing the bit that these young men should be doing. I have made up my mind that for the future I will not spend my money in any store employing a young man who has not tried to enlist, and I am going to persuade my friends and acquaintances to do the same. Hoping that some of the pink socks will soon see their duty and do it. I remain,

Yours truly,
A DISGUSTED WOMAN.

Easter Communion Served Close to The Front Trenches

Peterboro' Officer Writes of the Devotion of a Young Chaplain—One Easily Loses His Way in the Network of Trenches

Writing to his father on Easter Day, a Peterborough officer, now in France tells interestingly of an Easter communion of the Anglican church, celebrated in the trenches, with bullets whissing overhead. It is as follows:

Belgium, April 23, 1916.

"Just a few lines while Easter Sunday is still on, although this is just at the part of the night. It is 3.30 a.m. Easter Monday morning. We certainly had a beautiful day for Easter, just the kind of day that all the girls would like at home in order to properly display their spring millinery. There is very little change in the style of our millinery here, practically no change in the shape unless one gets a few dents from bullets or shrapnel.

Helmets Are Covered.

Most of the helmets are covered with sandbags, as the sun and moon shine on them, so that they can be distinguished, especially if they are wet or damp from dew, but with a sandbag covering they cannot be distinguished from a sandbag on the parapet unless they move. It certainly was a welcome change to have a fine, clear, warm day, but it really is one of the most dangerous kind of days we can have as the Hun certainly gets active with his aircraft and it is pretty hard to keep the boys indoors in their dugouts, when their clothes are all wet and they are lying in on top of one another, and the warm sun's rays are outside. It is pretty hard to stay indoors. Still that is our only protection, as their machines come over and observe a crowd of men outside, and in a few seconds we have shells coming over like flies, only they are noisier, and we did get a fair share to-day. I was pretty busy to-day as I had to look over our line of trenches to see if we could not drain them, and also to get a little more familiar with their layout. You can hardly imagine how easily it is to go astray when you are strolling around underground. One loses his sense of direction entirely unless he can pick out some land marks, and it is not always advisable to stick one's head up to try to pick out the landmarks either. This afternoon we actually had a communion service, not exactly in the front line but within 200 yards of it. The chaplain for this brigade at present is a young chap by the name of Wilkins. He has for a few years past been out on mission work on the prairie in Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan and came over as a private in the second C.M.R. regiment. Later he took out a commission in the Royal Artillery, but was given a chaplaincy just as he got his appointment and took it.

Communion Services.

He certainly is a great chap too. He got permission from Gen. Williams to hold communion services in the reserves and supports and wanted to give it also in the front lines, but circumstances just at present hardly warranted that, and Gen. Williams thought it would be wiser not to attempt that, although the chaplain was very much disappointed. He had 120 communicants during the day, but our service was the last one closest to the lines. He intended to hold the service at 3 o'clock, but just at that time we had several Hun planes over us and every few minutes some shrapnel, so it was not exactly a good time to have a gang of men collected together in the open, so we had to wait till it got quieter and darker. We are at present in the support, just a few yards behind the front line, but we move up front in a day or two. Just about 7 p.m. it was fairly quiet so he decided to hold the service in front of our dugouts, as the door faces our rear, and the boys came up, twenty in all.

Repairing Trenches.

It was just at their supper time and they had all to leave immediately to go out on working parties to repair the front line. However they left their supper and came along. I don't think as long as I live I will ever have a more impressive communion service. We used a little bench about three feet long (on which I am now sitting) as the altar. The chaplain put on all his vestments and stole, and there we were all huddled together in front of the dugout. He requested that we stand during the service as the bath mats were too muddy to kneel on for any length of time, so we only knelt while receiving the sacrament. We all had our heads bare of course, although it is a strict order that steel helmets be worn at all times when not under cover.

Stray Shots.

Everything went off as quietly as could be, except for the occasional stray shots which are always cracking around, till he came to the blessing, and it was a peculiar thing, but twice while he was pronouncing the blessing a machine gun opened up, and played right over our heads from right to left, and we all ducked from the mats. Of course, Frist could not see us as the line is higher than we were, between him and us, but it was a singular thing that for some time after there was no M. G. work at all, but it came just then when I suppose the only communion service on this front anywhere was being held. It is a service I won't soon forget. After service the chaplain stayed for supper with us, and Capt. Gill and I got him to put his name in our diaries with the announcement of the event and the approximate location."

Fairs Not Working Together To Secure Attractions Now

Mr. J. H. Garbutt was host to the Fair directorate at dinner last night at Hooper's, following which there was a general discussion of the Field Crop Competition and details connected with this year's fall exhibition. The Board gave the use of the ground to the 93rd Battalion for Victoria Day. A number of entries have already been received for the white oats crop competition, but the Board desires to call the attention of farmers more strongly to this feature and to secure a good showing for this district. It is hoped that the number of entries will be large.

The Fair prize list was generally considered, but the committee on this work has not yet brought in its report. The committee on attractions has a greater problem than ever this year. In the past the Lindsay, Oshawa, Peterborough and other fairs have combined to book attractions, but the old working arrangement has collapsed, and some other method will have to be adopted.

Entries for the Field Crop Competition must be in by May 20.

General Marchand Is Killed at Front

PARIS, May 16.—General Marchand has been killed at the front, according to despatches received here this afternoon. Gen. Jean Baptiste Marchand was one of the most notable figures in the French army, not only because of his prominence in the present war, but because of his clash with Lord Kitchener in 1898, which threatened to result in war between England and France, and became known as "Fashoda Incident."

TWO ARMIES MENACE BAGDAD

Russians Now Report Progress in Direction of Mosul.

PETROGRAD, May 16.—A Russian army has entered Mesopotamia from the north, and has taken Rowanduz, 62 miles northeast of Mosul. Announcement of the taking of the town was the first official intimation that there are two Russian armies engaged in the Mesopotamian operations. The other army recently took Kasr-i-Shirin, on the Persian side of the Persian-Mesopotamian frontier, and is supposed to be preparing to advance down the Diala valley against Bagdad. Mosul is on the Tigris, 200 miles north of Bagdad.

The announcement also says:

"In the Caucasus, in the direction of Baiburt, we everywhere repulsed attacks by the Turks, who suffered heavy losses. In the direction of Erzingan and in the region of Aschkala the Turks, having concentrated in considerable force, assumed the offensive and after a desperate fight lasting the whole day compelled our advance guards to retire in some places. Finally, however, they ceased the offensive owing to the extremely heavy losses inflicted by our fire."

PAPER SCARCITY IN FRANCE.

Appeal Results in 231 Tons from Paris on First Day Alone.

The French people are being invited, owing to the scarcity of paper for printing purposes, to send all the old papers which they may possess to the "Mairea." The only stipulation is that they shall be in a clean condition. During the first day Paris alone sent in close on 231 tons. In town and country old cupboards and desks are being ransacked, and the question arises, what may not be brought to the light of day? says the Christian Science Monitor. It is to be hoped that the sorters at the "mairies" know a valuable document when they see one or among the "vieux papiers, vieux chiffons," may pass unperceived sufficient finds to enable a George Lemoire to write another such book as "Vieilles Maisons, Vieux Papiers."

TELLS OF THE SINKING OF THE AUXILIARY

Further Evidence in the Case of Sir Roger Casement this Afternoon.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 16. — Sidney Waghorn, signaller aboard the Admiralty sloop Blue Bell, which overhauled the German auxiliary that accompanied Sir Roger Casement on his expedition to Ireland, carrying munitions and arms to rebels, was examined to-day. Waghorn told how the Blue Bell, encountering a tramp vessel flying the Norwegian flag, hailed her and received responses that her name was "Aud."

The sloop's captain was not satisfied and ordered the stranger to follow into Queenstown. After hoisting the German ensign the crew of the "Aud" scuttled the vessel and disembarked in boats. When they surrendered it was found that all were German naval uniforms.

John Dempsey, diver, who examined the hull of the sunken auxiliary, said he discovered a twelve foot hole in the starboard quarter, possibly made by an explosion. He brought up some ammunition and several rifles. One of these he said, was of Russian pattern, probably having been captured from the Slavs on the eastern front.

Constable Carter of the Irish constabulary, testified that he arrested Daniel Bailey, on trial with Casement, for high treason at Killabane, on April 22 for refusing to answer satisfactorily.

Inspector Parker of Scotland Yard, another witness, said that among Casement's effects were two maps of Ireland with notations in Sir Roger's own handwriting.

Announcement was made when the hearing adjourned this afternoon that Michael Francis Doyle, a Philadelphia lawyer, will assist the defence. Doyle was selected at the request of a sister of Casement who is in America.

Unknown Man Found Dead

Body Found Under a Bridge at Omemee—Death Was Accidental

OMEMEE May 16.—The body of an unknown man was found to-day by the watchman under Doubee bridge. He was well dressed and had been dead some days. The coroner's inquest last night decided that his death was accidental having been caused either by his falling from a train or off the bridge. There was no money or railway ticket on the body and no means of identification. He was aged about 60, and apparently a Roman Catholic.

Scarcity of Rennet Threatens Cheese

Dependent Upon Europe for Supply and Price is Already Away Up

Rennet, essential to the manufacture of cheese, is as scarce as the disturbed war conditions can make it. It is used to coagulate the milk, separating the butter fat from the whey, but its present scarcity is giving the cheesemakers considerable worry. The rennet supply comes from Europe, especially the western countries, and its ante-bellum price of $1.75 to $1.90 a gallon has swollen to $7.00.

This is one of the feature conditions of the opening of the cheese season, the first local sale being to-morrow morning. It is expected that about 1,000 boxes will be boarded. Last year the opening sale was on May 19, when 1,000 boxes were sold to G. A. Gillespie at 18½ cents. It is expected that about 1,000 boxes will be offered to-morrow. The present price is over 19 cents, and last year's record may be surpassed.

THIS GERMAN LEARNED

Hyphenate Was Very Anxious For a Neutral Opinion

A distinguished American who was honored by a Canadian university tells the following story regarding a leading New York editor. This editor was in the habit of eating at a German restaurant. One day he went in, and the proprietor of the restaurant said to him: "Wot do you tink of de war? How soon will ve vin, and beat those Inglish and French?"

"Look here," said the editor, "I wish to discuss the fare and not the war." The proprietor was not to be moved, and insisted on an expression of opinion, which the editor gave him as follows: "If you really want to know what I think, I will tell you. I think your blankety-blank Kaiser and his dashed son and all the other dashed Germans are going to get all that is coming to them, and they will deserve all they get. I hope the allies will give them such a thrashing that they will never want to remember it." This was enough for the proprietor. "Ach!" he said; "I know vat you are. You are just one of those dashed neutrals!"—Canadian Gazette, London.

Temptation to get on the lawn and clean it up is strong as soon as the snow is gone and the weather begins to settle. Impatience, however, should be curbed until the ground is settled fairly well, so that footmarks will not show in the turf.

Clarke, who was formerly connected with the business staff of the Examiner and who was for some time an officer in the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, was given a warm welcome by his many friends. He is accompanied by Major Johnston, the junior major of the 111th Battalion.

Pte. Chas. Primeau of the 93rd Battalion, was man, the recipient on Saturday of a very handsome and complete shaving set from Mr. A. A. Fowler. The gift will be thoroughly appreciated.

Another Peterborough boy to enlist outside of the city is Pte. Harry Knowles, who has joined the Bantams Battalion in Toronto, and is at present home on leave. Pte. Knowles is a son of Gunner Harry Knowles who is overseas with the Canadian artillery.

OTTAWA, May 15.—Arrangements are being made to have returned soldiers, so far as possible, act as home guards in Canada, thus releasing the present guards for overseas service. There are from ten to thirteen thousand men guarding the canals, railway bridges, public works, internment camps, etc.

There are many returned soldiers who are not fit for active service, but who have recovered sufficiently to undertake these duties. They will be given the first opportunity if they desire.

The following from the North Battleford Optimist, refers to a former Peterborough youngster, Master Kingsley Langfeldt, son of Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, formerly of St. Luke's church. The young bugler was born in Peterborough:

Next day a little chap arrived in the orderly room saying that he wanted to enlist.

"As a bugler, I suppose," said the officer there.

"Yes," was the answer.

"Well, get your father's permission and we will take you."

He soon returned with the following letter:

"I have much pleasure in giving my son, Kingsley Stephen Langfeldt, the permission and privilege to enlist in His Majesty's forces for overseas service."

The battalion salutes you, Private Langfeldt.

Master Langfeldt has the distinction of being the youngest recruit to join the colours in this district. He enlisted last week with the 238nd as a bugler boy. He is fourteen years of age.

Stoney Lake Very Rough

Messrs. D. W. Dumble, G. F. Ackerman, and R. J. Winch, have returned from a visit to Mr. Dumble's summer cottage, "Ballyragget," Stoney Lake. They motored out to Hamilton's on Thursday, and had great difficulty in crossing the lake, owing to the gales, the water being rougher than Mr. Dumble had seen at Stoney Lake in thirty years. They returned to the city last night.

MRS. GARNSEY'S PITCHFORK THE REASON FOR SUBSEQUENT CAUTION

County Constable Moore and City Detectives Used to Offset Any Further Hostility After Deputy Sheriff Hall's Experience---Never Again For Mr. Wedlock.

HAD AGREEMENT WITH GARNSEY

Mrs. Leamon Garnsey's pitchfork had a more far-reaching effect than the frustration of the seizure of her several pigs which Deputy Sheriff Hall proposed to sell for expenses incidental to the near performance of his duties on September 2nd last. Her belligerency was unofficially posted in the general orders to those who carried on the September campaign in the Garnsey territory, and a word to the wise was ample. About September 11th, Mr. H. LaPlante made the trip accompanied by County Constable Archie Moore, as bodyguard, with his nickle-plated badge conspicuously pinned on his breast. In his evidence Mr. LaPlante said his party including himself comprised five men. Garnsey presented papers purporting to show that the chattels were immune to seizure, and on the strength of them witness and Mr. Moore concluded that there were grave doubts about their position. Previously, however, before Garnsey produced the papers he had agreed to come in to the city to discuss a settlement. As far as Mr. LaPlante knew the Garnseys did not come in.

Mr. O'Connell asked witness what suggestion impressed him into taking Mr. Moore.

"I'd heard about the trouble Mr Hall had, that one of the parties attacked him with a pitchfork and I wanted protection."

Detectives On Next Trip.

Mr. W. J. Hancock took a formidable party along a few days later including Detectives Newhall and Meagher. His instructions were to get two good strong men to move the stuff to another farm and arrange for a sale. Mr. C. Shambo and Mr. Foster filled the bill. Apart from his duties, Mr. Hancock had the best of intentions towards Garnsey. The latter forbade the seizure of the goods. He said he had offered to settle once. Witness said chattels scheduled on the mortgage did not seem to be there. There seemed to be new ones that manufacturers might own.

Witness called up Mr. O'Connell who told him to bring in the black team and he would send waggons for the grain.

Garnsey came in to town with witness to try to arrange a settlement Garnsey went to his lawyer and later in the day the two returned to the farm. Witness took Mr. Kitney, caretaker of the Oval, with him to remain on the farm over night.

The black team was brought in to Spenceley's stables, and also the seized grain.

"I saw Garnsey in town two or three days after the seizure. We met in a friendly way and he suggested we go up and see the horses. We did so. He asked me to bring them out. I said I had nothing more to do with them. As far as I was concerned he could take them home if he wished.

Garnsey glorified in having Samson just where he wanted him and where he could squeeze him.

To Mr. O'Connell, witness said he took the two officers, Newhall and Meagher because he heard it was a dangerous place to go to.

Did Mr. Newhall say he was there to commit a breach of the law?

Not that I heard. I would have heard him had he said it.

The cattle were not driven up the road, but Mr. Charlie Shambo drove them out to the road where they grazed.

What did Garnsey come into town for?

To see his lawyer if anything could be done in the way of a settlement.

Mr. Hancock said the team was placed in a good stable at Spenceley's. He valued the team at $125, saying he was a judge of horse values and had sold many of them.

Witness said he believed he had the right to seize everything on the farm, whether he told Garnsey or not that he had come to seize everything.

Mr. O'Connell—Why did you not take all the grain that day.

Mr. Hancock — We hadn't rigs enough.

What was the gray team worth? About $75.

Detective Newhall.

Detective Newhall said he had received instructions from Chief Thompson to go out to Garnsey's. He understood that Meagher and he were to provide protection for the party. He was not interested in the seizure proceedings.

"We told Garnsey we had come to see there was no breach of the peace, that there was no use in interfering, and if any wrong were done he could get redress in court. After hearing what Mrs. Garnsey had done to the sheriff I advised that she remain in the house. I told Garnsey he would get as fair a deal as the other side. Nothing happened beyond Garnsey getting excited and mad. Under the circumstances he was very good.

Did you get any extra pay for the trip? Mr. Langley asked.

No, nothing, not an "I thank you." I didn't get any meals except one, and I couldn't eat that. All I got out of it was the subpoena to come here.

Detective Newhall said when he first went there he addressed two women who were washing, but they didn't even look up from the tubs, nor said a word. A young lad appeared equally mute. Everyone around the house seemed to be dumb until he found Garnsey himself.

Mr. S. T. Wedlock.

Not if he knows it will Mr. S. T. Wedlock execute another chattel mortgage warrant. Called as the next witness he said he was manager of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer. He remembered the warrant he received on Sept 14 to execute at Garnsey's whither he proceeded without end waste of time. At the gate of the farm doing picket duty he met a young man named Hill who wanted to know his business. He told him he had come for the chattels but as the implements looked suspiciously new he passed on and told the men to take the hay. They had loaded up two waggons when Garnsey and Miss Hill arrived from Peterborough.

Kitney was there wearing a constable's helmet.

Miss Hill strutted on to the scene making a minor demonstration, presenting her paper claiming ownership to the crop. Garnsey had a different claim along the same line and Kitney joined the chorus in close harmony.

Between them I didn't know where I was at, said Mr. Wedlock.

Samson, the husband of Mrs. Clarissa Samson who held the mortgage was there. Garnsey offered to bet him that his contention regarding the immunity of his chattels was correct. He wanted to wager $50 to back up his argument. It seemed a sporting proposition to Wedlock, who suggested to Samson that he take it up and drive into Peterborough for a showdown. Samson objected to that Mrs. Wedlock claims he didn't call him "a damned crook." It wasn't necessary, he added; I did'n't know the man.

About that stage of the argument Wedlock got sick of the job, he said and was about to put back the hay and barley.

Garnsey's Offer.

Garnsey said I might as well take it into town, lock it up and hold it until he was satisfied he could sell it, and would then sell it to me. This was the barley. A load of hay had been upset in the yard. I was sorry this happened. I offered to put it back into the barn Garnsey proposed to sell it to me and said he would bring it in. Seventeen dollars a ton was the price of hay then and I offered to buy it at that. Garnsey had a waggon that had no nuts on the axles. When he saw it would be needed draw in the hay he told young Hill to get the nut and he produced them. Garnsey built up the load."

Bags Disappeared.

Mr. Wedlock said that Samson had bought brand new bags for the grain but he had hardly got into the yard until they mysteriously disappeared.

I asked Samson where they had gone and he ordered Hill to produce them. Hill dug them out of the mow. They were brand new. We've got them yet. I learned that just this morning. They came back to us from the brewery.

Samson and Wedlock were on friendly terms. Supper was provided. Later Wedlock brought in the barley and oats under the agreement he made with Garnsey. He stored the grain as agreed upon and later sold them under agreement.

Of the hay upset in the yard not twenty-five cents worth was lost.

Mr. O'Connell—They didn't overlook anything, even the 25 cents.

Resuming, Mr. Wedlock said that mice had cut into a few jute bags but there wasn't a bushel of grain lost altogether. One of the barley bags had become unbossened and some grain spilled along the road.

Every few days Garnsey and Miss Hill would come in to talk about the barley and oats. It remained in storage until Mr. O'Connell told me it was not to be sold and I turned it over to Garnsey.

He said I had promised to buy the grain in that case and so I had.

The oats were of poor quality and musty. I gave him 35 cents a bushel and that was a big price for them. But as I had agreed to use him right I paid him more than I felt they were worth.

The barley was sold at 61 cents. Garnsey seemed perfectly satisfied. Wedlock told him he wanted Garnsey's lawyer to understand their agreement and how he had carried out his promises. They went to Mr. Langley's office and Garnsey told him he wanted the oats transferred according to the agreement at the farm so there would be no trouble for me.

Mr. Langley said there was a certain humor among lawyers and he telephoned Mr. O'Connell. Afterwards he turned and said alright.

I thought all was settled. I had filled the bill as we had agreed. The next thing I got into this and I had enough trouble without it.

Storage Unpaid.

To Mr. O'Connell, witness said he had sent him a bill for $42 for storage and it was not yet paid.

Regarding the altered blind team. Mr. Wedlock told of young Hill bringing them in from a field. Hill let down the bars and both horses ran straight through them and around Wedlock who tried to stop them.

"They could see better than I could". Hill told me he had bought them at the sale. I didn't know they were said to be blind."

Witness did not think they were blind.

Mr. Kerr—That was your first experience with the Garnseys and Hills.

Well you bet and it'll be the last. This is not your line of business?

Far from it and it will be farther still after this.

Mr. Wedlock who is one of the defendants in the $2,000 action said he had gone out to make a seizure but instead had made an agreement about the hay and grain and had carried out his part to the letter.

SUGAR CONTINUES ITS WILD CAREER

Advanced 35c. Last Week—Situation in Eggs is Interesting

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

Continuing its wild career, sugar advanced 35c last week in two advances of 20 and 15c per cwt. respectively. There is no new cause to which it may be put down. It is a result simply of the speculation going on in the States, together with the very heavy buying in which Britain and France are indulging. There is no reason at all why sugar would not go higher yet, and the general opinion of the trade is that we shall see 10c sugar, and that in the no-distant future. There appears to be no logical reason why this would not follow, inasmuch as every successive seven weeks has left the market not a trifle easier in tone, but rather all the more prone to advance again. This is the unusual and to some people inexplicable thing about the sugar market, that no advance, not even a sharp advance, makes the market settled or less liable to go higher.

To some extent the firmness and startling strength in hogs which has been a feature of the market for two or three weeks has let up. Live and dressed hogs are a little easier this week, but in the main, hog products have maintained all their firmness and are well supported. This applies to most kinds of cooked meats, to bacons and also to hocks. Pure lard is actually a quarter of a cent higher this week.

The situation in eggs is interesting. Deliveries are heavy, although not as heavy for the last couple of months as the corresponding months of last year, and while demand is good, there is a fairly large surplus which is being taken up for storage purposes. An important point, however, is that the price at which eggs are being bought for storing is a couple of cents higher than last year. This indicates, of course, that we shall have higher-priced eggs next winter. If eggs are being stored at present level, there is no doubt when the public come to buy storage eggs, they will have to pay more for them than they did last year, when they were actually bought to store at a couple of cents under this year's price. So far as egg production is concerned for the first four months of the year, January and February were ahead of last year. This is chiefly due to the fact that January and February of 1916 were comparatively mild so far as weather goes and the hens were laying better. March and April, however, are below those months of last year, so that the thing is about averaged up from the point of production.

Cheese levels are up about a quarter of a cent this week and firm at that. The opening of navigation has allowed boats to leave Montreal with a good deal of stuff for export which has given a fillip alike to domestic demand and to export. Domestic demand for cheese at present is heavy. As far as export is concerned, inquiries are materializing into orders to a larger extent than has been the case for some little time and this is directly traceable to the opening of navigation.

Two weeks ago Canadian Grocer pointed out that butter was on the toboggan and that further declines in creamery were to be expected. The declining tendency was further exemplified last week, and this week in Toronto creamery butter has gone down 2c. The reason is that there is a great deal of creamery being made and notwithstanding an excellent demand the make is larger than the demand therefor. This state of affairs does not exist with regard to dairy butter, but only to creamery. As nobody wants to speculate this kind of creamery butter, the result is there is more on hand than is necessary. Fodder butter is not yet to hand and therefore there is no storage going on, which, were it proceeding, might take care of the surplus in creamery.

DOUBT IF HE WAS PUNISHED

Paris Thinks Guilty U Boat Commander was Promoted.

PARIS, May 16.—There is considerable scepticism amout the punishment of the commander of the German subarine which sank the Sussex. Mr. Marcel Hutin, in the Petit Parisien says: "We are curious to know, and perhaps the American Government will show the same curiosity, as to what sort of punishment has been chosen for the commander of the submarine. Has not Admiral Von Cappelle promoted Lieut. Otto Steinbrick, the commander of the U-18, which I understand was the submarine which torpedoed the Sussex."

Washington, May 16.—It was announced that instructions were cabled to James W. Gerard promoted can Ambassador at Berlin, to ascertain and report upon the exact character and extent of the "punishment" meted out to the submarine commander responsible for the attack upon the Channel steamship Sussex.

Man Was In Bride's Dress

Found Hanging in an Unoccupied House near Tecumseh.

WINDSOR, May 16.—Fully attired in the white silken wedding garments of a bride, even to the most minute detail of corset, white stockings and slippers, the body of a young man was discovered hanging from the rafters of the summer home of Byron A. Sewery at Clatt's Grove, on the Canadien shore, about nine miles from Tecumseh, late Sunday. The house had been shut up since last fall, when the family moved to Detroit.

A canoeist paddling his craft up to the bank had seen through the open upper window of the house what he thought in the gathering dusk to be some white clothing hanging in the centre of the room.

Of medium height, fair hair and fine features, the weird uncanny figure offered not the slightest clue to the stranger's identity. It had been hanging for perhaps three months.

A suit of man's clothing, of fine texture and brown in color, lay on the floor beside the body. A tiny baby's bonnet of white also lay on the floor.

Green tomatoes can be fried the same as green peppers. Slice them, dip them in oil, then in breadcrumbs and fry in fat.

When a slice or two of bread is left from a meal, do not put into the bread box to be forgotten, but cover over in a dish and use for toast at the next meal.

Rub leather chairs with a little fresh milk to prevent cracks in the leather. Do this about once a week. Whiting spread on a damp flannel cloth will remove all spots from painted woods without hurting the surface and without tiring the arm which applies it.

During the siege of Lucknow in the Indian mutiny there was afforded what was probably the most notable instance of the record in war of a crack shot.

The rebels were endeavoring to mount two eighteen-pounders, which they had hauled up to the flat roof of one of the palaces surrounding the residency, and it was necessary to prevent this being done, or they would have been able to pour down a heavy fire on the defenders. Sergeant Halliwell was chosen for this duty. He was a crack shot of the Thirty-second Foot.

Being given the best rifle that could be found, his orders were to prevent the guns being mounted. He took up his position behind some battered down masonry where there was only cover for him to lie at full length. He remained in that position, it is said, for several days, not being able to stand, inasmuch as that would have resulted in instant death. His only change was to roll over from his back to his stomach. His eyes were ever kept on the dismounted guns, and whenever the Sepoys attempted to mount them his unerring rifle played havoc among them and prevented their object being accomplished. Food was brought to him at night by men who crawled to his position.

After some time a sortie was made, and the Sepoys were defeated. For this brave work Sergeant Halliwell received the Victoria cross.—Harper's Weekly.

Seven in the Bible.

The number seven plays a prominent part in events in the Bible. The creation took six days, and on the seventh there was rest. On the seventh day of the seventh month a holy observance was ordained, and the Israelites feasted seven days and rested seven days. Noah had seven days' warning of the flood, and the seven years of plenty were foretold in Pharaoh's dream by seven fat beasts, as were the seven lean years by seven lean beasts. We speak of the seven heavens, and the seventh son was supposed to be endowed with pre-eminent wisdom. In short, there is no other number which enters into the Bible so often as seven. No doubt the wide popularity of the number and the superstitions which are connected with it came from its wide use in the Bible.

The Gurgle in the Bottle.

Why does water gurgle when poured from a bottle? As water pours out air attempts to pour in. Occasionally the hand holding the bottle may move and give the air the opportunity. The quick rush of the water to fill the hole made by the air causes the gurgling sound.

PEACE TALK PERMITTED.

Censorship in Germany Shows a Significant Change.

BERLIN, May 16.—The most notable relaxation of censorship shown since the war began is now apparent in relaxation to 'peace talk' in the newspapers and in press telegrams being sent outside of Germany.

The general tenor of the peace arguments is that the people of the belligerent countries are tired of the bloody strife and the enormous financial drain and are ready to quit, if their government consent.

In Germany, the declaration is constantly heard that the German Government stands ready and willing to open peace negotiations.

QUEBEC, May 14.—The Canadian Pacific liner Missanabie arrived last night, bringing among her passengers 287 returned Canadian officers and men, most of them convalescents.

Two of the Canadian officers, Lieut. R. H. Northover, C.O.C., and Lieut. A. W. Northover, 38th Battalion, are returning with the much-coveted Military Metal. Although each had been decorated overseas, neither one of the two officers was aware that the other had the medal. Although bearing the same name they are not related. They occupied the same cabin on the Missanabie, but only learned of the military decorations on reaching Quebec.

The Russians Have Cut Turkish Army Off From Bagdad

140,000 TURKISH TROOPS ARE IN GREAT JEOPARDY

GERMANY MUST ASK, NOT OFFER

Germany, harassed at home, standing still in the field of battle, barred from the seas and more eager than ever for peace—on her own terms—has been told once more that the war must go on.

"We do not want Germany to offer peace," said President Poincare. "We want Germany to ask for peace."

From time to time, with each successive discouragement or with an apparent success, gained at a terrifying cost, Germany has put out peace feelers. The most recent of these appeared in the Berlin reply to the American demand that submarine murders cease forthwith. Church and State have been used to convey hints that Germany would have peace—on her own terms.

One after another the nations opposing Germany have emphatically answered the German plea. Some day it must of necessity dawn on the Prussian military clique that these nations means exactly what they say—that there will be no peace on a German basis and that when peace eventually does come Germany will be obliged to agreed to the terms, but will have not the slightest part in laying them down.

The Time For Government Aid

Should Be Assistance to the Maple Leaf Club in London.

LONDON, May 17.—The leader of an overseas reception committee which concerns itself with meeting soldiers on leave from the front says it is bitter to have to say to these men from the trenches, "We don't know where you can go, as all our clubs are full." The Maple Leaf Club, which caters to Canadians, hopes shortly to open a third annex, but even then the accommodation will be far short of requirements. Even with five hundred more beds than are now available, requirments will not be met. Divisional orders issued in the trenches recommend the Maple Leaf Club to the men going on leave. Pay cheques are cashed there. The men leaving the trenches, to tell the truth, are often not fit to go ordinarily to a private hotel, whereas if there is room at the club their clothes are treated immediately on arrival, and they are given a complete change of underclothing. Many folks acquainted with all the circumstances are wondering if the time has not arrived when the Government should extend assistance.

300,000 German Soldiers Killed or Put Out of Action In Fighting at Verdun

German Losses So Severe as to Preclude Any Idea of a German Offensive Against Riga—The Tide Has Turned

LONDON, England, May 17.—Three hundred thousand German soldiers have been killed or put out of action at Verdun, the Paris correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, reported to-day.

The German losses have been so severe, he said, as to preclude any idea of a German offensive against Riga, in which region German sea and land forces are said to be concentrating.

"The tide has definitely turned, and from West to East the long evaded destiny of the Germans is closing in upon them," the despatch said. "At no moment in the battle of Verdun have they dared to bring thither any unit from before the British front.

"Since last September at least twenty-two divisions have been transferred from the east to the west front.

"There is thus left in Russia a mere curtain of German troops, while Bulgaria and Turkey are being left to shift for themselves."

Turks Are Striving Hard To Offset Russian Gains

NEW YORK, May 17.—A Petrograd despatch to the Tribune, referring to the further advances by the Russians in the direction of Mosul says: "Appearances all point to the conclusion that the principal war work of the immediate future will be on the Asiatic front. Verdun seems to have killed German initiative on the western front, but the ominous progress steadily made by the Russians on the Asiatic front compels Germany to reconsider her plans. Attention is called to the council of war recently held by Emperor William at which those higher commands engaged with the Asiatic part of Germany's strategic schemes were exceptionally largely represented."

TURKS MAKING HARD FIGHT.

LONDON, May 16.—A despatch to the Chronicle from Petrograd says: The Turks in Asia Minor are making a hard fight to ward off the consequences of the loss of Erzerum and Trebisond and, if possible, to recover their positions. They have reinforced and rearranged their troops and received from their Austro-German allies approximately a division of infantry and a brigade of cavalry, besides artillery, aeroplanes and motor cars.

The new Turkish base is at Kharput on the upper Euphrates, 100 miles south of Erzingan by difficult mountain roads. The chief efforts of the Ottoman commanders are directed to breaking the Russian centre at Ashkalch, midway between Erzerum and Erzingan, and so clearing the road to Riseh and Erzerum.

RUSSIAN GAINS ON FLANKS.

After a fortnight's heavy fighting and that at the cost of great losses, they have succeeded in slightly pushing back the Russians at a few points, but this inconsiderable gain in the centre is outweighed by growing Russian success on the flanks.

The Turkish force, engaged at Kut, is said to have been despatched northward to resist the Russian advance on Bagdad, but the movements of Gen. Gorringe's and Gen. Bartoff's forces are strictly co-ordinated, and the struggle for Bagdad seems about to enter a new and interesting phase.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS.

PETROGRAD, May 16.—Between 30,000 and 40,000 square miles of Turkish territory in Asia are now held by the Russians, while the forces of Grand Duke Nicholas are driving steadily toward the Bagdad railway to cut off the Turkish army in Mesopotamia.

The official statement issued last night reads:—"Caucasus front—in the direction of Mamakhatun our reconnaissances produced successful results. In the direction of Diarbekr we repulsed a Kurkish offensive. In the direction of Mosul our troops entered the town of Rivandouza and seized ammunition depots. The enemy beat a precipitated retreat, abandoning convoys and war material. Our cavalry are in close pursuit."

Suicide's Shoes Showed London Mark

Detectives Are Convinced Man Who Hanged Himself Was a Canadian.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 16. — There were no developments of importance in the "Bride of Death" case to-day, although Provincial Constables Smith and Wigle assisted by Detroit detectives went over the ground carefully. The only facts established not proven yesterday were that the suicide — if suicide it was — was undoubtedly a resident of Canada. His shoes which had been carefully removed with the rest of the man's outfit, showed a London mark, while his brown suit of clothes are undoubtedly of Canadian make, although the maker's name had been carefully cut out. The presence of $38 in Canadian money also tends to lend ground to this theory.

That the suicide was carefully planned is shown in the manner in which the stranger prepared for the end. He had removed his outer clothing in a room adjoining the one where the body was found, afterwards carrying it in and arranging it carefully on the floor just beneath the spot where the silken rope was fastened to the rafter. A mirror on a dresser faced the body and into its reflection the unknown must have gazed after he had kicked away the chair on which he stood.

The body was buried in Windsor cemetery yesterday and the case now seems to be closed.

Every Woman's Duty

in matters pertaining to the family table is to decide not only what is best for herself, but for the husband and children as well.

Take the table drink, for instance: the housewife may like her tea and coffee. She knows that tea and coffee are harmful to many, but she uses her favorite beverage in moderation, and thinks it doesn't harm her.

But there's John. He's irritable and nervous, perhaps his irritation and sleeplessness may be due to tea or coffee.

Again almost everybody knows that tea and coffee are especially harmful to the little folks. The next thing, then, is "what to serve as a wholesome table beverage?"

In many families the quick and happy answer is

Instant Postum

Here is a delicious beverage pure and free from the drugs, caffeine and tannin, which often disagree with health and comfort.

This pure, delicious food-drink is made instantly by using a level teaspoonful in a cup and adding hot water, also sugar and cream to taste. Everyone can drink all they desire without the slightest chance of harm.

Instant Postum is made of prime wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses. Its flavor, purity and wonderful goodness have won tremendous favor.

HAS ERECTED A LARGE SIGN

Innovation Introduced by Proprietor of Trewern Cheese Factory

Mr. J. Chittick, cheese maker at Trewern cheese factory, is the author of an inovation that should appeal to a number of cheese makers throughout the county. It consists of a large sign that has been placed on the factory designating the name and character of the institution. It not only serves as a means of identifying that particular locality but serves to advise the travelling public of the geographical location. To have a factory or place of business without a sign of some kind is like owning a house without a number. In travelling through the country a person often comes in contact with a building that to the uninitiated might be taken for anything. Placing a sign on such a building tends to serve a dual purpose. It advertises the product of the particular concern and serves as a landmark to the surrounding country.

St. Pierre May Be Taken Over

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., May 17. — The possibility of the acquisition of the French colony of St. Pierre by Newfoundland is being discussed in official circles as a result of conditions arising from the European conflict.

The idea was suggested by recent negotiations which led to the relaxation for the term of the war of the so-called Bait act by the Newfoundland government, in view of the shortage of fish in France. The Bait act was put in force in 1886 and prohibited the selling of herring to the French fishermen whose headquarters were at St. Pierre.

With the advent of the war France withdrew the last of her fishermen from this side of the Atlantic, resulting in a critical shortage of fish at home. Representations were made to the Newfoundland government, and in view of the circumstances it was decided to allow buyers from St. Pierre to purchase Newfoundland herring on the condition that the fish should not be used for bait, but should be devoted solely to food purposes.

Within the next few months thousands of barrels of herring, it is expected, will be shipped to St. Pierre. This concession, it is believed in some circles, will pave the way to a readjustment of the whole fisheries question after the war and possibly to negotiations toward the taking over of St. Pierre by Newfoundland. The matter has been talked of unofficially before, but has found no responsive echo in French government circles because of the value of the little fishing colony as a training school in seamanship for the navy.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

Through the fleet they went—a fleet that was wearing crape for him—and from every vessel received a volley of cheers.

The Charming Lass greeted him with open arms. Pete Ellinwood swung him up from the transferring dory with a great bellow of delight, and he was passed along the line until, battered, joyous, and radiant, he arrived exhausted by the wheel, where he sat down.

When they all had drunk to the reunion from a rare old bottle, heavily cobwebbed, Code told his story. Then, while the men dressed down, he walked about, looking things over and counting the crew on his fingers.

"Pete!" he called suddenly, and the mate left the fish-pen.

"Where's Arry Duncan?"

"Wal, skipper, I didn't want to tell you fer fear you had enough on yer mind already, but Arry never come back the same day you was lost."

"My God! Another one! I wondered how many would get caught that day!"

"An' that ain't all. He had your motor-dory with him—the one you caught us with out of Castalia."

"How did he have that? I gave orders the motor-dories weren't to be used."

"Wal, cookee an' the boy—they was the only ones aboard—tell it this way: Arry he struck a heavy school fust time—he lets his dory rodin' go an' most of his fish topped forty pound. In an hour his dory was full, and it was a three-mile pull back.

"When he got in he argued them others into givin' him the motor-dory, 'cause it holds so much more. They helped him swing it over, an' that's the last they see of him."

"But if he had an engine, you'd think he could've made it back here or run foul of somebody or something."

"Yas, you would think so; but he didn't, the more peace to him," Ellinwood's reply.

"The poor feller!" said Code. "I'm sorry for his wife. Anything else happen while I was gone Pete?

"Now let me think!" The mate scratched his head. "Oh, yes! Curse me, I nearly forgot it! You know that quair schooner that chassed us down one day an' asked the fool questions about you?"

"Yes, I saw that same schooner again yesterday. She asked more fool questions."

"You did!" cried Ellinwood in amazement. "I didn't see her, but I heard her, an' I got a message from her for you. It was night when they come up on us an' hailed.

"They said they had news of you, an' would we send a dory over. Would we? They was about six over in as many minutes. But they wouldn't let us aboard. No, sir; kept us off with poles an' asked for me.

"When I got in close they told me the Rosan had found you, and handed me an envelope with a message inside of it. Just as I was goin' away there came the most awful likin' an' flashin' amidships I ever saw—"

"Wireless," said Code.

"Wal, I've heard of it, but I never see it before; an' I come away as quick as I could."

"And the message" asked Code curiously.

Pete laboriously unpinned a waistpocket and produced an envelope which he handed to Code. It was sealed, and the skipper tore away the end. The mystery and interest of the thing played upon his mind until he was in a tremble of nervous excitement.

At last he would know what the schooner was and why.

Eagerly he opened the message. It was typewritten on absolutely plain paper and unsigned, further baffling his curiosity.

After a moment he read:

"Captain Schofield:

"Yesterday at St. Andrew's suit was filed against you for murder in the first degree upon the person of Michael Burns, late of Freekirk Head, Grande Mineu Igeland, Plaintiff, Nathaniel Burns, son of the deceased. There is an order out for your arrest. This is a friendly warning and no more. You are now forearmed!"

CHAPTER XVII

TRAWLERS

Schofield stood as one stupefied, staring blankly at the fateful words.

Murder in the first degree!

Had it not been for his thorough knowledge of Nat Burns's character he would have laughed at the absurdity of the thing and thrown the message over the side.

But now he remained like one fast in the clutch of some horrible night mare, unable to reason, unable to think coherently, unable to do anything but attempt to sound the depths of a hatred such at this.

For Heaven's sake, what is it skipper?" asked Ellinwood.

Code passed the message to his mate without a word. In men might as well know the worst at once. Ellinwood read slowly.

"Rot!" he snarled in his great rumbling voice. "Murder? How does he get murder out of it?"

"If I sank the old May Schofield for her insurance money, which is what every one believes, then I deliberately caused the death of the men with me, didn't I? Pete, this is a pretty serious thing. I didn't care when they set the insurance company on me, but this is different. If it goes beyond this stage I will carry the disgrace of jail and a trial all my life. That devil has nearly finished me!"

Code's voice broke, and the tears of helpless rage smarted in his eyes.

"Steady on, now!" counseled Pete looking with pity at the young skipper he worshipped. 'He's done fer you true this time, but the end of things is a tarnal long ways off yet an' don't you go losin' yer spunk!"

"But what have I ever done to him that he should start this against me?" cried Schofield.

Pete could not answer.

"What do they do when a man is accused of murder?" asked Code.

"Why, afreid him, I guess."

Pete scratched his chin reminiscently. "There was that Bulwer case." He recounted it in detail. "Yes," he went on, "they can't do nothin' until the man accused is arrested.

"After that he gets a preliminary hearin' and, if things seem plain enough, then the grand jury indicts him. After that he's tried by a reg'lar jury. So the fust thing they've got to do is arrest you."

"Darn it, they sha'n't—I'll sail to Africa first" snarled Code, his eyes blazing. He stride up and down the deck.

"You say the word, skipper," rumbled Pete loyally, "an' we crack on every stitch fer the north pole"

Code smiled.

"Curse me if I don't like to see a man smile when he's in trouble," announced Pete roundly "Skipper you'll do. You're young, an' these things come hard, but I cal'late we'll drop all this task about sailin' away to furrin parts.

"Now, there's jest two courses left fer you to sail. Either we go on fishin' an' dodge the gunboat that brings the officer after you, or we go on fishin' an' let him get you when he comes. I'll stand by you either way. You've got yer mother to support. God bless her! An' you've got a right to fill yer hold with fish so's she 'can live when they're sold. That's one way of lookin' at it; the other's plain sailin'

"No Pete; this is too serious. I guess the mother'll have to suffer this time, too. If they send a man after me I'll be here and I'll go back and take my medicine. I'll make you skipper, and you can select your mate. You'll get a skipper's share, and you can pay mother the regular amount for hiring the Lass—"

"She'll get skipper's share if I have to lick every hand aboard!" growled Ellinwood. "An" you can rest easy on that."

"That's fine," said Code gently; "and I don't know what I'd do without you, Pete."

"You ain't supposed to do without me. What in thunder do you suppose I shipped with you fer if it was a't to look after you, hey?"

The men had finished dressing down and were cleaning up the decks. Several of them, noticing that something momentous was being discussed, were edging nearer. Pete observed this.

"Skipper," he said, "we've got four or five sheets of traw-line to pick. Suppose you and I go out an' do the job Then we can talk in peace. Feel able?"

"Never better in my life. Get my dory over."

"That blue one? Never again! That's bad luck fer you. Take mine."

"All right. Anything you say."

Several hands made the dory ready. Into it they put three or four tubs or half casks in which was coiled hundreds of fanthoms of stout line furnished with a strong hook every two or three feet. Each hook was baited with a fat salt clam, for the early catch of squid had been exhausted by the dory fishing. There was also a fresh tub of bait, buoys, and a lantern.

A youth aboard clambered up to the cross-trees, gave them the directions of the trawl buoy-light, and they started. It was a clear, starlit night with only a gentle sea running and no wind to speak of. There was not a bit of fog.

The Charming Lass lay now in the Atlantic approximately along the forty-six parallel, near its intersection with the fifty-fifth of meridian; for eighty to a hundred miles southwest of Cape Race, Newfoundland, almost an equal distance southeast of the Miquelon Islands, France's sole remaining territorial possession in the New World.

Code and Ellinwood easily found their trawl buoy by the glimmer of the light across the water. They immediately began to plant the trawl-lines in the tubs aboard the dory. The big buoy for the end of the line they first anchored to the bottom with dory roding.

Then, as Ellinwood rowed slowly, Code paid the baited trawl-line out the tubs. As there are hooks every few feet, so are there big wooden buoys so that the whole length of the line—sometimes twenty-five hundred feet—is floated near the surface.

When the last had been paid out, a second anchor and large buoy was fixed, and their trawl was "set" Next they turned their attention to picking the trawl already in the water.

Had Terrible Pains in Kidneys and Back.

Dear Mr. Editor—I want to write you about "Anuric." I was very sick, could hardly be up; I was in bad shape all the time. Had terrible pains in my kidneys and back, so much so that I had to scream sometimes when I was sitting down and wanted to get up, the pain was so great. I had tried a well-known kidney medicine but it didn't help me. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets so I thought I would try them. I took only one box of the Tablets, and my back is now free from pain and I can work and take care of my family. I feel I cannot say enough for this medicine. Sincerely, MRS. WM. KELLER.

Note: This "Anuric" is adapted especially for kidney complaints and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine and urinary troubles. The physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's great Institution, at Buffalo, N. Y., have thoroughly tested this prescription and have been with one accord successful in eradicating these troubles, and in most cases absolutely curing the diseased kidneys.

Patients having once used "Anuric" at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, have repeatedly sent back for more. Such a demand has been created that Dr. Pierce has decided to put "Anuric" in the drug stores of this country, in a ready-to-use form. If not obtainable send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to make rich, red blood, which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and organs of the body. You feel clean, strong and strengthened.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Pleasantopp, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It clears out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Insurance Engineers Put Safeguards Into Factories Where Legal Requirements Only Aroused Owners' Opposition

Removal of Hazards Accomplished by Employers Voluntarily When Shown Reduction in Premiums.

By CARL M. HANSEN,
Chief Engineer, Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau, New York.

FORTY thousand killed!

Two million wounded!

No, this is not a report from the battlefields of Europe. It is simply a statement of the annual casualties in industries in the United States according to the best available data.

Measured in economic terms, it means 200,000,000 working days lost on account of partial or complete disability. It imposes an annual tax directly or indirectly of approximately $600,000,000 on the industries of this country, a tax which must in some way or other be charged against the products of these industries and be borne by these industries in competition in the world's markets.

What is doing to check this tremendous waste? It is a fair statement that not until compensation laws began to be enacted in the United States was the significance of it all generally realized. Since then, however, it has come very much to the fore.

It was but natural that the casualty insurance companies should early have become vitally concerned with this subject. As parties at interest, as the institutions called upon to pay the losses occurring through accidents, their concern was obvious. As the financial bulwark, so to speak, between the manufacturer and economic ruin in case of accident catastrophes in his plant under compensation laws, they became by the very nature of their position interested in the question of how this tremendous accident ratio might be diminished in order that losses might be correspondingly reduced. This statement is not made to give the inference that casualty companies did not, up to the time of compensation laws, display any interest in accident prevention. They did, and effectively so, but not until these laws were enacted were their efforts co-ordinated.

Nineteen Companies Co-operate.

The Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau, a voluntary organization composed of the nineteen leading stock casualty companies doing business on this continent, was the medium through which this co-ordination was effected, and it was through the scientific determination of rates for workmen's compensation insurance that insurance as an institution became so prominent a factor in the advancement of industrial safety.

All forms of true insurance are based on the law of averages. Immediately a system gets away from that principle it ceases to be insurance. This is an axiom well recognized by all underwriters. In the case of compensation insurance rates—with the correctness of which the Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau is primarily concerned—as wide an average as possible is essential to assure accurate determination.

Let us take, for example, a common classification, "machine shops," to illustrate the process. The cost of all accidents occurring in all machine shops within a given area—say a State, or, even better, in all States—produces the premium cost necessary to carry the hazard for that classification. The rate determined on that premium cost is called the "average rate" and applies equally to all machine shops embraced in the classification—that is, of course, if within one State, or if operating under various laws in different States providing equal benefits. Through this plan the cost is distributed on the industry as a whole rather than on the individual plant which has had the accident, on the theory that the industry as a whole shall bear the burden.

Must Consider Exceptions.

It is well recognized, however, that among all these machine shops there are good ones and bad ones. Whereas theoretically they should all present the same hazard, practically they do not, and it is, therefore, an apparent economic injustice to measure them all by the same yardstick, the law of average.

It is further admitted that any plan of compensation insurance for work accidents, to prove effective and to truly fulfil what is expected of it, must primarily be prophylactic—that is, the plan must lay less stress on compensation for, rather than on prevention of, such accidents. Any system of rating must act as a stimulus toward accident prevention; only such a system is defensible and is economically equitable to the employer, the employe and the nation as a whole. This necessitates our deviating from the average rate to some degree, amplifying the law of average, and creating individual rates on the plants embraced in any classification based on the actual conditions of each from a relative accident hazard standpoint in relation to one another.

The object outlined in the foregoing is accomplished by what is known as "schedule" or "merit" rating, and the "universal analytic schedule" for the measuring of relative work accident hazards in manufacturing industries is the instrument used for this purpose. The writer had the honor of compiling and developing this schedule at the expense, under the direction and with the approval of the Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau. Upward of $50,000 was spent in its development. It involved the inspection of thousands of manufacturing plants and the employment of scores of experts before it could be put into practical operation. The results obtained, however, justified the time and expense devoted to it. The schedule is now used in practically every State, and in several States it carries the official approval of the insurance departments as well as of workmen's compensation and industrial commissions.

Compulsory in New York.

In the State of New York, for example, it is compulsory upon all insurance carriers to use it by order of the Insurance Department. They cannot otherwise underwrite compensation insurance in this State. Even the State Compensation Insurance Fund is availing itself of this instrument in the determining of compensation insurance rates. It was turned over to the State by the companies, members of the Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau, without recompense for the expense involved in its compilation and testing, and its use by all companies doing business in the State was freely permitted, including the State fund, although these companies had not contributed, financially or otherwise, to the research work necessary in developing it. Among manufacturers and employers of labor also the schedule is now generally recognized and accepted as a most effective incentive to accident prevention.

Just a word as to the construction of this "universal analytic schedule" without going into any technical details. It embraces all the factors, which, together constitute the accident hazards of the industry to which it is applied, as follows:—Building construction, protection against fire hazard, stairs, elevated runways and platforms, floors, floor openings, headways, elevators, boilers, engines, electrical equipment, power transmission equipment, such as sprockets, clutches, belts and pulleys, gears, set screws, shafting, couplings, &c.

Also it includes boilers, general order, light and sanitation and hand working machines. In addition, it deals intimately with safety organization in the plant in relation to the interest displayed by the management in educating the men in the subject of their own and their fellow workmen's safety, and takes cognizance equally of what means are provided for first aid to the injured. In all, it embraces about one hundred of the most obvious hazards recognized as accident causes. A brief outline of how the schedule is applied and what its effects are is also in order.

How Hazards Were Classified.

The average condition of all shops was first ascertained on inspection; that is, it was determined what were the prevailing practices and conditions at the time the schedule was compiled. If it was found that a given condition was guarded in the majority of plants, such a condition was termed "above average," and in the plants in which it was found that these same items or hazards were not guarded a charge was imposed for each in accordance with the economic value with which the hazard was assessed.

On the other hand, if a condition was found to be most prevalently unguarded it was termed "below average," and the elimination of such a hazard was rewarded with a credit on the rate. This process produces, in other words, "sub" and "super" standards from the established average, and a rate produced after the schedule has been applied to the plant, instead of the average rate, becomes a rate adjusted in direct proportion to the interest the individual manufacturer has displayed in accident prevention measures.

The result of this is that the rates on the individual plants within a classification, taking again machine shops, may vary all the way from forty per cent below the average rate to fifty per cent above that average rate in the ratio that safeguarding has been accomplished.

Clear Incentive to Safeguards.

The incentive for accident prevention in this plan is clear. The conditions constituting hazards as defined in the "universal analytic schedule" are made known to the employer or plant owner. He understands that for every set screw, for every set of gears, for each belt, for each ineffective fire escape and for every such condition which constitutes an accident hazard he is charged a given amount in his compensation insurance premium. The amount so charged, while in true proportion to the accident hazard presented by any of these items, on the other hand, is also measured by what it would cost to remove the hazard entirely or to bring it down to an irreducible minimum; that is, the saving in insurance rate on a plant always bears a fair and equitable relation to the total cost of improvements, and when it is remembered that the cost of compensation insurance goes into production cost the same as any other expense of manufacturing, the lower that insurance cost is kept the more advantageously stands that individual manufacturer in competition with his fellow manufacturers of the same product.

The total saving in 100,000 plants to which the schedule has been applied in the last three years has amounted to approximately $5,000,000 in insurance premiums. In other words, $5,000,000 which otherwise would have had to be charged against the goods manufactured in these industries. In addition to this, however, it has a far deeper social significance which cannot be lost sight of; that is, this $5,000,000 represents that amount saved in life and limbs of employes, measured in compensation benefits. The result of this, although possibly not yet apparent, is, nevertheless, far reaching. It is, in other words, true social work put on a business and economic basis.

As a natural sequence to schedule rating safety standards became necessary; in fact, schedule rating rests fundamentally on definite standards, simple and easily interpreted by the layman not having a technical training. This necessitated, co-ordinately with the "universal analytic schedule," the compilation of "universal safety standards." These standards, now used also in practically every State, set forth concisely what are the conditions that shall obtain in a plant in order to obviate any charges under the schedule or in order to obtain the credits provided.

They constitute the first organized attempt anywhere to put truly the subject of safety where it belongs, on an engineering basis, rather than where it has heretofore been, on a legal basis.

The writer always has maintained that whether or not a fire escape was in the true sense of the word a fire escape, that could be depended upon in case of panic, or merely a firetrap or gridiron; that whether or not a set of gears was so protected as to offer no hazard to surrounding employes, as to whether a belt was guarded or not guarded, were all simple engineering problems that could and should be decided on questions of fact, and that questions of law in no instance should enter into it.

It is at least significant, if not none the less gratifying, to note that since the compilation of "universal safety standards" several States have undertaken to place the power of safety requirements in the hands of boards or commissions, whose orders, after due investigation at public hearings, where all parties interested may offer their suggestions and objections, take the force of law. For the last thirty years the statute books of the various States have been overloaded with legal factory requirements, and few or no results were obtained because of the impossibility of the average man understanding them; whereas specific requirements, accompanied by drawings, as presented in "universal safety standards," enable the humblest mechanic at sight to interpret and apply them.

Practical View Spreads.

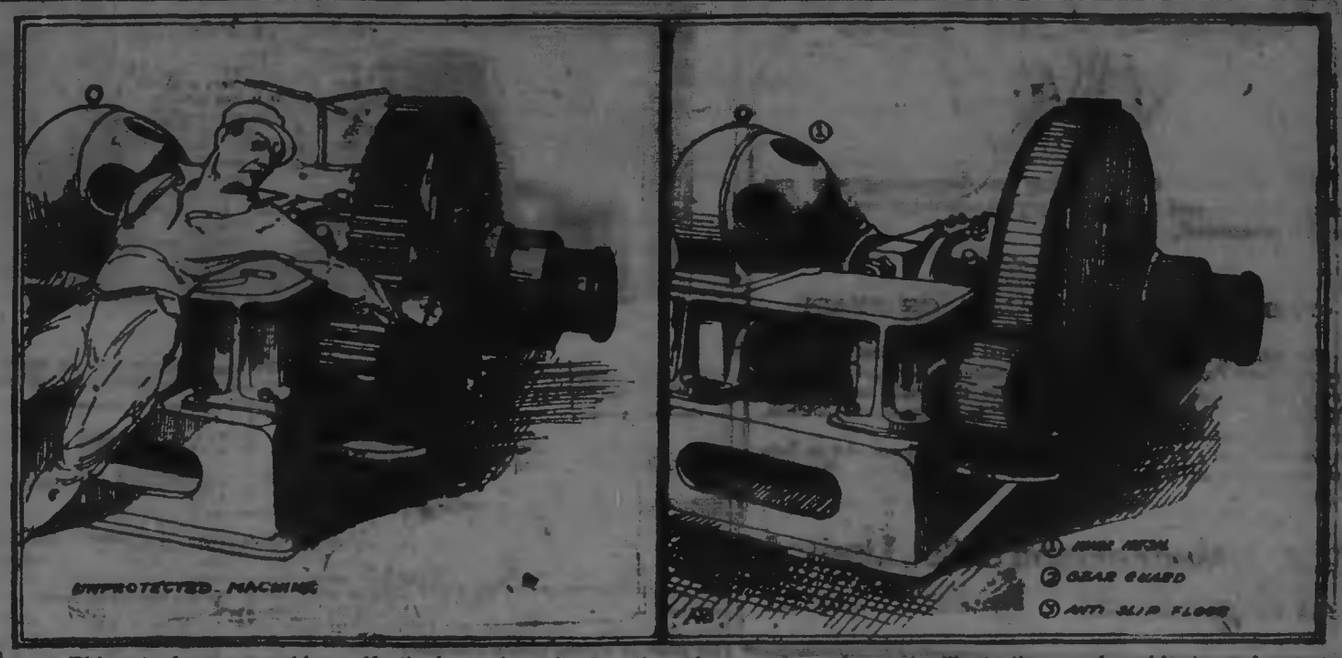
The practicability of these standards is now so well recognized that several industrial accident boards and commissions, as well as State factory inspectors, have requested permission to reproduce them in part or in full as the official orders of the States in question, and the same magnanimity as displayed by the companies which are members of the Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau as regards the use of the "universal analytic schedule" has been shown in regard to the standards, with the result that to-day in several States they have the force of law in place of the previous legal requirements.

The labor and expense involved in the development of these standards have been tremendous. Upward of one thousand drawings have been prepared portraying all the known hazards encountered in the various industries, and a proper solution of the elimination of each hazard has been worked out. They are not simply confined to mechanical devices and equipments, but include also buildings for all purposes—mercantile, office, theatre, moving picture houses, schools, hospitals, &c.

The standards when complete will, as the name implies, be universal in scope and application. They are predicated on the basic fact that a condition is either safe or not safe, and that if it is safe in New York it is safe in California, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts or, for that matter, in any other part of the world, and that such safety or property standard could be predetermined; that the word "average" as generally applied in the trade to accidents is the foolish language.

Let it not be assumed from the foregoing that the Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau believes or tries to make others believe that mechanical safeguards and proper building construction will solve the problem of accident prevention to a desirable question. No, far from it! Safe measures at the best will only reduce accidents a certain percentage of the total. The education of the individual workman is equally essential.

After the buildings and mechanical equipments of a manufacturing establishment are brought to the highest state of perfection from a safety and protection standpoint the final solution lies in educating the employes out of instinctive carelessness into intuitive caution.



This set of gears would as effectively perform its function if encased as shown in illustration, and accidents such as pictured, which are of daily occurrence, would not happen.

BECAUSE the human mind is constantly occupied with things pertaining to details of pleasure or of the perplexities of life, to the exclusion of immediate physical surroundings, it is necessary," said Mr. Marcus A. Dow, general safety agent of the New York Central lines, to a local newspaperman when he arrived at the C. P. R., Windsor Station, Montreal, the other day in charge of two cars fully equipped with moving picture outfits for the purpose of demonstrating "Safety First" to railway employees, "that something be put forth constantly to awaken that mind to a realization of what might happen to cause an injury through certain clearly defined acts of negligence.

"Not all the safety appliances that can ever be invented and applied nor all the laws and regulations that can ever be passed and enforced can efface the human element from the accident equation.

"A careful analysis of statistics of accidents in industries and on railroads shows conclusively that from eighty to ninety per cent of all accidents to railroad and industrial employes are of a character which can be prevented only by the exercise of greater care and thoughtfulness on the part of the human beings involved in those accidents."

The railroads throughout the country, as well as the large industrial concerns, are spending time, money and effort to develop and foster a spirit of co-operation among their workers. A number of roads have made arrangements to show a new three reel safety film, produced by the New York Central lines, which presents many scenes illustrating the different ways in which employes of a railroad may be hurt through their own carelessness while working on the tracks or in the shops, and vividly picturing some of the sorrows which would result from such accidents. The film is entitled "The House That Jack Built" and was written by Mr Dow. The most thrilling scene is that of a realistic rear end collision, in which a big freight engine hauling a heavy train is seen to crash into another train, completely demolishing a coach and two other cars. It illustrates the serious consequences likely to result from a brakeman's carelessness in not going back far enough to signal.

This film is entertaining as well as instructive, and will be shown in many of the larger cities for the benefit of employes and their families. The New York Central has also equipped two cars with complete moving picture outfits, which will be sent over the lines of the entire system, and Mr. George Bury, Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific, who visited the cars when in Montreal, has purchased a film of "The House that Jack Built," to be placed at the disposal of moving picture houses at divisional and other important points along the lines of the C. P. R., with a view to further promoting the "Safety First" movement in Canada.

A LAST EPISODE

Professor Pollard Thinks This Will be a Great Sea Fight

Will the German navy come out to fight? This question was touched upon by Professor Pollard in the course of a speech at University College. He pointed out that the advantages of success from the German point of view were obvious, but the Germans might like to keep their navy as something to bargain with at the end of the war. Sooner or later there probably would be a great naval battle between the British and German navy. It would be a sign, however, not of confidence but of desperation on the part of the Germans. "I think," added Professor Pollard, "it will be one of the last episodes in this war."

Tell Swiss of Great Shell

According to the "Revue Militarie Suisse" the German artillery has new shells of tremendous destructive power. For the projectiles a new explosive is used and the explosion of one of these shells is said to kill everything within a radius of twelve hundred feet.

The Next German Peril

Henrik Bergsen, the widely known Norwegian merchant, who spent twenty years in Germany, declares that in that country there is stored $1,500,000,000 worth of cheap merchandise, mostly produced by women, ready to be sold to the world immediately peace is declared.

As a measure of war economy, the schoolboys of Harrow have cut off their immemorial coat tails and also wear fewer buttons.

The Racking Pains of Sciatic Rheumatism

Were Well-nigh Unbearable—After Five Years of Suffering Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Medicines

For downright excruciating pain few ailments can be compared to sciatic rheumatism. Since this condition of the sciatic nerve denotes exhaustion of the nervous system the logical cure is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to nourish the starved nerves back to health and vigor.

Reports are continually coming in to us regarding the splendid results obtained in the treatment of sciatic rheumatism by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after each meal and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally as a means of arousing the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby keeping the system freed of pain causing poisonous impurities.

Mr. W. J. Talbot, Edenwold, Sask., writes: "It is a great pleasure for me to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food as a cure for Sciatic Rheumatism. The pain I have suffered has been well-nigh unbearable. It would start in the hips and run down the legs to the toes, gradually getting worse. The nerves contract until one is practically useless. My doctor tried many different treatments, but could only afford relief for a time.

"For about five years I was subject to this trouble with severe attacks which would last about two months. The last attack I had was shortened to two weeks by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. This treatment was continued until I was satisfied that the cure was lasting."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. H. E. Wooley, J.P.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six for $2.50. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON DRESS.
By Anabel Worthington.

7744

Even in an apron dress the average woman likes novelty and in the illustration, No. 7,746, a design is offered that has a right to be called novel in style. It is apparent that the odd manner of buttoning over the shoulders in front, almost to yoke line, gives the semblance of the cape effect—now good style in dresses for general wear and in those for dress occasions. Edging is used to finish the square neck and the pretty sleeve, which is in one with the body section of the garment, and the pocket at a convenient point in the left front is similarly fancied; an elastic at the waistline regulates the fulness. To have something out of the ordinary in the way of a dress that will be appropriate for wear during hours devoted to household routine you will copy this model, which slips on over the head. The skirt portion arranges itself in neat folds that give graceful fall to the garment.

The pattern of this apron dress is cut in one size only. To make it will require 3½ yards 36 inch material and 3½ yards edging to trim.

If you will send us cents to the office of this publication the pattern will be promptly forwarded to you.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

AFRICAN SNIPING

Difficulties of Victorious Campaign in the Kameruns

About 2,000 colonial West African troops accompanied the British squadron to Kamerun and these, with marines and sailors, were landed and, using Duala as a base, formed a column to pursue the retreating Germans in the famous equatorial campaign. The Germans had retreated east towards Yaunde and blew up the railroad bridge after their last trains passed over it. "It was necessary to get natives to transport all the munitions of war which our column was to use," wrote an English naval lieutenant who was in the expedition. "Several thousand of them were imported from our own African provinces, for we were not sure that we could altogether trust the other natives. Curiously enough, however, the native population seemed to welcome us. They didn't like the German government at all."

The lieutenant writes that about the time the column set out from Duala, on the west coast, a similar British column left Nigeria to the northwest and a French column set out from the French Congo country. "The purpose was to completely surround the Germans at some point, which proved to be Yaunde," he said. "I shall never forget the sight of the long line of troops as the column marched into the interior. Each regiment was accompanied by its quota of carriers—negroes scantily clad but carrying boxes of provisions—and dismantled guns, while here and there a mule heavily laden marched stolidly along. The column began to encounter difficulties soon after it left the base. The country was splotched with bushes and it seemed that behind each bush there was a sniper. The natives had been told by the Germans to shoot us. They knew the country and could pick a man off at a long distance and most of the time escape. One never knew when a long rifle would be poked through a bush and, bing! somebody would be shot."

The Prince of Wales has not worn a morning coat since he entered the Grenadier Guards.

Scarcity of Homes

Some idea of the feverish activity in British dockyards is given by the fact that people in Chatham, Rochester and Gillingham are offering rewards for the first intimation of empty houses, so scarce is housing accommodations. A local newspaper, for instance, contains an offer of five pounds ($25) for such information.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Yalmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

The Warne Drug Co., fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions and will gladly fill yours.

CHAPLAIN AS CENSOR

Strange Details, Grave and Gay, in Tommy's Letters

A British chaplain in the field writes as follows of his work of censoring the letters of the soldiers in his regiment: "These men write gaily of their hair-breadth escapes. They give brief account of daily life in the "dog kennel," with its door from a ruined cottage, and "Hotel Cecil" across it in scrawling chalk. "Have read of my death, but am well," is a startling postcard. I pity the Adjutant-General's Department, charged with these endless casualty lists! I know a family who'd been in black six weeks for a son when he wrote them a "chirpy" letter from the prisoners' camp at Torgau! Letters from the dead are astonishingly frivolous. I saw an anxious note at the end of one: "Do we have to give back the insurance?"

I have censored 1,800 letters in a day. It is a tedious work and anxious. I once passed a seemingly trivial local allusion to a church service, regularly held in a certain spot. A few days later the congregation were plastered with shell from German batteries two miles away! The average subaltern dislikes the role of censor, though it gives him new insight into the character of his men. I found that one officer whom I relieved at short notice had slipped a ten-shilling postal order into a wistful note, hinting at a mouth organ and blank "broke-ness" in the matter of funds. And that subaltern was none too flush himself.

Tommy's news seems trivial enough to the outsider. "Will close now. Whistle blowing us to business. What shall I bring you from Berlin?" How he'd got hung up on the "mug-rack" (barbed wire) in a night attack. The finding of a stray pig in a ruined farm with "chops for lunch that morning!" And here's a letter, months old, but with to-day's postscript, thanking kind ladies for cigarettes, and saying the writer had meanwhile "stopped a lump of iron with his head," and so had been laid aside.

HELP WESTERN ALLIES

Soldier of United States Argues With His Country

Speaking to an audience in the United States Major George Haven Putnam, a veteran of the Civil War, said: "The rule of Britain in Egypt has reformed the country from the rotten injustice which accompanied Turkish control, and for the first time in the recorded history of the world, it has secured for the peasant of the Nile, the fruit of his labor; the authority of Britain in South Africa—I will not say the rule, because that rule has been turned over to the Dutch, has secured peace with justice for all, including the natives, and has brought such loyal support that the Dutch themselves fought and have fought successfully for the privilege of remaining within the Empire and of helping to maintain the Empire; Britain, standing as it does for freedom of trade throughout the world, for the freedom of the ocean, for representative government, for the right of the peoples to rule, Britain claims our support.

"France, the great Republic of today, to which our American Republic owes its own existence, France which in its magnificent recrudescence has shown what Republican France can do, fighting as it fights to-day for its own life and the life of Europe, France standing for ideals, literature, for civilization. France calls with hopeful confidence upon America for help. And little Belgium, the martyred state of Europe, Belgium whose troops stood like the Spartans at Thermopylae, with no hope of saving themselves, with no hope even of saving for the time their own land, making a desperate fight to delay the onslaught of the barbarians from the east, Belgium which through those three weeks of fearful fighting saved Paris, saved Calais, may have saved Europe. I will add even Germany, the true Germany, whose final welfare depends, as I assuredly believe, on the defeat of the armies of the Hohenzollerns."

St. Jean de Matha, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. COL. F. L. BURTON of Toronto, organizer of the 216th "Bantam" Battalion for overseas service. Col. Burton, who is a native of Barrie, Ont., and not, by the way, of "bantam" stature himself, suggested to the Militia Department the advisability of forming a battalion of men too short to qualify in other battalions and is a firm believer in the theory that the small man makes a better soldier under modern conditions than the big fellow.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The German Attacks at Verdun Resulted in Complete Failure

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 17.—German attempts to drive forward their lines northwest of Verdun, near Dead Man's Hill, by grenade assault failed completely, the War Office reported to-day. A similar attempt by the Germans was defeated on th east bank of the Meuse, northwest of Thiaumont. Artillery on both sides was very active on the right bank of the Meuse last night. During the night two raiding French air squadrons flew over the German lines. One squadron dropped seventy shells on bivouace station. Near Vic-sur-Aisne a French flyer brought down a German airman.

Plans Originated in German War Office

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 17.—Maps found in possession of Sir Roger Casement support the contention that the plans for the Irish rebellion originated in the German War Office, Lieut.-Col. Gordon, of the British War Office Intelligence Department, testified to-day at the resumed hearing. Casement was more calm than on preceeding days of the trial, and listened intently while the British intelligence officer testified. Officers testified to the previous good record of Bailey, Casement's confederate, while serving in an Irish regiment before he was captured.

Make the Campaign a Success

Municipalities all over the province are making liberal grants to their county battalions. For instance the Cobourg Council the other day donated $1,000 to the 139th, while the Berlin Council has decided to give $10 to each Berlin member of the 118th Battalion. Peterborough is to have a chance soon to do its share for the 93rd. It is hoped that there will be a generous and ready response. The regimental fund is badly needed. If you want your own boys to be on an equal footing with the men from Lindsay, Cobourg, Port Hope and other places, it is your duty to see that the 93rd fund campaign is a success.

Plan Opens For Creatore's Band At the Grand

Great Demand For Seats—Arrange For Them at Once—This is the Greatest Musical Event of Years

A great concert is promised the people of Peterborough and vicinity on Friday evening next at the Grand when the noted and Coductor, Giuseppe Creatore, will give the music loving people of this vicinity a musical treat. This organization has received the highest praise in this country as well as in Europe The London Daily Express says: "Giuseppe Creatore, who last night made his London debut at the Queen's Hall has a magnetic control over his splendid band of sixty performers. To the spectator the irresistible impression is that they are performing involuntarily, entirely at the will of their fiery violate conductor. The result is a incomparably fine piece of orchestra, forming the the power of ofr woitw yyiof yoifty most complete possible tribute to by the wizardy of his musician's intense temperament. Creatore scorns the printed score. The programme last night was well chosen to express the wonderful range of the conductor's musical magnetism. It opened with Wagner's 'Feast March' from 'Tannhauser'. An encore in the shape of a Neapolitan march followed. They were succeeded by the dainty Mignon' Overture, and then came a minuetto by Baccherine in which the reeds achieved most telling effects.

THE PROBLEM OF HELP

War Munitions do not always mean shells, guns and cartridges. The Quaker Oats Company feel that in supplying flour and cereals for the armies of the Allies that they are as important manufacturers of munitions as the shell or rifle factories, but men and girls are urgently wanted to keep pace with the orders—not skilled, but inexperienced help, that can earn in a short time what a mechanic a few years ago would consider a good wage.

It is only a few days ago that the Company made an unsolicited general increase in wages of 10 per cent in the shape of a bonus payable at the end of the each pay. When it is possible for a girl to make $2.00 per day, or over, it is easy to find the solution of why domestic help is so scarce.

A wage-earner should consider the fact that the Quaker Oats Company, has never cut wages since it began operations in this city, and during the panic at the commencement of the war carried their plant through this period by running full time without laying off any of their employees.

THE LEE ENFIELD PREFERRED

OTTAWA, May 16.—A somewhat remarkable letter from Major-General Alderson, commanding the Canadian forces at the front, written "in response to a communication from Ottawa," is printed in The Evening Citizen to-day. General Alderson makes a very candid criticism of the Ross rifle, which, he says, is inferior to the Lee-Enfield as an active service arm.

He declares that the men of the 1st Division threw away the Ross rifle and grabbed a Lee-Enfield whenever they got a chance, that the Ross jams more quickly and the Lee-Enfield under warfare conditions, and that his forces had a great deal of trouble with the Canadian arm.

Clashes With Sir Sam.

The recipient of Gen Alderson's letter is not disclosed, but it is understood that there is no question as to the authenticity of the letter or the accuracy of the excerpts quoted from it. It is known that there have been some clashes of opinion between Sir Sam Hughes and Gen. Alderson over the merits of the Ross rifle, and these differences of opinion may have had some bearing on the recent retirement of General Alderson as Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian forces at the front.

Ypres II. Caused Welcome Change.

"I may say that very soon after we got out here with the 1st Division," says Gen. Alderson, "I found that the men were picking up the Lee-Enfields whenever they could and throwing away the Ross. I issued an order that this was not to be allowed, and prior to the second battle of Ypres that order was carried out. The experiences of the battle showed that the Ross jammed so badly that I was obliged to let this order die a natural death. When the division was rearmed with the Lee-Enfield the men cheered loudly on hearing the news, and it was found that there were already more than 3,000 of the rifles in the division.

"I hold no brief for the Lee-Enfield, and I did, and still do, as regards the 2nd and 3rd Divisions, discourage any crying down of the Ross, although I know, as does everyone else, that the Lee-Enfield is out and out the best active service rifle.

"I believe the Ross to be a closer shooting rifle, and I think, and I often say so, that with teams of equal shots on the range, and using the rifles as single loaders, the Ross would win."

What Carson and Aitken Saw.

Gen. Alderson then refers to a statement that with three certain marks of ammunition, which he names, the Lee-Enfield "cannot be relied upon to fire fifteen rounds."

"This is absolute invention," he declares. "I attach a copy of a report on the test of ammunition we had when Carson and Max Aitken were last here together. From this you will see that the Lee-Enfield fired from 100 to 125 rounds as rapidly as possible with all three marks of ammunition named, while the Ross jammed from the twenty-fifth to the fiftieth round.

Men's Hands Cut Handling Ross.

"This report, which as you will see, was signed by both Carson and Aitken, does not state, as it should, that the Lee-Enfield, although handled by men not trained to it, fired (owing to it being much easier to charge the magazines) its 100 rounds in about one-third less time than the Ross. Nor does the report state, as was the case, that the hands of the men using the Ross wer cut and bleeding owing to the difficulty they had in knocking back the bolts.

"None of those present, and there were many commanding and other

CASEMENT AND HIS COMPANION COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Preliminary Hearing Concluded This Afternoon—Trial Will Take Place at Special Assizes With Chief Justice Reading Presiding

DEFENCE A MYSTERY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 17.—Sir Roger Casement and Daniel Bailey were formally committed for trial on charges of high treason at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing this afternoon.

Trial will take place at special Assizes, with Lord Chief Justice Reading presiding.

The nature of Casement's defence is still a mystery. Counsel for Bailey will attempt to show that the former Irish soldier knew nothing of the character of the undertaking upon which he embarked and that he specially informed the British authorities of the plans to foment a rebellion when he landed on the Irish coast.

Conscientious Objectors To Serve in Prisons

LONDON, May 16.—Many "conscientious objectors," whose objections to military service have been overruled by the military tribunals, are having a hard time of it. A score of them left Rhyl, Wales, to-day for different prisons to undergo varying degrees of punishment as a result of their court-martial on charges of refusing to obey military orders.

Several were sentenced to two years at hard labour. Some of them had refused to put on khaki or shave, and all refused to drill.

Several speakers in Parliament, in the course of the discussion of the military service bill, expressed the opinion that the scruples of genuine conscientious objectors often fail to receive proper consideration by those empowered to pass upon these cases. But thus far the only concession which have been able to obtain from the Government is that none of them will have the death penalty imposed by the court-martial for refusing to obey military orders.

24TH OF MAY CELEBRATION

There will be a meeting in the recreation room of the armouries tonight of all those interested in the 24th of May celebration. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock and a full attendance is expected.

CANADIAN SHIPBUILDING.

The day before yesterday there was launched at the works of the Canadian Vickers-Maxim, shipyards, Maisonneuve, Montreal, an ice-breaker costing a million dollars, and said to be the largest and most powerful vessel of its kind in the world. It is to be remembered that the great craft was built in Canada in a Canadian shipyard of Canadian material. It was launched, baptismally, by Lady Borden and, at the luncheon to celebrate the event, Sir Robert Borden expressed his gratitude for the splendid example of what could be accomplished with Canadian resources.

This is a practical recantation of Sir Robert's somewhat noted utterance that "Canada could not build a navy in fifty years." His vision has been clarified since that time, the mists of party expediency have been cleared away, and there is no occasion to placate Nationalist prejudices against a Canadian-built Canadian navy.

There is no doubt that Canada can build ships, and if we had five years ago entered upon such an enterprise, we might have had Canadian ships available to relieve the transportation situation, whose need was emphasized by Sir Robert Borden in his address at the launching luncheon. He said, speaking of the industrial development of Canada—

"But the basic industry of Canada was agriculture, and the prosperity of Canada had to be built on that. Her agricultural production could be immeasurably increased yet. Only one-tenth of the available fertile area of the West had been scratched, and the possibilities of expansion there that confronted the Government, with the pressing need of adequate transportation for the crops, by water and by land, were matters that must receive most serious consideration. Canals and railways were needed so that the grain could be conveyed in the most economical and efficient manner to the markets of the world, and the Government would do all in its power to further assist in providing these necessaries.

There is proof, if any beyond Sir Robert's word were needed, of the bona fides of the government in helping provide transportation. Through its majority in Parliament, the Borden Government has made another gift loan of fifteen million dollars to the Canadian Northern Railway, a loan of eight millions to the Grand Trunk Pacific, and voted five million dollars to take over an unfinished railway, the Quebec and Saugenay Railway which, however, can hardly be called a transportation medium in the national sense.

Sir Robert Borden is not thorough enough in agreeing to support transportation by canals and railways, as means of carrying Canadian "grain in the most economical and efficient manner to the markets of the world." That's well enough for oratorical embellishment, but it is not practical enough. Canals and railways would only help carry grain to the St. Lawrence, and the markets of the world are not at the mouth of the St. Lawrence. To carry Canadian grain "to the markets of the world" we require shipping.

Canada has tremendous and increasing capacity for producing wheat, and is in process of having adequate internal transportation. We have expended, or are in the way of spending some two hundred million dollars to provide this transportation, which in the widest commercial sense, leads to nowhere, and as far as getting our grain "to the markets of the world," is a dead loss. The complementary condition is shipping. If Canada had spent a third of 200 millions to encourage shipbuilding, Canada could have had her own ships to move her own grain.

It is argued by some that it would cost more per ton to build ships in Canada. That is no argument in face of what we have done to help other agencies of transportation, that are virtually useless without shipping. If we had devoted the fifty or sixty million dollars we have given to a third, and presently unnecessary railway to the encouraging of shipbuilding, we would have done much to make this presently superfluous railway, presently necessary. Our grain growing capacity would have been immensely developed by having an adequate outlet to the world markets by the provision of shipping. If we had subsidized shipbuilding as freely as we have subsidized railways, we should have had our railway transportation to-day of some use beyond internal use; we should have extended our railways across the Atlantic and to all the ports of the world.

Shipbuilding in Canada may be regarded as a dream, but it would have been much less a dream if Sir Robert Borden had not jumped upon and stamped out the little blaze that Sir Wilfrid Laurier kindled by his proposal to build a Canadian navy in Canada as a beginning, as an impetus to commercial shipbuilding. This idea, however, has not been quite killed. It is due to its inspiration that the Canadian Vickers-Maxim shipyards were established in Canada, and that there was there built, the "J. D. Hazen," the most powerful ice-breaker in the world.

If Canada can build ice-breakers for herself and Russia, certainly Canada, which has had money enough to guarantee bonds of a railway, to the extent, according to a Conservative member of Parliament, of 200 million dollars, could have helped, and could help the shipbuilding industry in Canada, and give practical value and effect to the hundreds of millions we have spent in developing internal transportation.

One could wish that the war were over and we should have time to think out to what extent, the immense interests of Canada were stricken and imperilled when Sir Robert Borden, at the behest of his Nationalist following, killed the truly national ambition and project of a Canadian navy—built in Canada, "of," as Sir Robert Borden said when he spoke from his heart, "Canadian materials and by Canadian skill." That idea, put into practice, would have been the thin end of the wedge of commercial shipbuilding in Canada and, if the industry had been helped half as liberally as privately-owned railways were helped, Canada might have had many grain carrying vessels now afloat, to help relieve the transportation shortage, that held the 18 million bushels of wheat, commandeered by the Canadian Government, on the plea of "urgency," in Canadian elevators, some four or five months.

If Canada is ever to be the great country her potentialities warrant, the minds of her rulers must do some great thinking effectively complemented by some great doing; must rise above the concentration of effort on petty details, complicated with the petty entanglements of political considerations, and adopt a really big national attitude; must sacrifice expediency to accomplishment.

MOBILIZE EVERBODY.

It is a common mistake to regard soldiers in arms, guns and explosive munitions, as the only or chief element in waging war. If a soldier is not clothed and fed, he cannot fight and he and his guns and ammunition will be useless. In this great war every man, woman and child can do something, and should do something. We don't want military conscription, but we should have military registration—every eligible man for the fighting line should be booked at least and his existence, residence, etc., known to the authorities. We don't want conscription of those who can't fight, but should work. We might, however, do much worse than have the whole available population of Peterborough registered, and for either war or work. Many who can fight can't do so because they have to work to keep things going. Their places in many occupations might be taken by those who can't fight but can work. We might have a recognized, if not official, record of the total population, male and female, who are available for work. In this way those establishments needing employees would know where to apply or how to reach the help they want. In our news column is an appeal of the Quaker Oats Company for unskilled labour, which can earn good wages and be doing its bit as really as the soldier in the ranks. The company is manufacturing food supplies for war purposes and all who help do this work are effectively in the fighting ranks. Napoleon the Great said an army "marched on its stomach"; that is its efficiency was in direct ratio to its feeding. All other industries and other agencies of war activity could be helped by mobilization of the floating labour capacity of the city by a registration of the place every unemployed person would be adapted to fill. In this event, if the work were thoroughly and systematically done, the finding of a needful employee would be as easy as turning up a word in the dictionary.

AN EMPTY GOAL.

Verdun is but the legend of a fortress. Actually it is the empty, blackened centre of a battle area, through which the River Meuse winds a crooked course. Intensity of combat varies in a rhythmic manner. There is no longer any possibility of a decisive military result. To take Verdun would be merely to win a little more topography at a terrific cost and face endless repetitions of the effort on terms not altered in the least. The Germans have, besides, a political dilemma. To persevere toward this empty goal requires enormous sacrifice, and yet the importance of Verdun has been so extravagantly represented to the Germans and hope of victory has run so high that now definitely to abandon the offensive would produce a most unfavourable impression.

Verdun could be taken at a price it is not worth. The cost in men and ammunition is rising, because the defense, instead of growing weaker, is gaining strength in both materials. The man power on the French side is increased by the arrival of Russian reinforcements. Major Moraht, the military expert of the Berliner Tageblatt, estimates the number of troops defending the Verdun area at 800,000, and the German force at half that number. He counts heavily upon the superiority of the Germans in guns and ammunition, but that was the main reliance from the first. The whole theiry of the attack was to overwhelm the French with the power of German guns, served by ammunition brought in trains on specially constructed railways. The results have been very disappointing. The resources of the French were underestimated. Their supply of munitions has been increasing prodigiously.

Data on that point are furnished by H. Warner Allen, special correspondent of the British press with the French armies. Taking the figure 1 as representing the possible production of unloaded French shells for the guns known as 75's at the beginning of the war, it was 14 by the middle of May, 1915, then 29 by the middle of December, 1915, and 30½ in February last. It is still increasing. The output of large shells rose from 1 at the beginning of the war to 8½ by May, 1915, to 35 by December, 1915, and was more than 44 in February, when the Germans launched their Verdun offensive. Heavy guns are now produced at the rate of 83 to 1, and of field guns the number is more than 23 times as great as when the Germans' rush to Paris was baffled twenty months ago. The increase in the production of ammunition has been proportionate. Therefore, as the military importance of Verdun's capture has decreased, owing to development of a character of defense that reconstructs itself continuously without the aid of forts, the cost of taking it or of making headway at all has been tending to increase. — New York Times.

THE PARAMOUNT DUTY.

"I am not prepared to say that my fellow-countrymen of French origin have no rights in Ontario, but I are prepared to say this, and I want my words to be heard throughout the length and breadth of this land; whether my fellow-countrymen of French origin have rights or no rights in Ontario, whether these rights are granted or decided, these conditions are no ban to the paramount duty which the French-Canadians owe to themselves, and to their race, to come forward and take part in the great struggle that is going on to-day in the land of our ancestors for the cause of freedom and liberty, and for the civilization of mankind."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his speech in the bilingual question.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Transfusion

By EUNICE BLAKE

George Dobbins enlisted in London for the pan-European war, went to the front and was severely wounded. Removed to a hospital in rear of the fighting lines, he lingered between life and death. His family were wealthy and willing to spend any amount of money to insure his recovery. An effort was made to secure the services of a surgeon to go to Belgium and give his especial attention to pulling through the son and brother. Every surgeon in England who had not gone to the front had more than he could do at home. Miss Amelia Dobbins, George's sister, was engaged to an investigator in the British institution for physical investigation. She begged him to go with her to her brother, and the appeal coming from the woman he loved won him over.

When a man's mind is running in a given line it is difficult to divert it. Surgeon Blake had for some time been investigating the subject of transfusion of blood. He had not only been successful in operations of the kind, but had begun to endeavor to search for results accruing from different kinds of blood injected into different kinds of animals. He had replaced the blood of a man with that of an orang outang, and the patient had developed a propensity to climb trees. A liberal and benevolent gentleman, who had received the blood of a miser had become a skinflint. These and other cases had convinced the investigator that racial peculiarities are in the blood.

As soon as Dr. Blake saw his patient, who was much emaciated and very pale, he said that he needed blood and must have blood at once or he would die. It is not every one who will give his or her blood for another, and the person who was willing to give his blood for George Dobbins did not appear. His sister volunteered, and since she was a hearty young woman, the doctor did not oppose the acceptance of her offer. He had every confidence that she would assume no great risk. But to supply the blood lost by Miss Dobbins some one must spare a part of his for her supply. A young soldier who was struck with Miss Dobbins volunteered, and the operation was performed, the blood the lady gave her brother being made up to her by Charlie Hopkins.

Not long after the transfusion firing was heard at the front, and to the surprise of all Miss Dobbins rushed frantically out and, approaching the firing line from the rear, seized a musket from a wounded man and, joining the colors, fought bravely. The troops, astounded at seeing a woman fighting beside them, rallied around her and under her leadership attacked the Germans in one of the trenches so vigorously that they drove them out. When the fight was over Miss Dobbins was decorated on the field.

Only Dr. Blake attributed Miss Dobbins' bravery, so unusual in a woman, to any especial cause. He made inquiries as to Charlie Hopkins and learned that he was one of the bravest men in the army. The doctor was confirmed in his theory that the blood is the basis of all the different traits that flesh is heir to.

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the table and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

People more Particular

THE demand for package goods grows greater every year.

Why?

Because the world is ever growing more and more particular about foods.

Packages keep the goods in wholesome, sanitary condition. They keep out dust, flies, moisture and odors, preventing deterioration.

They preserve flavor, freshness and strength, insuring value for the money.

In sealed packages only.

George Dobbins, after having received his sister's blood, improved rapidly and in time returned to the colors. He had enlisted as a private, but was soon promoted to be lieutenant on account of his coolness in face of the enemy. What was the astonishment of his comrades when at the first fight in which he took part after his return to the front he paled, turned and fled.

He was reprimanded by his commanding officer and informed that he must be tried for cowardice. He begged for a chance to redeem himself, asserting that the cause of his flight was that he had not sufficiently recovered from his recent confinement to stand up under fire. He was given the desired opportunity and returned to his command. But when a dash was made on the German trenches the men went over them while Dobbins' legs again carried his unwilling self to the rear.

This time a court martial was convened to try him. News of his disgrace went to England, and Dr. Blake, hearing of it, called upon George's father and announced his belief that the transfusion of blood from a woman had given his son a woman's constitutional inability to bear arms.

So great was the likeness between George and Amelia that when both wore the same kind of garments they could not well be told apart. George at the sister's suggestion feigned illness and was taken to a hospital, from whence his sister spirited him away to the coast and sent him home in woman's dress as herself. Then she applied as George Dobbins for some especially hazardous duty to redeem the lost reputation. It was granted. She stole into the enemy's lines, fired an ammunition receptacle, destroyed it and got back safely to the British lines.

An order was issued that the court martial convened to try Lieutenant George Dobbins for cowardice be dismissed, and Lieutenant Dobbins was promoted for gallant and meritorious service in the destruction of enemy's ammunition.

Riled the Scots.

At a rest camp "somewhere in France" the man of a certain famous Scotch regiment were having an impromptu concert.

Presently there drifted into the tent, lured there by the sound of revelry, a sturdy cockney camp cook. For some time he listened appreciatively to the music; then he suggested that he could oblige with a Scottish song. He was conducted promptly to the platform.

Great was the applause when the pianist, after a whispered consultation, commenced to play a well known tune. Advancing to the edge of the "stage," the camp cook, with an inimitable cockney accent, sang:

"Scots wha has on porridge fed,
'Scots wha's hair is awfu' red,
Scots wha suffer frae swelled head—
Gang hame and wash yer knees!"

He made his escape in good time, and so far has not been caught. But a whole regiment of kilties, mad with rage, are still on his trail.—London Answers.

Spring Housecleaning.

Shake curtains free from dust; double each curtain and baste the ends together, using strong thread and short stitches; soak in cold water, wash and starch; loosen one end of clothesline (one free from kinks) and slip it through all the curtains; replace line and pin hemmed ends straight. Do not sprinkle when dry, but press with hot iron before taking out basting. Do not boil ecru curtains, but add coffee to last rinse water. Curtains wear better if the ends are reversed occasionally.

PILES Do not suffer another day with itching, blind, bleeding or protruding Piles. No surgical operation necessary. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. 60c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. OSTRICH FARMERS LOSE.

Nearly Half a Million Birds Turned Loose When Prices Drop.

To say that a man has a stomach like an ostrich means nothing. Instead of living serenely on spikes, cactus, hairpins, and alarm clocks the ostrich requires regular feedings of alfalfa and corn. Deprive him of that sustenance, turn him into the veldt to forage for himself, and the ostrich dies, as about 425,000 of them have done in South Africa since the war began.

The truth about the ostrich was revealed recently by Lewis Richardson of Port Elizabeth, Cape Colony, who owns 54,000 South African acres and has been producing and exporting wool, hides, and ostrich feathers for thirty-five years, or since his emigration from Birmingham, England. He arrived in America on the Chinese Prince after thirty days on the water.

He said that before the war South Africa exported about $15,000,000 worth of ostrich feathers a year. With the European market cut off, the price of the plumes tumbled from $100 to between $5 and $10 a pound. At the same time the price of alfalfa and corn shot up to a figure that made feeding the birds impossible except at a dismal loss. Those who had alfalfa sold it to the British army for forage and ostrich owners opened their fences and turned the birds loose.

"Without food, and beset by their natural enemies, the beasts of prey," said Mr. Richardson, "the ostriches have died like flies. It is conservative to say that half of the $50,000 in South Africa before the war are dead. Contrary to the popular notion, the ostrich is a delicate bird, and even with the best of care the death rate is 20 per cent., which in normal times is more than offset by a 30 per cent. breeding increase.

"At the present prices for plumes there is of course no money in ostrich farming. When the war ends the supply will be far short of the demand, and prices are likely to be trebled. But the farmers, with their lands mortgaged, were unable to hang on and wait for better times. Many of them are bankrupt."

Mr. Richardson wants to see an increase in trade between South Africa and America. He says that London and Bradford, which formerly controlled the export market for wool, hides, mohair, and ostrich feathers, are trying to prevent direct shipments to this country. He added:

"We need capital and people in South Africa. The climate is admirable, and all that is needed for development is men and money."

Recently Mr. Richardson started raising oranges, and found that they could be exported between June and October, a period in which groves in other parts of the world are not producing.

Dandruff Soon Ruins The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair, and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Battles on Snow-shoes and Skates.

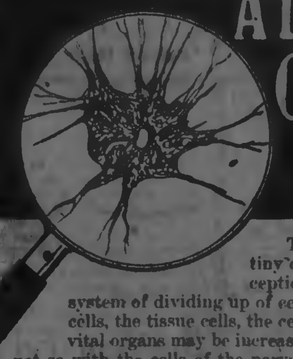
The recent battle on snow-shoes, fought between the Italians and the Austrians among the glaciers of the High Alps, is not quite the loftiest encounter between regular armed and drilled soldiers recorded in the world's history, as has been asserted in some quarters.

No longer ago than 1904, British troops stormed the Gyangtse Jong, a strong Tibetan fort on the road to Lhasa, which is situated at a height of not less than 15,000 feet above the level of the sea. It was while scrambling to the attack up a well-nigh perpendicular precipice that a weary Tommy was heard to objectulate: "I thought as how they told us afore we started that this 'ere Tibet was a bloomin' tableland." "So it is, you fathead," answered a comrade, "and we're climbing up the bally legs."

There has been no fighting on skates in Flanders this year, but that was due to the absence of prolonged frost. Both sides were known to have laid in plentiful stocks of skates, and had the winter been a severe one, instead of comparatively open, we should no doubt have seen a repetition of the tactics pursued by the Dutch when the Spaniards, under Alva, were besieging Amsterdam.

The besiegers in this case were taken completely by surprise, for the armed burghers of the city were adepts at skating; and rallying out across the frozen broads and marshes, they were able easily to out-manœuvre the Spaniards, and eventually put them to flight, with the loss of several hundreds left dead upon the ice.

A DEAD NERVE CELL CAN NEVER BE REPLACED



The human body is composed of millions of tiny cells of various kinds. With the single exception of the brain and nerve cells, there is a system of dividing up of cells to form new ones. In this way the blood cells, the tissue cells, the cells of the stomach, liver, kidneys and other vital organs may be increased so as to make up for loss or injury. But not so with the cells of the nervous system. You have a certain number at birth, but never any more. A feeble, poisoned nerve cell may be restored, but a dead cell can never be replaced.

For this reason complete paralysis can never be cured, but the person who is partially paralyzed may be greatly benefited by restorative treatment such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which nourishes the feeble, wasted nerve cells back to health and vigor.

This, undoubtedly, is the strongest reason why everybody should be familiar with the symptoms which tell of exhaustion of the nerve cells and know the best means of restoring the vitality of the nerves before they become dead to all treatment.

Sleeplessness, restlessness, irritability, nervous headaches, nervous indigestion, loss of energy and ambition, feelings of discouragement and inability to concentrate the mind are among the most common warnings. Later developments are known as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

It is easy to neglect treatment in the early stages, but that is the time when a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for you. Preventive treatment, which is so good in all ailments, is practically the only method to be applied to diseases of the nerves, because of the fact that a dead nerve cell can never be replaced, whereas a feeble, wasted nerve cell can be restored by such nourishing medication as is afforded by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Should you desire further particulars about this great food cure, kindly write for booklet.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

He Worried the Judge.

A story used to be told of the elder Judge Peckham, father of the supreme court justice. In the early days of dentistry a hickory plug was put into the cavity to fill the space where a tooth ought to be. This plug had to be gently pounded into its desired position. The old judge was somewhat addicted to strong language, and when the dentist began his work the judge indulged in some classic command. As the tapping of the plug continued he threw all dignity to the four winds of heaven and his language became decidedly "more forcible than elegant." When, however, he arose from the chair after what seemed to him an interminable period of agony he pulled out all the stops in his vocabulary for a grand climax. The impression on his listener seems to have been deep and lasting. As the judge passed out the dentist grimly remarked to a waiting patient:

"Wasn't it beautiful? It wasn't really necessary to pound half so long, but I did so enjoy his indection that I almost pounded the hickory plug into splinters. Wonderful command of language the judge has!"

His Lesson.

"You know I refused you half a dozen times before we were married," said Mr. Hopkinson's wife.

"Yes," replied her husband. "I suppose that's what has kept me from ever wanting my own way again."—Washington Star.

DRESS OF MALTESE WOMEN.

Silk Hooded Cloaks Hide Face and Form From the Curious.

The dress of the Maltese is very singular, and that of the women striking in the extreme. When abroad they are all arrayed in black. They put on over their other dress a robe or loose skirt of that color, brought high on the bosom, and in place of bonnets their heads are covered with a black silk mantle which invests their shoulders and descends halfway behind.

The part which covers the head is furnished with a piece of whalebone inserted in the hem, which keeps it in position and prevents the silk from dropping over the eyes. One hand, placed inside, is always necessary to hold together the sides of the scarf in front, and the other hand is often hid under its folds, only a forefinger being suffered to appear through the opening left for the purpose. Of course, under such mufflers little can be seen of the beauties of form or feature if a Maltese nymph happens to possess them. The eyes and a roving, pall black figure are all that can be distinguished.

But sometimes the fair one deigns to exhibit her face to a curious gazer in place of engrossing herself the privilege of seeing, and features good humored, rather pleasing than handsome and irradiated by a pair of fine, sparkling eyes, are disclosed to the observer. The complexion is a dark olive, partaking a little of a sort of imitatio flagu.

The mantle is obviously borrowed, or rather it has descended from a distant age and people. It answers to the veil of eastern ladies.

Such figures, thousands of whom are abroad on the Sabbath, give the streets a funeral look. It seems as if all Malta had gone into mourning.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Facts Worth Knowing

Take a district containing a hundred houses and a hundred families living in them. You will find that over ninety per cent. of the buildings are insured against fire loss. Of the heads of the families occupying them, according to the known average, not one in five will be carrying life insurance. Look forward fifty years: How many of the houses will have been destroyed in that period? Not over one of the hundred. Take the heads of the families in the same fifty years. How many of them will be alive at the end of that period? Not over ten out of the hundred.

We insure against fire as a matter of course, and rightly so. In the fact of a fifty-year record, how vastly more important that the two kinds of insurance be reversed, or better, that the life insurance be brought up in its totality to the volume of the fire insurance. The one house burns, insurance is paid, and the property rebuilt. The man who is in the great class of the uninsured dies, and the loss to himself and those dependent upon him is a total one. You cannot compare a fire loss with a death loss, and yet we go on and on thinking of the more meagre loss of fires and protecting against them, while overlooking and forgetting the greater loss that death brings, and neglect protecting against it.

It is a matter of congratulation that fire losses are universally recognized and protected against. How much greater a matter of congratulation it will be when the same unlimited recognition is given to loss through death, and life insurance protection becomes as universal as fire protection.

Building Falls On Crowd of Diners; Dozen Are Killed

AKRON, Ohio, May 17.—At least a dozen persons were killed and nearly a score injured when the old Beacon-Journal Building, occupied by the Crystal Restaurant, collapsed as a result of a blast of dynamite in an adjoining excavation. Seven identified and three unidentified bodies have been recovered, and two persons now missing are thought to be in the ruins.

A tremendous roar, echoing the screams of the dying people, brought thousands to the disaster scene, in the heart of Akron's business district. Instantly the entire city, rallying under the shock, plunged to the work of rescue.

A great pile of ruins, broken timbers, twisted steel and tons of brick and mortar, buried the victims who a moment before were dining, in the ruins.

Eight bodies were soon taken from the wreckage by firemen, police and volunteer rescuers, by chopping through the debris.

Nineteen more, many of them fatally injured, were extricated and sent to hospitals. Only two or three of the others known to have been in the restaurant succeeded in escaping before the crash.

A dynamite charge set off 50 feet away from the restaurant a few minutes before the disaster is believed to have been the direct cause. The crash came during the dinner hour when the restaurant was crowded and when thousands were on the street during the evening rush.

BRITISH THEATRE TAX IN FORCE

LONDON, May 16.— A new war tax on amusements came into operation yesterday, and, judging from the reception in theatres and moving picture houses in London, it was the one thing wanting to make the public happy. Not only was the tax paid but it was paid ungrudgingly. Some enthusiasts even regretted that it was not higher.

Ticket clerks who were prepared to face arguments and protests were surprised at the alacrity with which customers met the new demand. They were further surprised to find many unaware that the tax had been declared.

Those paid cheerfully when the circumstances were explained to them. "Deadheads" escaped the tax on the tickets, but found that if they bought a programme, which is still being sold in many theatres, they must submit to the tax.

Ontario taxes complimentary as well as paid admissions, but programmes are of course, free in Toronto theatres. A comparison of the two plans of taxation is as follows:

Canadian.

Tickets Costing.	Tax (cts.)
Up to 15c.	1
16c. to 30c.	2
31c. to $1	5
Over $1	10

British.

Tickets Costing.	Tax (cts.)
Up to 4c.	1
4c. to 12c.	3
12c. to 60c.	4
60c. to $1.20	6
$1.20 to $1.80	12
$1.80 to $3.00	24

And still higher taxes for larger admission fees.

Scotland's Sweetest Singer, Jessie Maclachlan, Dead

Death Reported From Glasgow —Had Appeared in Peterborough on Several Occasions and Was a Great Favourite

TORONTO, May 17.—Jessie Maclachlan is dead and Scotland has lost its sweetest singer.

A cable, bearing the message, "Mother gone," has been received by Mr. Wm. Campbell. It is addressed to her son, Robert, who is at present on his way to Toronto accompanied by his mother's sister. He arrived in New York Saturday.

In private life Jessie Maclachlan was Mrs. Robert Buchanan, and her husband, who is a very accomplished musician, had a large music warehouse in Glasgow. He travelled with his wife on her world tours and acted as her accompanist, but she herself was also a very accomplished pianist.

She was a woman of commanding stage presence, and had she persevered in her idea of going into grand opera she would doubtless have achieved even greater success. But the advice of the late Queen Victoria she kept to the line which she had marked out.

Jessie Maclachlan was the greatest interpreter of Scottish ballads on the concert stage. By training and instinct, apart from the fact that she was born in the Gaelic-speaking community of Tobermory, near Oban, she was admirably equipped for the rendition of those heart-stirring numbers which appeal so strongly to the Gael. She was known and admired the world over, but it is safe to say that she had no more devoted admirers than in the City of Toronto.

"It was in 1903 that she first charmed the Toronto audience with her magnificent voice and personality," said Donald C. MacGregor this morning, "and those who heard her sing 'The Hundred Pipers' and 'Whistle and I'll come tae ye, My Lad,' will never forget them."

She never forgot an old acquaintance. A few years ago while singing in a town in Western Ontario an old Scot came back to her dressing-room and slowly approaching her he held out his hand. Instantly the artist was on her feet, "Mon, will ye look at auld Jocky Stuart," she cried, "an' wae's me if 'tisn't twenty years since I laid eyes on him," said the great singer, pinning a sprig of heather on his coat, "an' may it not be anither twenty-years till I see ye again.

Inflammatory rheumatism is said to have been the cause of death of the great singer. She was about fifty years of age.

THE BURDEN OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

TWO WOMEN CLAIM CHILD.

Canadian Girl Tells Story of Her "War Baby" in Chicago Court.

CHICAGO, May 17.—"Jessie Bryan," the mysterious Canadian girl who has come to battle in court with Mrs. Anna Dollie Ledgerwood Matters for possession of a baby that both women claim as their own, testified in court here that the baby is hers, that it is a "war baby," and that its father, a young French-Canadian soldier, was killed in the trenches in Flanders.

The girl was accompanied by two nuns from the Misericordia Hospital, Ottawa, Ont. The sisters on the stand admitted making false entries on the hospital register to support the claim of Mrs. Matters that she gave birth to a child.

The gist of the testimony was that Mrs. Matters is on trial charged with attempting to foist a baby not her own as heir to the $500,000 estate left her by her late husband, Frederick Matters, Arcola, Ill., motion picture magnate.

Seven Nurses Participate In The Graduating Exercises

Interesting Event Was Held Last Evening in the Conservatory of Music Hall—Address By Rev. Canon Cornish.

ON ACTIVE SERVICE

Despite the inclement weather there was a fairly large attendance at the Graduating Exercises which were held last evening in the Conservatory of Music Hall, when seven graduates of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses were each presented with a diploma and medal by Mr. Richard Hall, on behalf of the Hospital Board. The successful graduates were as follows, in the order of merit:

GRADUATING CLASS 1916.

Miss Mary A. Phinn.
Miss Cora Agnes Spiers.
Miss Gertrude F. McCallum.
Miss Helena E. Brown.
Miss Ada A. Kemp.
Miss Flora A. Stuart.
Miss Mildred Drope.

Special prizes for proficiency in bandaging were presented to Miss Spiers and Miss McCallum by Dr. J. A. Morgan.

Mr. Richard Hall who presided, referred to the growth of the work in connection with the hospital. Since the establishment of the training school nearly one hundred nurses have graduated. Mr. Hall made special mention of the nurses who have entered upon active service.

On Active Service.

Among the graduates of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses now on active service are the following:

Miss Gertrude Reid, Miss Julia Hall, Miss Pansy Roberts, Miss Elsie Willson, Miss Francis Smith, Miss Bertha Mowry, Mrs. Mabel Douglas, Miss E. M. Beamish, Lady Superintendent, has also enlisted for active service.

A Glorious Opportunity.

Canon Cornish of St. John's Anglican church, during the course of an interesting but practical address on some of the good work accomplished by the local hospitals. He compared the hospital facilities with those to be found in some of the sparsely settled sections of the northwest where he laboured for a number of years. Missions were often established from one hundred and fifty to two hundred miles from a point where medical treatment could be obtained. Such conditions tended to increase the work of the ministers who were often called upon to render such forms of treatment as might be within their power. Nurses who were willing to volunteer their services could find an unlimited field. The opportunity was a glorious one and it is gratifying to know that many of the mission stations in the far west are blessed with the services of nurses who have graduated from the hospitals in the east.

Dr. J. B. Mann.

Rev. Canon Cornish was followed by Dr. J. B. Mann, who admonished the graduates to uphold the traditions of the profession. He said that the training they received at the local hospital was equal to any that was offered in the Province. Better facilities could not be had anywhere with some few exceptions incident to special lines of work. The work of Nicholls Hospital has increased during the past year or so. Dr. Mann concluded his address with the reading of a poem dealing with the manifold duties of the trained nurse and ways and means that might be adopted to make their services all the more valuable to the public they serve.

Miss Dorothy Allan, Miss Laura Logan and Mr. Douglas Carlisle contributed a number of excellent musical selections. The evening was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

By the courtesy of Mr. Frank Whitehouse, we have had the pleasure of inspecting several excellent photographic reproductions of the new Art Models of pianofortes by the Nordheimer Piano Company of Toronto. BRITISH WILL BE BETTER FOR WAR

By LORD ROSEBERRY, (Former British Premier)

LONDON, May 17.—No one knows whether the condition of affairs after the war will be a real and permanent peace or a constant armed anticipation of war.

It depends on the policy of the states of Europe whether they will come to realise the hideous curse inherent in war both to the victors and losers.

There is one thing sure: Our millions of men will return with a new spirit, and new views of the world.

They will be supermen and they must inevitably control the future of this country. They will bring back self-respect for others. Character is another inestimable asset that they will bring.

What is this war but a conflict of character, a conflict between the gallant, reckless, confident Briton and the cold calculating nation of assassins who, through a whole generation devote all their resources of science and knowledge to the preparation of hideous conspiracy against their neighbors and the liberties of all men?

If the Prussians win it will enclose Europe in a coffin with a Prussian sentinel to guard it."

It Costs More To Get Married

New Marriage License System Went Into Force on Monday

The increased price in marriage licenses went into effect Monday and as a result officials of the Public Health Department have been busy taking money in payment of new license forms requisitioned for by issuers of marriage licenses throughout the Province. Receipts have run into thousands of dollars.

The licenses are bought from the Government by the license issuer, who sends along his cheque with the order. The new licenses are sold to him at $3.20 each and he issues them at $5, the price set by the Act, pocketing the difference as his commission.

The price of a marriage license up to Monday was $2.

150,000 BULGARIANS AND TURKS AVAILABLE FOR WEST

The reported reinforcing of German lines in Flanders by Turkish and Bulgarian troops is regarded as in every way feasible when it is borne in mind that the Germans control through trunk lines from Constantinople to Ostend. Prior to the war the Orient express ran through cars to Ostend for British travel to the Bosphorus. Every mile of this railway line is now in German hands, and it is declared to be practicable to despatch solid troop trains from Constantinople to the Flanders country in three days' time. While this speed is reasonable, it is reckoned that four to five days would be more likely to be occupied under present conditions.

The Orient line from Constantinople to Flanders would cover, it is said, the route through Adrianople, Sofia, Belgrade, Budapest, Vienna, Salsborg, Munich, Ulm, Stuttgart, Heidelberg, Mainz, Coblentz, Cologne, Liege and Brussels.

In military circles the arrival of Ottoman troops in the western theatre of war would be regarded as recognition by the Germans that the real issue of the war will be settled in the west. It was expected, however, that the Allied forces at Salonika would serve as a deterrent to any move of Turkish reinforcements from Adrianople. That this result has not been achieved is attributed to causes at present unknown. It will be recalled that during the civil war in the United States the Confederates maintained a strong force in the Shenandoah Valley under Stonewall Jackson which constantly threatened Washington, and by so doing prevented McDowell's army of 40,000 men reinforcing General McClellan in the Virginia Peninsula.

The Turkish forces now operating on the Russian front in Asia Minor are believed to number 200,000 men. The total Turkish forces at Adrianople and before Constantinople are estimated at 300,000 men. It is not thought probable that the Turks would dare to detail at the most more than 100,000 men for the French frontier for fear of the offensive being undertaken by the Allies at Salonika. If the Bulgarians are being drawn upon the outside estimate of their forces available for western service is put down at 50,000 men.

Viewed in the light of concentration, it is estimated that the combined forces opposed in the western theatre of war will soon approximate 4,000,000 men.

WIVES AND MOTHERS

Have you ever stopped to realize how much the health of your family depends upon you? For instance, diet is a great factor in health, and you are responsible for it, then again when any member of your family gets into a run-down condition, when the children are delicate, cross and ailing, when somebody takes cold and develops a cough, they look to you for help. Do you know that our local druggists, McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, have a non-secret constitutional remedy known as Vinol which they guarantee for just such conditions. Many families in this vicinity have found it so reliable they are never without it.

SHIELDS USED IN BATTLE.

German Machine Gun Companies Shelter Behind Them.

PETROGRAD, May 17 — Steel shields, mounted on wheels and serving as shelters for machine gun detachments, are being used by the Germans on Gen. Kurnpatkin's front between Riga and Dvinsk, according to despatches received here.

Each shield is twenty yards long and constructed to collapse, telescope-like, to meet conditions of the ground. Only artillery fire will put them out of action.

On some sectors of the front the Germans are experimenting with a new style of helmet constructed with eye-slits which project in a sharp angle before the face, the object of the inventor being to deflect bullets.

Lieut. Cane Returns Home

Given Three Months' Leave of Absence to Recover—Was Attached to 18th Battalion.

Toronto, May 17.—Lieut. J. M. Cane is one of the officers who has returned from the front on a three months' leave of absence. He is suffering from shell shock, his voice particularly being affected. He sailed from England about the 5th of May on the Missanabie.

"Jimmie," who is a former newspaper man, refrains from saying much about his experiences but he has a good word to say about the hospital accommodation in both France and England.

"One thing about the boys is that they are sure of winning."

In England Lt. Cane was confined in the hospital at Bromley, which was formerly a manor house and is now a Canadian convalescent home, in which there are about 250 convalescents. It is in charge of Capt. McPherson, of past football fame in Toronto.

It is just thirty-one years ago this month since Lt. Cane's father, Mr. J. G. Cane, was wounded in the Northwest Rebellion.

A good dessert is made with bananas put through the potato ricer and sliced orange and pineapple added.

When making tomato or asparagus soup a few grains of baking soda should be added to the cooked vegetables.

The Famous Tango Chorus from the popular LaSalle Opera House (Chicago). Coming to this City in the Big Dancing Festival "SEPTEMBER MORN" at the Grand Opera House, next Saturday. Matinee and Night, May 20th.

(From the Ottawa Free Press)

It would be hard to find on the road a jollier, merrier musical show than "September Morn." There is not a dull moment in it from beginning to end. There are few musical comedies that even claim to contain any really original features. "September Morn" is packed with them. There are original settings for songs, original dances, original choruses and, perhaps most striking of all, original "curtains" that will long be remembered.

The production has been altered in some particulars since its last visit here. Every alteration is an improvement. The costumes have been kept up to date. All the best features that were in the production that came to Ottawa in 1914 have been retained, and many new ones put in, so that nothing has been allowed to get stale.

There was a large audience last night, probably the result of the good reputation "September Morn" gained from its last visit. It was like meeting a good old friend to hear again such catchy songs as "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," "Where is the Pleasure in Wine and Song?" "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming" and that rattling chorus "Oh you September Morn."

The company could not have been better chosen. Ruth Wilkins as Argentina, John Patton as Willie Ruhlem, William Adams as Rudolph Plastric, Margaret Owens as Louise Storm and Maud Williams as Mrs. Storm were outstandingly good, mainly because they had more to do than the rest of the company.

The chorus, well-drilled and neat, carried the piece along with a swing and even the male quartette added to the jollity, which is something unusual. One would think a male quartette would be out of place in a musical comedy, yet every American show of this class has to have one. "September Morn" is much brighter than most American musical comedies, and it is probably as a concession to convention that this feature has been retained.

HYDRO'S HARD-WON CONCESSION KILLED BY SENATE COMMITTEE

Minister of Railways, and Not the Railway Commission, Given Authority to Decide—C.N.R. Extensions Granted

OTTAWA, Ont., May 17.—Despite the valiant fight which was put up by the Hydro radial interests against the Mackenzie and Mann crowd, concerning railway charters in Western Ontario, the corporations, after all, are apparently going to win out.

In the Senate Railway Committee yesterday morning both the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto and the Toronto, Niagara, and Western Railway time extension bills were passed, while the Government bill amending the Railway Act and designed to overcome the Hydro radial's objections was allowed to stand. The committee adjourned "at the call of the chair." As prorogation occurs to-day, or at the latest, to-morrow, there is not the remotest chance of the bill being taken up again, and if it possibly should be, it has been completely re-drafted and its whole sense changed so as to give the Government and not the Railway Board the final say in the location of a road.

All Effort Wasted.

All the efforts which have been put forth by Sir Adam Beck and the Hydro Radial Union consequently count for nothing. Mackenzie and Mann get time extension for lines which are fatal to the Hydro radial proposition, while the safeguard to have been provided in the amendment to the Railway Act, making the Railway Commission the arbiter, is removed.

Failing in the Commons, the corporate interests directed their attention to the Senate, and they have triumphed. The Niagara and St. Catharines bill went through the other day, and yesterday morning the Toronto, Niagara and Western passed.

Stood by Minister.

Instructions had been given for a re-draft of the Government bill which, as stated, gave the Railway Commission the authority of determining whether or not a road should be constructed and, if so, fixing the location of it. The Senate Railway Committee took the ground that the Minister of Railways should have the last say, and the amendment was re-drafted to provide that before any railway company comes to Parliament for authority to construct or operate a road it must secure the approval of the Railway Commission.

As to roads already authorized, such as the lines in Western Ontario, it is proposed that the present Act stand as it is as regards the approval of plans by the Minister.

The corporations always have relied upon the Senate, and their confidence has not been misplaced. Ontario members expect intense indignation, but apparently are helpless.

"MUTT AND JEFF."

"Mutt and Jeff," the old favourites, created by Bud Fisher, and put on the stage by Gus Hill, returned to the Grand Opera House last night, and were greeted by one of the largest audiences of the year, a capacity house, in which the khaki of the 93rd Battalion was much in evidence. "Mutt and Jeff in College" was the title of the musical comedy, and the action gave plenty of opportunities for the famous cartoon heroes to get in their laugh-making work, with the result that there were very few dull moments. The two comedians were assisted by a large cast, including a large chorus, and the musical numbers were pretty, the ensemble

WET WEATHER HINDERS FARMERS IN PETERBORO' COUNTY

Few of Them Will Have Their Spring Seeding Completed Before May 24th Unless Weather Takes a Sudden and Favourable Turn—Rainfall For the First Half of the Month

A WET MONTH

Farmers in Peterborough County are beginning to wonder if the twenty-fourth of May will see the completion of the spring seeding. Unless the weather takes a sudden change for the better and maintains that attitude throughout the remainder of the month, few farmers will have their spring seeding finished before the end of May. Fall wheat, rye and hay crops are suffering little if any from the prolonged wet spell. All of these crops are shooting up at a rapid rate, and if present indications count for anything the hay crop especially, should be fairly good.

A Wet Month.

According to the Weather Man the first half of the present month has been abnormally wet, in fact, in ten years there has not been its equal in this respect. But taking the spring as a whole he admits that he has seen wetter ones. In the last six weeks 5.08 inches of rain have fallen. This compares with 2.11 inches for the same period last year, but in 1910 4.10 inches fell in April alone, and 3.48 inches in April, 1913. Nothing in ten years is recorded to equal the amount of rain during the first half of the present month. To date, May 15th, the rainfall for may, 1916, is 1.99 inches.

For the same period last year it was .80 inches only. July is usually the wettest month in the year and the average for that month over a longer period is 2.99 inches.

Alderson Finds Fault With Rifle

officers there, could have failed to notice these important points."

Another Count Against the Ross.

Gen. Alderson than refers to a statement by writer of a certain letter that the classes of ammunition in question have "again in some mysterious way" found their way to the Canadian trenches. "That, too, is against the Ross," General Alderson continues. "Moreover, it emphasizes what we have been told officially, viz., that while we are stationary it will be possible to keep this ammunition away from the units armed with the Ross, but that when we get on the move it may not be possible."

Gen. Alderson says he has not heard of any "more or less organized attempt to discredit the Ross rifle," and if he did would stop it. "What I shall not stop, however," he concludes, "is a boomerang report against the Ross rifle should it come in after any future serious action that any part of the corps may take part in. I should not be fit for my position if I passed over everything which endangered men's lives or the success of our arms."

SILVER ANNIVERSARY OF CHARLOTTE ST. W. M. S.

Yesterday afternoon was the occasion of the silver anniversary of the Charlotte street W.M.S. Despite the inclement weather, many ladies accepted the invitation to attend.

Mrs. J. K. Moore entertained the audience with interesting reminiscences. This Society was organized in 1891 by Mrs. Jas. Kendry with eight members enrolled. To-day the society is glad to report a membership of eighty-seven with twenty" life members. Upon Mrs. Moore, as district organizer was conferred the honour of changing the name from Charlotte street to Trinity Auixliary.

Mrs. Kendry delivered an interesting and inspiring address, referring to the obstacles that have been overcome, the wonderful work of the Bible women of Japan who, as a result of Christianization, have been able to publish the glad tidings to their own people, and the particular necessity of medical work among women by women.

Thirty-five thousand five hundred dollars was the income of the branches for the first year, compared with one hundred and ninety thousand nine hundred and forty-three in 1916.

Mrs. A. B. Campbell brought a message of encouragement.

The programme was interspersed with musical numbers contributed by Meedames Widdess, Middleton and Cameron Wilson.

One delightful feature of the afternoon was the birthday cake and its silver trimmings and twenty-five lighted candles, which was carried into the tea room by Mrs. Dawson Kennedy. Mrs. Isaac Richardson, one of the charter members, placed the knife in the cake, while Mrs. Madden, the only charter member now in Peterborough, presided at the tea urn.

Our esteemed treasurer, Mrs. Allum, shows in her report for the year in increase over last year of $138.34.

Income from Auxiliary	$ 314.16
Income from Mission Circle	85.00

Young People of St. Andrew's

The Young People of St. Andrew's Church attended a tennis tea in the Lecture Hall last evening, about 30 being present, and a very enjoyable time spent. St. Andrew's Tennis Club is looking forward to a very satisfactory year. With the courts enlarged and improved, and the experiences of previous years to profit by, the coming season is looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure.

The Young People's Societies of St. Andrew's Church are the recipients from Mrs. H. Waddell of a handsomely framed picture of the fleet that took the First Contingent overseas. It has been hung in the Lecture Room of the church, and is interesting to St. Andrew's as well as to all other churches of the city, from the fact that many Peterborough boys were represented.

CROP PROSPECTS NOT YET HOPELESS

The work of seeding in Ontario had been greatly delayed by unfavorable weather. There is, however, as Hon. Mr. Duff says in the crop report given on occasion for pessimism. The season of 1887 was on all fours with this, and still the harvest from the spring seeding of that year was above the normal. Moreover, fall wheat was a failure in 1887, while this year it promises well. In addition to this, fruit prospects—and the returns from orchards, vineyards, and small fruits are yearly becoming of greater importance—could not well be brighter than they are. Taking everything together, there is much more reason for encouragement than there is for discouragement than there is for discourage-

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—For the betterment of the people of the northern townships to run a Hydro-Electric road from Lakefield up to the east end of Stoney Lake, through Dummer Township, then by Jack's Lake to Apsley, thence to Gooderham on the C.N.R., in Haliburton County Bridge building would be light.

The road would get all the tourist trade of Jack's Lake, Koshinabog, and Loon. All these lakes have good fishing, and would be close to it, besides millions of feet of lumber would be cut and landed on the track from small mills on both sides, with thousands of cords of wood, both cordwood and pulp. If the matter was taken up by men in a position to do so, the timber would be found to be here.

For ranching, it is wrong to say that cattle will hurt natural re-foresting, as the country is being reforested from seeds from the parent trees, and the timber being pine, hemlock, spruce, balsam and poplar, is of such a nature that cattle will not eat it.

HARD WORK BLAMED.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17. — The rush of modern life has produced a new disease, greatly increasing in extent and especially prevalent among doctors, teachers, clergymen, editors and other men of affairs.

Dr. Oliver S. Haines, who announced the new ailment at the Hahnemann medical college, where homeopathic physicians met, calls it "angina of effort." In plain English, that means a sudden shooting pain under your breastbone because you're working too hard. No connection with spring fever was hinted at. It comes from having lived too hard and sometimes from an "antagonistic attitude toward the problems of life." No happy-go-lucky ever gets it.

S. H. ARMSTRONG DIED YESTERDAY

Identified 20 Years With Muskoka, Local and Provincial Affairs —Resided in Peterborough

BRACEBRIDGE, May 16. — The death occurred at 6 o'clock yesterday morning of Samuel Henry Armstrong, M.P.P. for Muskoka, aged sixty-one years. He had been driving Sunday afternoon, and returned home shortly after 4. Without warning he was stricken with apoplexy, which paralysed his left side. He did not regain consciousness. Mr. Armstrong had a previous slight attack last fall, since when he had not enjoyed his usual health, though able to attend the session and conduct his business affairs. He leaves a widow, one daughter, Doris, and three sons, George of North Bay, Dalton at home, and Lieut. Roy C., of A Company, 122nd Battalion, C.E.F., Huntsville. The funeral took place this afternoon, with service at St. Thomas' Anglican church, at 3.30.

Mr. Armstrong was born April 9th, 1855, at Bonna Home, Enniskillen. He came to Canada when seventeen years of age, living for a short time at Peterborough. Afterwards he moved to Bracebridge, where he since resided, and engaged principally in cattle dealing and farming. He owned a fine farm property just outside of the town. He always took a keen interest in municipal affairs, and politics, and devoted a great deal of time in the interests of the town and district. He was the first Mayor of Bracebridge, in 1869. He was also a member of the County Council when Muskoka was part of Victoria for municipal purposes, and for twenty years or more served in the local council. He was for several years president of the District Conservative Association, and on October 18th, 1912, was elected to the Ontario Legislature by acclamation in the bye-election occasioned by the appointment of Arthur A. Mahaffy as Judge of Muskoka, and in the general election January 29th, 1914, was again returned by over eight hundred majority.

Mr. Ed. Elliott, County Treasurer and Mr. George Elliott, both of this city, are relatives.

Excluded Witness Said He Looked But Did Not Listen Through Doors to Court Room

Hearing of Garnsey Case Concluded Yesterday—Mr. O'Connell Said Mrs. Samson's Interests Had Cost Him Personally $133—Mr. McAvoy Apparently Had a Busy Summer.

ALLEGED BLINDNESS OF THE HORSES QUESTIONED

To Mr. S. T. Wedlock's declaration that he never wanted anything more to do with the Garnsey's and Hill's Mr. Daniel O'Connell added yesterday afternoon a fervent amen.

As agent for Mr. Ira A. Humphries of Campbellford, counsel for Mrs Clarissa Samson, Mr. O'Connell said that the seizures under her chattel mortgage had cost him self $133. Even the $2.15, the net proceeds from the mortgage sales according to the balance sheet, he had not seen.

At the conclusion of the hearing yesterday afternoon Mr. O'Connell who in this action has been defending Mr. S. T. Wedlock, proposed the unusual procedure of going into the witness box. Judge Huycke did not think this step necessary. Mr. O'Connell thereupon from his position at the bar sketched an explanatory review of his connection with the chattel mortgage from the time Mr. Humphries engaged him until Mrs. Samson refused to pay Spenceley Bros.' bill for $60 representing the Board of Garnsey's black team from the middle of September until the end of October. Evidently that was the last of many exasperating straws that broke Mr. O'Connell's patience and he washed his hands of Mrs Samson's mortgage but not until he had paid out of his own pocket $133 for one expense or another.

Expenses seemed to crop indigenously out of that chattel mortgage and the end is not yet.

Not a Relative, But—

Several little incidents flashed up toward the close of the hearing Tuesday, last sputtering sparks to a legal ember that had flamed merrily at times. Leamon Garnsey in his examination in chief strongly denied kinship to his co-plaintiff Miss Catherine Hill who in the case had figured in the roll of purchaser of Garnsey's grain. Recalled by his counsel Mr. O. A. Langley yesterday he repeated, under cross-examination by Mr. F. D. Kerr who represented the defendant W. J. Hancock, that Miss Hill was no relation of his.

"You didn't tell us" said Mr. Kerr "that she is your son-in-law's sister?"

"Well, she's no relation to me" replied Garnsey.

"You kept that fact back from us" pursued Mr. Kerr.

"What do you mean?" witness parried.

Looked But Didn't Listen.

The other flare-up was provided by Mr. O'Connell in cross-examining witness named Hebdon who was also recalled by Mr. Langley. While Garnsey was on the stand the first day of the hearing Judge Huycke called attention to the swing doors beyond which the witnesses had been excluded, remarking that one of the witnesses appeared to be holding them apart Mr. Kerr walked over and, pushing them open, evidently found Hebdon there. Nothing further was said of the incident at that time.

Cross-examined by Mr. O'Connell yesterday, Hebdon admitted that he had held the swing doors apart but denied that it was for the purpose of hearing the evidence.

"You knew you were excluded from the court room declared Mr. O'Connell "and yet you listened at that door when Garnsey was giving his evidence and then you came into the box and gave evidence for him"

Hebdon denied that he had listened. He stood there only to see who was in the box. The witness Hill was beside him. Hebdon persisted in his explanation of the incident to which Judge Huycke had observed that apparently witnesses for one side or the other were listening to the evidence.

Mr. McAvoy's Evidence.

The other side of the average story is generally illuminating and in this case the defence presented a somewhat different interpretation of the main points in the plaintiffs' case. One of the principal objects of the former was to show that there had been no abandonment of the chattel mortgage at any time.

Mr. Bert McAvoy of Mr. O'Connell's office in his evidence reviewed the series of events that grew out of the mortgage Mrs. Samson held on Garnsey's chattels.

He instructed Deputy Sheriff Hall to make a seizure under the "feri facias" from the decision in the Garnsey vs. Samson rent action. Mr. Hall returned with the information that Mrs. Garnsey claimed the scheduled chattels. Witness then gave the Sheriff the mortgage against Garnsey which Mrs. Samson bought from Mr. Turner of Campbellford. This seizure was made and the mortgage sale was being arranged, but negotiations were opened for a settlement by Mr. A. N. Gordon, who was one of the lawyers who at one time or another had been solicitors for Garnsey. Mr. Gordon requested a few days for the parties to get together. He presented a new chattel mortgage covering the amount of the judgment and the sale was not proceeded with. But the new mortgage was later refused because Mrs. Garnsey was not a party to it. This mortgage by the way was exhibit 4a. Mr. Sherry's sheaf of exhibits received another addition, No. 10 being a mortgage with Mrs. Garnsey's name affixed to it.

This satisfied Mrs. Samson, and when everything seemed "jake" for a settlement Mr. Garnsey kicked the traces and withdrew deciding not to settle. And it was stated that it had not been an easy matter to reduce Mrs. Samson to an amenable mood.

The day following Garnsey's rejection of Mrs. Samson's offer, Mr. McAvoy told the Sheriff to sell the horses seized. That was the $60 sale on the market. Then came the Belmont incident following which the Sheriff went to Garnsey's to sell the chattels originally seized under the mortgage, but unsold on account of the settlement parleys. But the Sheriff was chased on this occasion and refused to go back.

Mr. McAvoy then engaged Mr. La Plante, who returned from Garnsey's with the information that they would come in to settle.

When there were no signs of the Garnseys coming in, Mr. Hancock and the city detectives essayed an expedition Garnseyward. It produced the black team, and Mr. Wedlock followed a few days later for the grain. That was the last time the bailiff went out under Mr. McAvoy's instructions.

At no time was there an abandonment of the Sheriff's first seizure. Added to the exasperating difficulties attendant upon the multiplying duties was the fact that a succession of bailiffs were necessitated by other engagements preventing them from following up their work. Hence Mr. Hall gave way to Mr. LaPlante who was succeeded in turn by Mr. Hancock and Mr. Wedlock.

Judge Huycke remarked that there must have been no time for summer holidays in Mr. O'Connell's office in 1915.

Mr. McAvoy resumed his story by enumerating the difficulties that came into town with the black team, the barley and the oats.

First Mr. Langley issued a writ causing a postponement of the first advertised sale. An order had to be obtained from Judge Huycke for the sale of the goods. New bills were posted through the country and all was set for a sale on October 30.

Right there Mr. Spenceley presented a bill for the black team's board and refused to part with them until it was paid. No horses, of course, no sale. Then Mrs. Samson, for whose mortgage they had been seized, refused to pay the bill. At that point Mr. O'Connell had had enough as Mrs. Samson's solicitor through Mr. Humphries of Campbellford. Mr. Spenceley said he regarded Mr. O'Connell as responsible for the horses since he had sent them to the barn, and Mr. O'Connell recognizing his claim, paid the bill, the team and grain reverting to Garnsey and Miss Hill.

Garnsey Recalled.

Recalled by Mr. Langley, Garnsey denied Mr. Wedlock's story of an agreement regarding the grain. He explained the nutless axles of his convertible hay waggon by saying he had heard Mr. Samson proposed to come and take the waggon. In order that it would not disappear while Garnsey might be absent from the farm, he had removed the nuts as an effective precaution.

To Mr. O'Connell he said he had not paid any of the debt to Mrs. Samson, and wouldn't do so until she had returned the goods she had seized from the Belmont farm.

Alleged Blindness.

Robert Conkey, hostler at the Munro stables testified that the gray and roan team had been well cared for and they did not appear to him as if they were blind. The stable was well lighted. There was a 12-inch by 18-inch window in front of each horse.

Mr. John Frost, blacksmith for the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer said he saw young Hill dig Samson's grain bags out of the mow.

Mr. A. Barbeau.

Mr. Archie Barbeau, secretary-treasurer of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer, said the grain had been stored in the building opposite the Ackerman factory and had been kept in first class condition.

Continuing, he said—"One day I met Garnsey at the corner of Hunter and George streets. I said I was sorry we had anything to do with him. Garnsey replied that as far as Mr. Wedlock was concerned nothing would be done to him. Garnsey said Mr. Wedlock acted as a gentleman toward him and took only what he let him have."

Mr. Hancock Recalled.

On being recalled Mr. Hancock said he had observed the eyes of the gray and roan team the day of their sale. There was a white mark on one eye of one of the team, which indicated that that eye had been blind for some time. The other eye looked good. The other horse's eyes looked dim and were watery. Witness attributed this to stable blindness which he thought would be only a temporary condition. Stable blindness was a temporary fever of the eye.

Mr. Hancock said he was a graduate of a school for auctioneers at which he had studied farm stock and stable blindness. He was satisfied that day that the dimness of the eyes in question would not be permanent. It was caused by the horse coming out into the bright sunlight after its stable confinement. It might pass off in a day or two.

Five Factories Refused 18 3-4c. For First Cheese

Mr. Robert Duff is President for Another Year—Patrons to Reimburse Makers for Increased Cost of Rennet—Account of Expenditure of Patriotic Money.

FIRST SALE THIS MORNING

ONE YEAR AGO
CHEESE OPENING.
1120 Boxes Boarded.
Top Price, 18 3-4c.
5 Factories Refused to Sell.
1042 Boxes Sold at 18 3-8 Cents.

Only two buyers attended the opening meeting of the Cheese Board this morning, Mr. Thompson and Mr. G. A. Gillespie. The top price offered was 18 3-4 cents, which was accepted by all but the Warminster, Shearer, Villiers, Ormonde and Lang factories Of those that sold Mr. Thompson secured Warsaw and Selwyn. Mr. Gillespie who had first call bought the remainder. Most of the salesmen apparently expected 19 cents.

Mr. Coughlin, of Hastings, salesman for Ormonde factory, said that the practice of buyers buying more than they required and then selling to other buyers should be discontinued. He understood that this had grown into something of a custom. He had also noticed buyers winking across the Board.

Mr. Gillespie replied more warmly than is his wont. He denied that there was any collusion among buyers as to prices. It had happened that a buyer would, through force of circumstances have more cheese than he needed for his order and would resell, but there was no prearrangement as to prices. Mr. Gillespie said he could name boards at whose sales every buyer knew before hand what the other buyers intended to pay. He had bought on the Peterborough Board ten years and there had not been a single instance of that kind of work or of price fixing of any kind. Mr. Gillespie asserted that the salesmen on the Peterborough Board could find nothing to complain of in the conduct of the buyers.

Mr. Coughlin replied that he did not think there was any price fixing, but he did not think there should be any reselling. He did not question the conduct of the buyers of the Peterborough Board but merely wished to register an objection to the reported resales.

Secretary-Treasurer Ed. Hawthorne reported a credit balance of $2.36.

After a brief discussion a grant of $10 for cheese prize money was made to the East and West Peterborough Agricultural Exhibitions.

Mr. Hawthorne said it was desirable to recognize the cheese prizes. It was a good thing to have these prizes on the lists of the East and West Peterborough Fair.

Mr. Coughlin had suggested that the grant might be reduced to $5.

It was later proposed to increase the factory membership fee from $1 to $1.50.

Patriotic Fund.

Mr. Hawthorne reported that $1550 had been distributed throughout the county during the past year for patriotic work. On May 19th, 1915, the Board's Patriotic Fund had a balance of $1,028.37. The total receipts of the year totalled $1,806.01, and there remains in the bank $258.01 plus interest.

Mr. Hawthorne reported in detail to what Red Cross Societies the money had been given, and Mr. W. C. Switzer accounted for the distribution among the lety societies. The latter paid a compliment to Mr. Hawthorne for his interest and efforts in behalf of the fund. He had also supplied the necessary postage and was deserving of a hearty vote of thanks

Mr. Hawthorne replied that he was only trying to do his bit and had done it freely and heartily.

The Patriotic Fund report was adopted.

Mr. J. R. Boate was introduced by Mr. Switzer as the new salesman and secretary-treasurer of East Emily factory. Mr. Switzer said he had resigned from the position because of the demands of his other affairs, but he felt sure Mr. Boate would make a valuable member of the Board.

Chairman Duff welcomed Mr. Boate but remarked that the members were sorry to lose Mr. Switzer who, he said, was one of the best men on the Board.

Protect Cheese Makers.

Referring to the scarcity and high price of rennet, which is supplied by the cheese makers, Mr. Gillespie said that the patrons should take steps to protect the makers against loss as the result of the increased prices.

Mr. Duff reported that Selwyn had decided to give their maker what he asked.

Mr. Bullock of Warminster factory, said they had agreed to pay half the extra cost and Mr. Mann said that Trewern patrons had raised the price of manufacture.

Officers Re-elected.

The officers were re-elected en bloc as follows:

President—Robert Duff, Selwyn.
1st Vice-Pres.—J. J. Breckenridge, Westwood.
2nd Vice-Pres.—G. W. Mann, Trewern.
Sec.-Treas.—Ed. Hawthorne, Warsaw.
Auditors—W. A. Anderson, Keene, and J. W. Hunter, Pine Grove.

Mr. Gillespie opened the bidding at 18 cents and ran it up against Mr. Thompson to 18 3-4 cents.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hawthorne, 18 Morris Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

Silver is King

This year Silver is King, and is advancing by leaps and bounds—no man dare say what the ultimate price will be. Last summer silver was worth 46½ cents per ounce — to-day it is 74 cents and going higher every week.

The advance in copper last year caused a sensational market in copper shares, many low priced copper stocks advanced more than 1,000 per cent.

That was last year, this year it is Silver and now is the opportune moment to purchase high-class silver stocks.

We have underwritten 250,000 shares of Lorrain Consolidated Mines, Ltd., at 20 cents per share net to the Treasury of the Company, and are now allotting these shares to our clients at 22 cents.

The fact that we have underwritten this large block of treasury stock, thereby guaranteeing the Company $50,000 for development purposes, is the best evidence of our sincere belief in the future of the Company.

Lorrain Consolidated has, in our opinion, the three necessary elements of a successful mine. The Company owns outright, 53 acres in the South Lorrain-Cobalt silver district on which engineers have located four large and six smaller veins. $40,000 has already been spent in proving up the property and two shafts have been sunk, one 162 feet, and the other 110 feet. Drifting and cross cutting to the extent of several hundred feet has also been done.

The management of Lorrain Consolidated is in the hands of men whose names stand for everything that is honorable in mining.

Men of this character do not associate themselves with a mine unless they are fully convinced of its merit, and we never underwrite a stock until we are satisfied it has a good chance of making good.

This Company has a well located property, an honest and efficient management, and ample capital for development. We, therefore, feel justified in recommending the purchase of the stock.

Application will be made for listing the shares in Toronto, Boston and New York.

Reports of development work to date and extracts of engineer's statements will be furnished free on application.

His Walk in Life.—Much mystified Private Pipeclay had been summoned to appear before his commanding officer. With all due formality, he was marched into the august presence, wondering what was going to happen to him. "Private Pipeclay," said the colonel sharply, "I have received a letter from your father; he wishes to obtain your discharge to assist him in his business, if possible. Now, what is your father's walk in life?" Pipeclay stared wildly round, not understanding in the least what was meant. Then slowly a grin of comprehension spread over the broad features, and he replied: "He's rather bandy, sir!"

A Broad Minded Churchman.—In going to public houses and playing cards with men so that he may get to know them, Canon Carey Tupper, of York, is following his usual plan of getting right in among his male parishioners. When he was vicar of Lowestoft he knew nearly all the fishermen and, clad in oilskins, made several trips to Lerwick, in the Shetlands, in a steam drifter. He relates how, when a man in Leeds expressed surprise at seeing him in a public house, he said:—"Why should I not come here? I have not made a beast of myself." "Well," replied the man "You haven't so far."

The non-coms of the 93rd Battalion who attended the school at Montreal are hard at work instructing the men in the new physical culture work and bayonet fighting. The physical training stunts are varied and interesting, and the men are taking to them heartily, enjoying the change from the monotony of platoon and company drill.

Sergt. Cook Wilde had his new travelling kitchen in to-day's march out, with a full head of steam on. The big kitchen attracted a lot of attention, especially with the good looking cooks in charge.

The Roy Studio will take a panoramic photograph of the entire 93rd Battalion on Friday morning at Central Park. This notice will give members of the battalion, who may happen to be on leave, a chance to be photographed with the battalion.

Sergt. Gower of No. 11 Platoon C Company 93rd Battalion was the recipient of a very handsome gold-headed cane and a fountain pen from the men of the platoon yesterday afternoon. The presentation is an indication of the good feeling existing between the non-coms and men of the 93rd.

The Kingston Standard says: There will be three-quarters of a million dollars each month put into the pockets of Kingston merchants and citizens through having Barriefield camp of over 10,000 soldiers during he summer months. This money finds its way indirectly to every person in the community, and people should not forget this fact when speaking of barriefield camp and its advantages to the city. In plain language the effect is immense The expense of maintaining the battalions in Military District No. 3 now averages about $900,000 a month now. Recruits are coming in every day to the different units and within a month after the camp opens each of the battalions to expected to be up to full strength of 1,153 men. The addition of the 1,500 men needed to bring these battalions up to strength will certainly boost the total expenditure up to the six zero mark. A very conservative estimate would be that three-quarters of this amount is re-spent in the city in filling the needs and luxuries of the khaki-clad boys.

A rumor on the streets of Ottawa was to the effect that certain battalions in Canada would soon be broken up and divided into reinforcements for either battalions which had been successful in recruiting a reasonable number of men in the time allotted Inquiries show that this would certainly not apply to Military District No. 3. The battalions in this district all total well over 900 men and most of them have reached the 1,000 mark, under which the circumstances can only be highly satisfactory to the powers that be. If other parts of Canada have not done their part, this district certainly has This is shown by he results present ed every two weeks to the country in which Military District No. 3 always comes at the top or near the top of the list.

From information obtained in registering soldiers with the Second Division Athletic Association, it is announced that 2,625 men wish to play lacrosse, 10,243 will compete in various track and field events, and 16,258 baseball players, and 16,734 soccer players desire to play these games in which competitions will be started once the troops are settled in the summer camps.

The plans of the association call for the formation of athletic clubs in each battalion, controlled and officered by the men, no matter what their rank, who would play in the sports scheduled by the parent association, with no military red tape about them.

If it be borne in mind that these figures concern one military district alone, truly the figures for all Canada, if they were obtainable, would prove gratifying to lovers of sport everywhere. They would surely uphold the contention of sportsmen in this country, that our national pastimes are worthy of all praise as a means of developing Canadian manhood.

BERLIN, Ont., May 16.—Mayor Hett accepted full responsibility at City Council last night for having sent a request to Ottawa for an investigation into the 118th Battalion. The officer commanding the 118th told Council he was glad that officers had paid a visit to Berlin, for General Hodgins had complimented and commended the 118th stating that the number of Canadian-born in this battalion was larger than in any other battalion in Canada and on account of the medical fitness of the men they were likely to be sent overseas at a much earlier date than some other battalions.

The following resolution was carried on motion of Ald Rudell and Hallman: That this Council disapproves of the Mayor's action in not taking the Council into his confidence in connection with the alleged investigation into rumors circulated throughout the city, thereby placing in disgrace the 118th Battalion.

It was also decided to give the 118th Battalion a suitable farewell by declaring a holiday and presenting each Berlin man with a ten-dollar gold piece; also, if the weather is fine, to take moving photographs of the event.

Mrs. J. W. Edwards, whose son, Corp. Herb. Edwards recently died of wounds, has received the following letter sent to her husband, Pioneer Sergt. Edwards of the 20th Battalion by Lt.-Col. J. Edwards, commanding officer of the unit in which the young soldier was attached at the front:

Dear Edwards,—I was surprised to find that very fine son of yours among my reinforcements, and knowing his ability I had him promoted. He soon won the confidence of the officers whom I placed him under, and they congratulated me on my choice of a N.C.O. You can imagine my regret on hearing that the boy had been hit while on duty. Oh, but I was as proud of his conduct as if he had been of my own family. He proved himself every inch a man. I waited some time to hear the extent of his injuries before writing to you, so you can judge my shock and sorrow on hearing that he had succumbed to his injuries. Of course my loss is nothing compared to your great bereavement and to say that you have my sincere sympathy is but tamely expressing my feeling towards you in your sorrow.

There is one consolation only I can offer and that is, I am perfectly willing to go the way he went if I can make half the showing he made. All his comrades send you and Mrs. Edwards their sympathy.

Sincerely yours and, with you in your great trial, remain,

J. Edwards.

Mrs. Wm. Hicks, Smith street, wife of Pte. Wm. Hicks of the 93rd Battalion has received a typewritten letter from her brother, who is blind He now resides at Cardiff and was for twenty years in the British Navy He had one eye so severely burned that the sight of both eyes was ruined. He offered his services to Lord Kitchener at the beginning of the war, as a steographer, but was gracefully refused.

The letter is as follows:

135 City Road Cardiff,
South Wales, 18-4-16.

Dear Sister,—I have not written written before, because I have been negotiating to sell my business here so as to get into a private House before William came to Cardiff, so as to be able to give him every attention, and thus make him as comfortable as possible, during his stay with us if we shift from the above address when he arrives in Cardiff, tell him to go to the General Post Office in Westgate street as I will leave our address where we are living at the General Post Office. If he should leave Canada, before I write again, I will write as soon as we are settled. You must take such a serious view of the war, as to think that nobody is coming back again if everybody looked at it that way, we should not get so many volunteers, if William does not return alive then you must rest contented, and feel proud of him with his memory sacred in your heart knowing that he did not fail to face even death at the call of his duty and that he had finished his mission on this Earth where his God had placed him trying to fit himself for the everlasting Mansion, which his saviour had gone and prepared for him, if I had my sight, I should be at the present time serving my Country in the Navy, having had twenty years ploughing the seas, I offered my services to Lord Kitchener, at the out break of the war, for the Army or Navy, as a typewriter, but Lord Kitchener, thanked me and refused me.

Our papers are full of the praise for the Canadian's bravery and some of the leading men of the Government has made it their business to be present and shake hands personally with them and recognise them for their bravery, and most of the independant gentlemen who are too old to join have made it their whole study to make all the Colonists as comfortable as possible during the time they are staying in the Country, whether on leaf or waiting to return to their homes But if William does not return to you, you are certain you will be welcome but you must make yourself contented and feel pretty sure he will return as he will be only one of the millions who are taking the risk.

You must be a soldier's wife now as you have done your duty as a farmer's wife, Surely you will not get fainthearted. I am sending you this week's Lloyd's paper. From your loving brother, sister, neice and nephew.

R. J. & E. BOWHEY

Monday evening the adult members of All Saints choir and their friends, to the number of about 30, assembled at Coleman's Parlours to do honour to four of their members who are leaving with the 93rd Battalion, viz.: Corp. G. Melton, Corp. D. Melton, Corp. G. East and Pte. W. Fuller. The Rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, thanked the men for the useful service they had rendered the church by their faithful attendance at the services and thanked the choir in a body for the efficient way in which the musical portion of the service was rendered.

The refreshments were all that could be desired and songs, games, etc., brought a splendid, enjoyable evening to a close. This makes seven men that have volunteered for overseas service from the ranks of All Saints' choir.

INVENTOR OF LEWIS GUN RETURNS HOME

Colonel I. N. Lewis, U. S. A., retired, the inventor of the machine gun, which is said to be in general use by the Allies and of another gun which is employed by the French aviators, arrived in New York the other day on board the steamship Philadelphia of the American line. With him were Mrs. Lewis and their daughters, Miss Laura and Miss Margaret Lewis.

Colonel Lewis said his relations with the Allied Powers were of so intimate a nature that he preferred not to speak about any matters relating to the war. He went abroad with his family soon after his retirement three years ago.

Samuel Hill, who is known as "the apostle of good roads," was also a passenger, finishing up a round trip of a most remarkable nature.

On the arrival of the vessel at Liverpool Mr. Hill was the only passenger allowed to go ashore, it being late at night. He immediately hurried over to Amiens. His object was to obtain an interview with King Albert. What the purpose of the interview was Mr. Hill would not say. It is believed, however, to have reference to the upbuilding of Belgium after the war.

At Amiens Mr. Hill got into an automobile marked "S. M." which sped him along for several hours at the rate of seventy miles an hour. At last he reached the place where the King and Queen were stopping. Mr. Hill was closeted with the King for three hours. The following morning he reached the Belgian front, where he met the King and Queen again and took their pictures. At nine o'clock the same morning he was in Boulogne and by noon he had reached the British lines and interviewed the officers. Folkestone was his next point and thence London. From there he made a hasty dash to Scotland, where he was afforded an opportunity to view the British fleet. He reached Liverpool in time to go on board the Philadelphia just as she was ready to steam on her return trip to America.

A table of weights and measures, typewritten and frame under glass, should be hung in every kitchen.

Making Success In Dye Business

Mr. R. R. Hall has just returned from a business trip to Boston. While he was there he was entertained by Mr. Carl Waldinger, a son-in-law of the late R. S. Davidson, at the Engineers' Club, which is located opposite the Boston Gardens.

The many friends of Mr. Waldinger in Peterborough will be pleased to know that he has made a marked success of the dye business in which he has been engaged on his own account during this last four years. He was an expert chemist, and had a thorough knowledge of the manufacturing of dyes, and hence he was splendidly equipped to take advantage of the shutting out of German dye stuffs from the United States.

In addition to having a large stock of dye stuffs on hand at the time that the war broke out, he was one of the few men in the United States who had a thorough knowledge of the manufacturing of dye stuffs. It no doubt will be a surprise to many parties to know that some lines of dye stuffs cost now three or four times as much as they did before the outbreak of the war.

Funeral of the Late Capt. Kylie

LINDSAY, May 17. — The largest funeral in the history of this town was that this morning of Captain Edward Kylie, Adjutant 147th Battalion and formerly Associate Professor of History in Toronto University. Full military honours were given and the town ceased business during the entire morning. In the funeral oration, Monsignor Casey said of the dead Scholar-Soldier-Imperialist, "Edward Kylie's memory will be green forever."

The pall-bearers were selected from the officers staff of the 147th Battalion at Owen Sound, while the firing squad were chosen from the 109th Battalion, stationed at Lindsay. A special C.P.R. train from Toronto brought many representatives of the University C.O.T.C. and other associations with which the deceased was connected. President Falconer and many members of the faculty represented the University while the Canadian Officers' Training Corps were represented by Major H. D. Lyons, Major Vincent Massey, Captain Wallace and Captain C. R. Young. The Delta Upsilon Society also sent a delegation.

The funeral proceeded from the house to St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, where solemn requiem mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, of Peterborough, assisted by the following clergy, who took the parts of Deacon, Subdeacons, etc.: Rt. Rev. Mons Casey and Father Ferguson, of Lindsay; Rev. Dean McColl, of Peterborough; Rev. Father Guiry, of Kinmount, and others.

The floral tributes included a large wheel with one spoke missing from the officers of the 147th Battalion, Owen Sound, a magnificent sheaf of roses, fully four feet long, tied with the Toronto University colours of blue and white, and many others.

WILD RUNAWAY ALONG HUNTER STREET

A runaway accident that caused considerable damage occurred this afternoon about three o'clock. Miss Flossie Burnham of Otonabee was driving along Hunter street and when in front of St. John's church one of the front wheels came off the buggy, causing the horse to take fright. Miss Burnham endeavoured to hold on but was unable to do so. The animal continued its wild gallop and at the Oriental Hotel the buggy collided with Dr. Amy's automobile which was standing there. The buggy was badly smashed and one of the front wheels of the car twisted. The horse ran wildly on and turned down Alymer street. Miss Burnham was removed to Dr. Halliday's office, but it is understood that she is not badly injured.

American Weapon Proves Its Merit In British Hands

Probably Will Decide Many Battles in Summer Campaign—Near Capture by Germany.

LONDON, May 17.—The Germans were for many months superior in machine guns, but the British now have a gun which can beat theirs and beating it every day.

Invented by an American officer, Colonel Lewis and made in Belgium almost up to the moment when the German scouts entered the city of its manufacture, the invention narrowly escaped capture by the Germans.

Its killing power may be gauged from the fact that in one trench recently one of these guns, manned by a crew of twe men, accounted for 330 Germans in half an hour.

It has been described as the 'Hose of Death' and whether in advance or retirement it is going to be the supreme battle arbiter of the coming year.

Suppose that instead of a rifle weighing ten pounds and firing fifteen bullets a minute and carried by one man who had a rifle weighing twenty-five pounds and firing fifteen bullets a second and carried by two men, what would be the effect on any advance made by the enemy? No troops could meet such a weapon. Not one would live to raise his rifle to his shoulder. The new arm gives the greatest volume of fire in the least time of any gun known.

It is working now in France and Flanders, night and day, sending a steady sweep of lead across the far-flung German line. It is as if a comb of bullets were carding out the men from their trenches.

The gun can be fired upside down from an aeroplane or sideways from a trench, from the ground, from a wall or from the roof of a house. It comes to pieces like a jig saw puzzle in a minute under expert hands and only one tool is needed and that tool is an ordinary rifle bullet.

These guns are being made in England now, and in factories you may find many a maimed hero of Liege and Haelen proud to think that he can still work as efficiently as if he were in the firing line.

And let it be whispered that in a recent air raid the Lewis gun proved definitely that it was something better than a dummy.

Do not wait until afternoon to plan the evening dinner. Haste makes wasteful marketing and poor meals.

SOLDIER'S BICYCLE SLID ON PAVEMENT

Private Wm. Davis, of the 93rd Battalion, had a narrow escape from going under an automobile at the corner of George and Charlotte streets at six o'clock last evening. On the wet pavement a bicycle he had rented, slid, as he put on the break, in front of Dr. J. N. McCulloch's automobile. Private Davis was unaffected and had a narrow escape from possible serious injury. His uniform was plastered with mud and the rear rim of the bicycle was smashed.

Owing to the cold weather and heavy rains the seeding in this locality is somewhat late. The rural telephone was badly damaged by lightning and wind on Thursday last.

Mr. George Robson of this place, had a very narrow escape on Friday last. He was riding in a waggon along the road when a large tree fell, striking the horse, which is now in a serious condition, but Mr. Robson escaped without injuries.

The soldiers of the 156th Battalion at Coe Hill were given a farewell concert on Friday night and each soldier was presented with a beautiful signet ring with their regimental number engraved. This was presented by the Council of Wollaston.

Good Reader, Bad Writer—A company of Highlanders, while on the march through a part of Scotland, halted for a Sunday's rest at a small village. Two of them, Tam and Jock, found lodgings with a very religious old lady, who advised them to go to church. To please her they went, Jock took the sermon in shorthand and read it to her when they came back. She was delighted, and asked to have a look at it. After a close inspection of the mystic signs, she said to the warrior—"Ye're a smart laddie and a very guid reader, but ye're the worst writer I ever come across."

ALLIED FORCES MOVING IN DIRECTION OF MONASTIR

Russian Mosul Drive Continues With Hope of Conquest of Mesopotamia

Will Relieve Pressure on British Expeditionary Force Moving Up the Tigris River---Cuts Communications of Sultan's Troops

PETROGRAD, via London, May 18.—With the advance of Russian forces southward from the Urumiah region toward Mosul, in Assyria, on the Tigris, which resulted recently in the occupation of Rivanduz, the Russians are now bringing fresh pressure of the most powerful sort upon the rear of the Turkish armies in Mesopotamia.

The development of this new line of attack has greatly enhanced the chances of success of the Russian campaign in Mesopotamia, which holds forth the hope now entertained in Petrograd of bringing not only Bagdad, the holy city of the Caliphs, but the entire historic country lying between the Tigris and the Euphrates under Russian dominion.

Of the two groups of Russian armies which are now threatening Mesopotamia overland the one already mentioned has crossed the Mesopotamia border and is marching rapidly toward Mosul. The only serious obstacle between it and this goal is the ancient fortified city of Jezireh-Ibn-Omar, on an island in the Tigris, 13 miles southeast of Diarbekr. It is believed that this city, with its antiquated defences, will not be able long to delay the Russian advance.

The progress of these forces already has broken the backbone of the Turkish communications between Diarbekr and Mosul and the Turkish armies covering these two points now are separated except for a circuitous road too far in the rear to be of much service.

Some 200 miles southward the other group of Russian forces, drawn up on the Persian-Turkish border before Khanikin, is prepared to strike through to Bagdad.

The combined pressure from these two directions upon the Turkish rear has placed the entire Turkish army in Mesopotamia, estimated at between six and seven divisions, in the greatest jeopardy. According to the latest despatches the Turks have been forced to relax to a great extent their resistance to the British expeditionary army and send troops northward. Thus it is thought the successes which have been won by the Russians will soon have an effect on the fortunes of the British campaign.

Nervous and Almost Crazy With Pains in the Head

Clergyman Certifies To This Cure of Nervous Prostration by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No ailment is more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. You may feel better for a day or two, only to find the next day that you have lost ground and are worse than ever. The headaches are worse, languid feelings are terribly depressing. As you lose strength you lose hope and courage and look to the future with fear and trembling.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the sufferer from nervous exhaustion. It is not narcotic in its influence. It does not deaden the trembling, irritated nerves, but through the medium of the blood nourishes them back to health as nothing else can.

Mrs. Alonzo B. Eisner, Billtown, King's County, N.S., writes: "I was very low with nervous prostration and was about discouraged, as I could not sleep nights and was almost crazy with pain in my head. I had tried many doctors, but seemed to get little benefit from their treatments.

"A friend handed me Dr. Chase's Almanac, so that I might read about the Nerve Food. A single box of this treatment convinced me of its value for I was better. I cannot tell how many boxes I used, but the results were so highly satisfactory that I cannot praise it too much My health and strength have been restored so that I can do all my own work, and I recommend the Nerve Food to all who suffer from nervous prostration.'

"This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. A. B. Eisner and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be true and correct."—Rev. Arthur A. Whitman.

Some patience is required in the treatment of nervous prostration, but you will not be using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before you begin to find your strength and good cheer returning. You will then be encouraged to continue the use of the food cure until cured. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

OUR SERIAL STORY

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

As the line came over the starboard gunnel Code picked the fish off the hooks, passing the hook to Pete, who baited them and threw them over the port gunnel. Thus they would work their way along the whole of the line.

Many of the hooks that came to Code's hands still had the bait with which they were set.

"Must be in the bait," he told Ellinwood. "The fish wouldn't touch it. This is no catch for five shots of trawl."

But Pete could not cast any light on the subject.

It was certainly true that the catch from the trawline was small enough to be remarked, but the men were helpless to explain the reason.

For two hours thy worked along the great line.

"There's a bare chance that the message from the unknown schooner might be a fake, although I can't imagine why," said Code as they were returning. "But if it is not, and the Canadian gunboat comes after me, she'll find me here, willing to go back to St. Andrew's and answer all charges. No escape and no dodging this time. And let me tell you something Pete. If nothing comes out of this except ugly rumor that I have to suffer for, I'm going to quit minding my own business, and I'll dig up something that will drive Nat Burns out of Ecsekirk Head forever.

"A man of his character and nature has certainly got something he doesn't want known, and I shall bring it to light and make it so public that he'll wish he had never heard the name Schofield. By Heaven, I've reached the end of my patience!"

If there was anything Pete Ellinwood loved it was to fight and at this declaration of war he roared encouragement.

"You'll do, skipper—you'll do. Get after him! Climb his frame! Put him out of business. An' let me help you. That's what I want."

"Everything in good time, Pete," grinned Code. "First we've got to find out how much of this is in the wind and how much is not."

Arrived at the schooner, they pitched the fish into the pen for the first watch's throw with rods left for the night. Code took off his coat and drew forth the packet that Elsa had given him, looked at it for a moment and threw it upon the table.

"Why in time did she send me that?" he asked himself, his voice very near dismay. "It must have looked mighty strange to Nell for me reserve might have been done to the to be getting money from Elsa Mallaby."

He stopped short in the midst of pulling off one boot. The idea had never struck him forcibly before. Now it seemed evident that Nellie's reserv might have been due to the letter.

"What a fool I was not to tell her all about it!" he cried. With one boot off he reached across to the packet under the swinging lamp and drew the letter out of it and read:

"Dear Partner:

"Here is something that Captain Bijonah will hand to you when he catches the Lass. There are supposed to be one hundred and fifty dollars in this packet (I never was much of a counter, as you know). Now, dear friend, this isn't all for you unless you need it. It is simply a small reserve fund for the men of the fleet if they should need anything—a new gaff, for instance, or a jib, or grub.

"It isn't much, but you never can tell when it might come in handy. It was your good scheme that sent the men off fishing, and you left the way open for me to do my little part here at the Head. Now I want to do just this much more for the sailors of the fleet, and I am asking you to be my treasurer. When you hear of a needy case just give him what you think he needs and say it is a loan from me if he won't take a gift.

"If this is a trouble to you I am sorry, but we are all working for the good name and good times of Grande Mignon, and I hope you won't mind. Good fishing to the Charming Lass, high line and trawling full! May you wet your salt early and come home again to those who are longing to see you.

"This is all done on the spur of the moment, so I have no time to ask your mother to enclose a line. But I know she sends her love. It has been a little hard for her here since you left, bless her heart; but she has been as brave as a soldier and helped me very much. We see a great deal of each other and you can rest assured I shall look after her.

"Always your old friend,
"Elsa."

As Code read the last paragraph his eyes softened. It was white of Elsa to look after his mother, particularly now when there would be much for her to face regarding himself. And it was white of her to send the money for the sailors of the fleet. Even she did not know, as Code did, how nearly destitute some of the dorymen were. He would be glad to do what little work there might be in disbursing the sum.

"Sorry Nellie didn't seem interested when I began to talk about Elsa," he said to himself. "I suppose I should have told her, anyway, so there wouldn't be any misunderstanding. Well, I'll do it next time." He turned the lamp low and rolled into his bunk.

CHAPTER XVIII.
TREACHERY.

Next morning at breakfast, about four o'clock, Code told his crew the situation. He knew his men thoroughly and had been friends with most of them all his life.

"There's likely to be trouble, and I may be taken away, but if that happens Pete will tell you what to do. Don't sight Swallowtail until your salt is all wet. Bring home a topping load and you'll share topping."

Code did not go out that morning. Instead, he tried to shake off his troubles long enough to study the fish—which was his job on the Charming Lass.

While not a Bijonah Tanner, Code bade fair to be his equal at Bijonah's age. He came of a father with an instinct for fish, and he had inherited that instinct fully. Under Jasper he had learned much, but it was another matter to have some one on hand to read the signs rather than being cast upon his own resources.

The fish, from the trawl-line and Pete's reports of dory work, had been running rather big. This pleased him, but he knew it could not last; and he sat with his old chart spread out before him on the deck—a chart edged with his father's valuable penciled notes.

Suddenly, while in the almost subconscious state that he achieved when very "fishy," the persistent voice of the cook broke through the wall of unconsciousness.

"Smoke on the port quarter, skipper! Smoke on the port quarter, skipper!"

The phrase came with persistent repetition until Code was fully alive to its meaning and glanced over his left shoulder.

Above the line of dark blue that was the ocean, and in the light blue that was the sky, was etched a tree-shaped brown smudge.

Streamer smudges were not an unusual sight, for not fifty miles east was the northern track of the great ocean steamers — a track which they were gradually approaching as they made their berths. But a steamer smudge over the port quarter, with the Lass's bow headed due north, was an entirely different thing.

Code went below and brought up an ancient fire-arm. This he discharged while the cook ran a trawl-tub to the truck. It was the prearranged signal for Pete Ellinwood to come in.

As Code waited he had no doubt that smoke was from a revenue cutter or cruiser from Halifax with his arrest warrant.

There was a stiff westerly breeze, and Code, glancing up at the cloud formations, saw that there would be a beautiful racing half-gale on by noon.

"What a chance to run for it!" he thought, but resolutely put the idea from his mind.

Pete came in with a scowl on his face, cursing everything under the sun, and especially a fisherman's life. When told of the smoke smudge he evinced comparatively little interest.

"We'll find out what she is when she gets here. What I'd like to know is, what's the matter with our bait?"

"Bait gone wrong again?" asked Code anxiously, his brows knitting. "That stuff on the trawl wasn't the only bad bait, then."

"No. Everybody's complainin' this mornin'."

"Not only can't catch fish, but ye can't hardly string the stuff on the hooks. An' that ain't all. It has a funny smell that I never found in any other clam bait I ever used."

"Why, what's the matter with your hands, Pete?" cried Code, pointing. Ellinwood had removed his nippers, and the skin of his fingers and palms was a queer white and beginning to shred off as if immersed long in hot water.

"By the Great Seine!" rumbled the mate, looking at his hands in consternation.

Code made a trumpet of his hands. "Here, cookee, roll up a tub of that bait lively. I want to look at it. And fetch the hammer!"

A suspicion based upon a long-forgotten fact had suddenly leaped into his mind.

When the cook hove the tub of bait on deck Code knocked off the top boards with the hammer and dipped up a handful of the clams. Instead of the firm, fat shellfish that should have been in the clean brine, he found them loose and rotten. This time he himself detected a faint acrid odor quite different from the usual clean, salty smell. Again he dipped to make sure the whole tub was ruined. Then he looked at Ellinwood in despair.

"It's acid, Pete," he said. "My father told me about this sort of thing being done sometimes in a close race among bankers for the last load of fish. If they're all like this we're done for until we can get more."

Ellinwood looked at him in amazement, his jaw sagging.

"Well, who in thunder would do this?"

Code laughed bitterly.

"There's only one man I can think of, and that is the fellow who got my motor-dory under false pretences. You remember how he made the cook and the boy help him get it over the side? Well, her gasoline-tank was full and her batteries new. She was ready to go two hundred miles on a minute's notice."

"But, why should he do that—"

"Oh, think, Pete, think! Don't you remember? He's one of the men I went up to Castalia to get, the time that lawyer came to Ecsekirk Head. And he's the only man in the whole crew. I don't know well I see it all now. He sent me a note the night before asking to ship on the Lass, and I went to get him before any of the other skippers got wind of it. You don't suppose he did this thing on his own account, do you?"

"Easy, skipper, easy! What's he got against you?"

"He's got nothing against me!" cried Code passionately. "But he is working for the man who has. Do you think that stupid ox would have sense enough to work a scheme like this? Never! Nat Burns is behind this, and I'll bet my schooner on it!"

Schofield dumped the bait-tub over the dock and rolled it around, examining it. Suddenly he stopped and peered closely.

"Look here!" he cried. "Here's proof!"

With a splitting knife that he snatched out of a cleat he pried loose a tiny plug in one of the bottom boards that had been replaced so carefully that it almost defied detection.

"The whole thing is simple enough. He turned the tub upside down, cut out this plug, and inserted the acid. Then he refitted the plug and set it right side up again. It's as plain as the nose on your face."

"By thunder, I believe you're right, skipper!" said Ellinwood solemnly. "The dirty dog! Cookee, run that tub up to the truck again. We'll have to call the men in on this."

"Oh, he was foxy, that one!" said Code bitterly. "Going out in the fog that way so all hands would think he was lost! I never remembered until this minute that the motor-dory could be run. I guess she went, all right, and that scoundrel is ashore by this time."

"Had a bad name in Castalia, didn't he?"

"Oh, a little more or less that I heard of, but what's that in a fisherman? When the men come in have them go through all the bait."

Pete fired the old rifle, and the crew at work began to pull in through the choppy sea.

"Hello!" cried the mate, looking behind him. "There's something going to be doin' here in a minute. It's the cutter from Halifax, all right."

Code, his former danger forgotten for the time, glanced up. The smudge of smoke had quickly resolved itself into a stubby, gray steam-vessel with a few bright brass guns forward and a black cloud belching from her funnel. She was still some five miles away, but apparently coming at top speed.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

FOLLY BECOMES TRAGIC.

The New York Times, answering the plea for clemency for the Irish rebels, says:

War is a stern business and the subject who sets himself against his King or the citizen who rises against his government when the nation is straining every resource to overcome enemies in the field can hardly expect mercy.

Moreover, the men who proclaimed the Irish Republic made the dreadful mistake of mixing actual treason with their rebellion. In the proclamation put out in Dublin on April 30 they said that, having waited for the right moment to reveal itself, Ireland "now seizes that moment, and supported by her exiled children in America and by her gallant allies in Europe, by relying on her own strength, she strikes in full confidence of victory." This ally at home of the enemy almost confesses himself a traitor. Even if revolt when the nation is at war be not treason, there can be no doubt about the quality of the act when alliance with the enemy is openly confessed. The Defence of the Realm Act provides in Article LVII:

"A person found guilty of an offence against these regulations by court martial shall be liable to be sentenced to penal servitude for life or any less punishment, or if the court finds that the offence was committed with the intention of assisting the enemy, to suffer death or any less punishment."

Pearce, Connolly and their lieutenants could not have given more direct aid and comfort to Britain's enemies than by a revolt calling for the use of military force to suppress it. It was stern, considering the weak character and blind folly of the leaders it was pitiful, but the time chosen, the nature of the offence, made it in law and in the military sense just.

The world's greatest example of leniency to the leaders of rebellion was afforded by the policy of our government at the close of the civil war. But it must be remembered that the war was ended, the danger past, before that question came up for consideration. Great Britain is engaged in a terrible war, of which the end is not yet in view. It can hardly be doubted that in like circumstances any other government would in like manner have enforced the law in its full vigor. Something must be said of the cruel heartlessness of Ireland's "gallant allies in Europe' who encouraged these Irish dreamers to acts which have brought them to their death, which brought to death scores of their misguided followers, and caused an immense property loss in the heart of Ireland's chief city, but that would be futile.

Irishmen who were in sympathy with the rebellion will say that four more names have been added to the roll of Irish martyrs, but only a small part of the Irish people gave support and approval of the mad attempt. From beginning to end the uprising was deplorable, fatal, tragic, and there will be pity for the victim, all the victims, even from those who condemn their folly.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Their Prettiest Girl.

By HENRY BERLINGHOFF.

Copyrighted, '16, by Associated Literary Press.

It was Ned Bellingham who discovered the girl across the way. Crosby Maurer hooted at the suggestion that she was the daintiest and most wholly lovable young woman on the globe.

Ned retorted with some heat, and the result was that then and there the domestic partnership was threatened with dissolution.

It was the first time since they had set up housekeeping in a bachelor apartment three years before that they had had a disagreement.

Maurer had flung himself out of the room with never a goodby, and Ned had sat himself down at his drawing board to make the girl across the way the central figure in a set of illustrations he was doing for a story, blissfully ignoring the fact that the author's heroine was tall, above the ordinary, a fair haired goddess of the Nordland, while the girl across the way was petite and decidedly dark.

Maurer did not return to dress for dinner, and Ned was fast asleep by the time he did come in. There was no reopening of the discussion, and in the morning the clash of the day before was tacitly ignored.

More than a week passed and the cloud had blown away when Maurer, waiting for his breakfast to be sent up from the restaurant in the building, approached the window and gave a low whistle of surprise.

"You're right, old man," he cried, "and I'll eat all the humble pie you care to feed me. That girl is a goddess in miniature."

Ned sprang to the window, a pleased smile of triumph on his face. But the smile faded when he looked closely.

"It's awfully good of you to say so, old chap," he said gratefully, "but I'll eat that pie myself. Funny I should have thought her such a stunner. She's a good looker, but nothing like the goddess I've been raving about."

"Don't be a beastly fool," urged Maurer politely. "You're an artist. You must know that she's one woman in a thousand."

"Do you mean it?" demanded Ned wonderingly. "I thought you were saying it to please me. Funny that you should like her. Usually your taste is very good."

"Good!" echoed Maurer. "Of course it's good, and it tells me that that girl is a remarkable beauty."

"Nonsense!" scoffed Ned. "She's good looking, but commonplace. There are hundreds like her."

Maurer turned a look of ineffable scorn upon his friend and silently made his way to the table, where the breakfast now was spread.

The meal was eaten in silence, and for a second time within ten days Maurer departed for his office without the "good luck in your work, old man," which started Ned on his drawings in proper humor with himself.

Instead of going to his drawing board Ned went to the window, and for a long half hour he studied the dainty figure sewing by the window across the street.

He turned away with a sigh, then regarded the half completed sketch tacked to his drawing board. It was a remarkably good likeness of the girl opposite; but, kneading his rubber afresh, Ned started to efface the figure with another sigh for his lost ideal.

He took a melancholy pleasure in drawing in a girl who was tall and plump and whose hair glinted yellowy against a crimson curtain. This was to be the frontispiece of a magazine, and he had wondered the afternoon before if the girl would see it and recognize her likeness. He had drawn nothing else but pictures of her since that first morning, and now he wondered how he had ever been such a fool.

That evening Maurer smoked his pipe in front of the window where he could watch his new divinity, and Ned, to avoid further rupture, clapped on his hat and went out for a street car ride, a form of amusement he detested, but which was better than witching Maurer make a fool of himself.

Ever since he had come to the city he and Crosby Maurer had been the firmest of friends. For three years they had lived together in the little four room apartment that had become a real home to them, and so closely had they studied each other's peculiarities there were none of the outbreaks of ill humor that had spoiled many such arrangements. This was the first time that there had come a real clash, and Bellingham felt it keenly.

In time the edge of the trouble wore away, but there was no real resumption of the old friendship. Maurer was still too hurt to forget all that had been said in the heat of passion, though he had forgotten the things he had said to Ned at the first disagreement.

While there was a careful observance of the old forms, back of them was lacking the real regard that had made them something more than forms.

Vainly Ned sought to overcome his reversal of opinion, but it was nearly two weeks before he could change. Then as he was dressing one morning he chanced to glance through the half opened shutters, and a moment later he was in his friend's room.

"You win!" he cried with such abruptness that Maurer cut himself with the razor he was wielding. "That girl is a raving beauty, Maurie. Funny that I should have taken that dislike to her, but it's gone now. She's all that you say she is."

"And that isn't much," was the reply in cold contempt. "Funny I should have raved about her. She looks like a chorus girl. It was a shock when I saw her this morning."

"Are you crazy?" stormed Ned. "Why, she's the daintiest little woman the world can show. She's better looking and sweeter than I thought she was at first."

"She's a tricky sort of young person," observed Maurer calmly. "One day she looks like the real thing, and then again she looks utterly commonplace. Funny you can only rave about her on one of her uninteresting days. I suppose that from now on you'll be drawing brunette dwarfs, no matter what sort of heroines the author likes. You'll lose your pull with the publishers if you keep that sort of thing up. Better see a doctor about it."

"You'd better see an oculist yourself if your eyes are so dull to real loveliness," retorted Ned. "When you have finished your breakfast let me know, and I'll come and get mine. The lease here runs out at the end of this month. I guess I won't renew my share, Maurer. Better get some one else."

"Think I'll move, too," sneered Maurer. "I don't want to stay here with a female freak like that living across the way. I'll stop at the office on the way out and tell them to look for another tenant."

He went out to a lonely breakfast, and when he had gone Bellington came out to play with the cold chops and the lukewarm coffee. He did not go to the drawing board in spite of the splendid inspiration of the girl across the way.

He was tremendously fond of Maurer, and this abrupt termination of their friendship, coming as it did, unsettled him for work. He could only puff at his pipe and wonder what it would be like to set up housekeeping alone in a smaller apartment. He would take an apartment in the same house to be near the girl, but he would need only one room.

Maurer paid the larger share of the joint rental. He was making more money and insisted that he would pay as much were he alone. Ned had appreciated his kindness, and when he did not look at the girl he reproached himself for his new ingratitude.

But when he saw the little brown head and the delicate profile through the window opposite he told himself that an unfeeling brute like Maurer did not deserve sympathy.

The luncheon came up and was sent back untasted, and the afternoon shadows grew into dusk, and still Ned sat and smoked and thought.

The girl was gone now, but he could still fancy that she was there, and he was so absorbed with his thoughts that he did not hear the key turn in the lock, and not until Maurer burst in with a whoop that rattled the shades on the electric globes did he rouse himself.

"We're both right, old man!" shouted Maurer as he dragged Ned from his chair and forced him to participate in an impromptu war dance about the tiny parlor. "The prettiest girl in the world lives across the way, but your prettiest girl is not my prettiest girl, thank heaven! There are two of 'em, old man, yours and mine—at least they're going to be yours and mine, I hope."

He sank into a chair.

"I'm taking care of Gordon's clients while he's in Europe, and a Mrs. Foster sent for me today to consult about some real estate deal. That's where my prettiest girl went! They're twins, Alice and Phoebe Bayard, and they're Mrs. Foster's nieces. She's an invalid, and they take turns living with her. She says it's too much of a strain to have them both there at once and to try to tell which is which. That's why sometimes it was my prettiest girl, and sometimes it was the one you liked. We made the mistake of thinking that there was only one. The old lady's going to Europe with a trained nurse for keeps. It's a good thing that we gave up this apartment. We'll need two, and they won't be in bachelor halls either."

Ned grasped his friend's hand in his own. "There's only one prettiest girl," he declared, "but yours isn't commonplace." And with that concession Maurer was content.

Alkali in Soap Bad for the hair

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

SHAUGHNESSY HEROISM

Calm Restraint of Famous Canadian is Commended

Once again has Lord Shaughnessy done something that will appeal strongly to the Canadian people, by deciding that the body of his son, the late Captain Fred. Shaughnessy, should not be disturbed and brought back, but that it should rest forever near the battlefield where he met his fate. Everybody knows, says Busk's Weekly, that with Lord Shaughnessy's wealth and influence, not to mention the anxiety of the British Government to recognize the patriotic work he has done since the beginning of the war, he could have had his son's body returned, even at the expense of stretching a rule. But the British army rule is strict that officers and men killed in action should be buried as soon as possible, and as close as may be to the place where they joined the rolls of honor. Lord Shaughnessy refused to take advantage of his position to break military rules, the more so that he knew what Capt. Shaughnessy's wishes would have been. The family have taken their bereavement, like so many thousands of other families, standing up and with their face to the foe.

For drying women's hair there has been invented a metal comb with a hollow back, in which a heated handle can be inserted.

CANADIAN INITIATIVE WORSTS HUN MACHINE

Cleverness of Westerners in Exciting Night Attack is Described by College President's Son

A modest but vivid description of a night engagement undertaken by Western Canadians against the German lines was given in a letter by Sergeant William Crummy of the grenadier company of the 28th Canadians just a few days before the writer was reported "killed in action." Sergeant Crummy was a son of Principal Crummy of Wesley College, Winnipeg, and was well-known in athletic circles in Vancouver, Toronto and Winnipeg.

"Just before our battalion left the trenches for a rest we pulled off a little stunt," writes the sergeant of bomb-throwers. "The brigadier was anxious to learn a bit about our friends (?) over the way. It was decided that parties from the —th and our battalion should make raids upon two points of the German trenches at the same time, try to get some captives and pick up what information they could.

"Our party consisted of about —— men." (This indicates the censor's necessary activity). "The wire was cut by a couple of the scouts and then the party crawled across the 100 yards to the parapet under cover of darkness. The plan was that two parties, each consisting of bayonet men and bombers were to enter the trenches side by side and work up and down in opposite directions. These were to be followed by two supporting parties to take charge of prisoners. The remainder of the party-signallers, stretcher-bearers, etc., were to remain outside the parapet at the point of entry. This was the plan as pre-arranged. It was of course changed considerably by circumstances.

Rehearsed, Waited, Then—

"I was in charge of the bombers working with the first party going to the right. Our party did not go into the trenches with the battalion, but stayed out in reserve billets and rehearsed our stunt. On the night selected for the attempt we all went into the trenches. The wire cutting took longer than anticipated and we all had to stand in the cold at our own parapet for nearly three hours. At last the welcome news was received that the wire was cut and we sallied forth. We crawled across the "No-man's Land" in single file and so through the narrow gap in the wire," continues Sergeant Crummy. He omits the fact that he was lacerated from head to foot in crawling silently over the wire in whose ends he got entangled.

Excitement and Success

"As soon as several of us were right under their parapet we waited for the sentry whom we could hear walking up and down inside to come along. As soon as he came abreast of us the first bayonet man jumped in to engage him. As he jumped in in the semi-darkness he ran his bayonet through him. The cry the German uttered made further silence needless and in we piled. Hardly had we entered the trench when a machine gun opened up right among us apparently. It appears that we had crawled right over a machine gun emplacement and the gunner on being roused opened fire through his loop hole. He hit only one man however and he was only very slightly wounded. The machine gun was silenced by a couple of bombs thrown into the emplacement.

"By this time startled and half-awakened Fritzes were crawling out of dugouts on all sides and the fun waxed fast and furious. We had the advantage of surprise and the Germans put up almost no fight. In almost less time than it takes to tell it three prisoners had been hustled over the parapet, a section of trench had been cleared with bombs and bayonet and we were out of the trench again, making for our own covered by our artillery which then opened up. So accurate was this covering fire that we did not lose a man coming back. The whole fracas cost only three men slightly wounded. We got three prisoners, one of whom was a junior officer with the Iron Cross. We left about 15 Germans here de combat. The other battalion affair was also a success, although they got no prisoners and suffered a few more casualties."

Swiss Arrest Many

In connection with the arrest of the manager of the Berne Official Inquiry Office, who is a German naturalized as a Swiss, sixteen other arrests have been made. All are connected with the organized German espionage office of which Behrmann was the head.

BABY-KILLERS AT HOME

Use Fat For Explosives and Complain of Blockade

An interesting point was made by Dr. Waller, Professor of Physiology of London University, at a lecture in Dublin on "Fat consumption during war." A dominant factor in the German economic situation, he pointed out, is the utilization of the fat supply. Germany had to use her supplies either for food or for explosives. She produced sufficient to feed her population, but she elected to use a large proportion for explosives. This fat was taken from the mouths of the women and children to feed the guns and yet Germany complains that England is carrying out a starvation policy at her expense! One wonders how many lives of their own babies they have sacrificed in the Verdun attack. It is not only the Zeppelin raids which confer on them the title of baby-killers.—Truth, London.

FIGHTING CAMPBELLS

Canadian Officials and Three Sons Serve Nobly

The paper "Canada" says: Captain Frederick Taylor Campbell when the war broke out was the representative of the Canadian Government Emigration Department in Birmingham. Soon after the war broke out he went from Birmingham to an Indian regiment engaged in the Dardanelles campaign, where he was severely wounded and reported dead. After his return to England he was gazetted to a captaincy in the 5th Royal Warwicks, and was stationed at Clevedon. Capt. Campbell has three sons in the forces, his eldest son, Pte. Frederick Campbell, who became lance-corporal in a Canadian battalion serving in France, enlisted in Canada and came over with the first contingent.

Lieut. John Irwin Campbell, now of the 5th Royal Warwicks, had just arrived in England from Canada on a holiday when the war broke out. He enlisted at once in the R. C. Horse, which was attached to a Belgian Lancer Regiment. In the heavy fighting in the first German advance he was wounded in Belgium in November, 1914, and sent to England, where upon his recovery he was gazetted to his father's regiment. Lieut. Wallace Henry Campbell, of the 5th Royal Warwicks, was in Canada when the war broke out, and came over with a Canadian battalion in the first contingent, subsequently also obtaining a commission in his father's regiment.

CHURCH VS. NATIONALISM

Bruchesi's Appeal to French Canada For Aid in War

As far as French Canada was concerned, writes Sir Max Aitken, one very potent force had from the outset of the war thrown its weight into the Imperial scale and stimulated the movement for obtaining recruits. The Roman Catholic Church has, from the dawn of Canadian history, exerted a greater influence on secular affairs than any other branch of that church, outside the confines of Spain and Italy.

On the outbreak of war in 1914 a pastoral letter was issued by the archbishops calling upon their flocks to respond to the call of duty and to serve the Flag. In the following year Monseigneur Bruchesi reminded his flock that England had "gone to war to avenge sacred rights which had been trampled underfoot by the German invader and that, when England decided to throw her weight on the side of justice, it was Canada's bounden duty to rally to her side. This is a sacred obligation that we owe the country that has given us our liberty and that seeks to crush those who threaten the liberty of the world. We are not a neutral country and, as part of the Empire which spells liberty and glory, our proper place is to cooperate with the British army in France so that the Liberty of Belgium may be secured and the triumph of our flag may be assured."

The destruction of Louvain and the reckless havoc wrought by the invaders among the cathedrals of France confirmed an attitude of mind which, finding expression in such a quarter, ensured that the French of the eastern provinces would not lean towards that school of thought which, before the war, sowed the idea that European struggles were no concern of Canada.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"GOD SAVE IRELAND" SAVED HIGHLANDERS

Heroic Irish Part in War of Liberty—Connaughts Were Irresistible—Recruiting For Their Namesakes

Here is the way in which the Montreal papers boost recruiting by news items. Says the Herald: Lots of Canadian Irishmen have already gone to the front. They went with the regiments which were sent before this distinctively Irish Battalion was launched. It would have been impossible to keep "the fighting race" out of the "big fight"—to bar the age-long soldiers of liberty from this supreme battle of all the ages of liberty.

It may not generally be known that an Irishman began the war. He was a trooper of the 4th Irish Dragoons, on outpost duty; and he fired the first shot between the British and German armies on August 22nd, 1914, killing a Uhlan officer on the road between Mons and Brussels. The Irish played a great and heroic part in the battle of Mons. They were among the best of the gallant rear-guard fighters during the historic retreat from that ill-fated Belgian town.

But we are talking of the Irish Rangers of Montreal. Let us take a short account of one day's work by the Connaught Rangers, during the fierce December fighting of the first year of the war. We are indebted for this story to the New York "Ireland." "In the month of December, the Connaught Rangers distinguished themselves by saving the remnant of the Gordon Highlanders from destruction. The narrative of one Highlander, Private McGregor, is worthy of record. • • "Just at that moment we heard the sound of singing, and the song was 'God Save Ireland.' It was the Connaught Rangers coming to our relief. Well, I have seen some reckless Irishmen in my time, but nothing to match the recklessness and daring of these gallant Rangers. They took the Germans on the left flank. The Germans now probably numbered 2,000 against 500 Connaughts and 170 of us. The Connaughts were simply irresistible, and all the time they kept singing "God Save Ireland." One huge red-haired son of Erin having broken his rifle, got possession of a German officer's sword, and everything that came in the way of this giant went down. I thought of Wallace. Four hundred and seventy Huns were killed and wounded, and we took seventy prisoners. Had it not been for the Irish I wouldn't be writing this.'"

The Irish-Canadian Rangers cannot ask a better example than these Rangers from old Connaught! Nor can they offer a more compelling lure to the young and ardent Irish-Canadian than a chance to stand beside these gallant fighters from the Old Sod, ever foremost in warring for freedom where danger is thickest and glory lights the way.

SHAKESPEARE'S APPEAL

If you fight against God's enemy
God will, in justice, ward you as His soldiers;
If you do swear to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age.

From Richard III.

Lord Revelstoke is a weak arithmetician. He takes longer than most men to cast correctly an ordinary ledger column of figures. But he is one of the ablest financiers in London.

Prince Henry's pocket money allowance at Eton was three shillings a week.

President Wilson before the war employed three secretaries. Afterwards he employed twenty.

NEW FRANCE NOT NEW

Dr. J. W. Robertson, speaking in Winnipeg, said: "Then there is our friend and ally, France. Her enemies have called her decadent. Travellers and the newspapers have called her gay, frivolous and inconsistent. They now speak of a new France born out of adversity. But France has not changed so much as our knowledge and understanding of her have been corrected. They were based too much on superficial impressions and on histories written to present dramatic stories. For over a century France has gone on steadfastly and impatiently, but tenaciously, towards liberty through self-government, equality before the law and fraternity among all the people. She has been a great leader in civilization.

FRANCO-CANADIAN EPIC

A letter was received by Mr. Justice Greenshields of Montreal from Clyde Scott, one of his nephews at the front, in which the writer sets down the dying words of Maurice Christophe Dreterien, second lieutenant of the 29th Alpine infantry, born at Epinal, August 30th, 1895, mortally wounded by a shell at the battle front in the Champagne, and died in the arms of Scott. These were his dying words: " . . . . . I see the most beautiful moment of my life. I regret nothing, and I am happy as a King. I am happy to die that my country may be delivered. Say to my friends that I go to victory, a smile on my lips more joyous than that of all the martyrs of all times. We are men of a France eternal. France must live. France must conquer.

"Get ready your gay apparel; prepare to celebrate the return of the conquering heroes of the great war. It will not be long now. We may not be there, but others will. Weep not for us, nor mourn us, for we die with a smile on our lips, with a superhuman joy in our hearts. Vive la France! Vive la France! Victory is ours! Have confidence and stumble not. Patience. Be gay. Have confidence."

Monaco's Ruler Writes

Prince Albert of Monaco sent the following cable message to President Wilson: "As a sovereign Prince, as a navigator, as a scientist, I adhere to the protest you have made with fine sentiment and human dignity against offenses committed by German arms against the rights of neutrals, the honor of mariners and public conscience. —Albert, Prince of Monaco."

JERUSALEM'S DISTRESS

Up Go Prices and British Invasion is Expected

According to reports received at Alexandria 400,000 persons in Jerusalem are now receiving daily rations from the American Relief Fund. A woman engaged in relief work there writes: "Everything costs four times as much as before, so you can imagine what a state the people are in. Our poor children look like skeletons. Bread is very dear and the pieces are very small. All the fathers have been taken away for soldiers and the mothers are miserable and weak."

An Englishwoman who came to Egypt from Palestine by way of Cyprus states that the Turks fully expect that the allies will invade the country and are devoting much energy to preparations to repel them. They have constructed numerous military roads. They have fortified the Mount of Olives, and believe that they have made it impregnable.

Meanwhile, she says, the economic situation is deplorable. As it is impossible to export the oranges they have been allowed to rot on the trees. Public executions are frequent. At Jaffa, Haly Hamis, the chief boatman of a tourist agency, and the Kavas (military courier) of the American consulate, well-known to all tourists in Palestine, has been hanged on a charge of espionage. Emil Knesevich, a son of the British consular agent at Jaffa, was saved from a similar fate only by the intervention of Dr. Glazebrook, the American consul at Jerusalem. He was accused of having received letters from his father, a refugee, in Egypt.

Fined: He Wrote Too Much

For writing a letter containing information which might be of use to the enemy a Kent man was fined $5. He had written to a friend at Newcastle what he thought to be the results of an air raid.

Because she tried to forward a letter of a French war prisoner, Bertha Schumacher, a factory girl of Noechet, has been sent to prison for two years and six months.

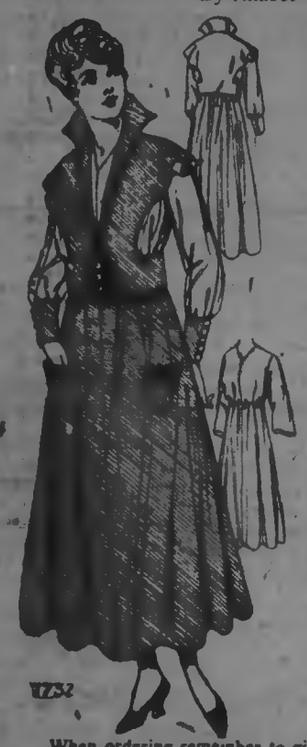
EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.



This is a model showing how one may play tricks with light and dark tone fabrics. The "cut out" of the overblouse side sections, cleverly conduces to the shoulder cape idea, a novel scheme for introducing the most fashionable of features in dresses, to-day. The high and flaring collar joins long revers that taper in their line to a waistline that is high; this gives a neat vest effect. Braid loops ornament and close the garment; this treatment suggests that the belt or girdle is in one with the blouse. The sleeves are of light color material and gathered to a deep cuff that is so largely used now on sleeves and which is button trimmed. The skirt is in two gores, gathered at the upper edge and sewed to the waist. Triangular pockets, braid trimmed, give much character to this section of the dress. The necessary wavy fulness claims attention and stamps the skirt in style.

This pattern may be had in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. To reproduce the design in size 36 will require 1⅝ yards for the waist and 4¼ yards for the overblouse and skirt, if 36 inch material be used.

To obtain the pattern send 15 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.
Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

French Score Successes In The Fighting at Verdun

Stormed and Captured a Well Defended German Front Northeast of Hill 304 While at the Same Time Other French Troops Captured German Trench on Hill 287 ---German Attacks on Avocourt Wood Stronghold Repulsed With Most Heavy Loss to the Enemy.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official Communique), May 18.—French troops stormed and captured a small well defended German fort, northeast of Hill 304, in a sharp attack on the German position northwest of Verdun at 3 o'clock this morning, the War Office announced to-day. At the same time French detachments captured a German trench on Hill 287, west of Hill 304, killing or imprisoning all the occupants. These successful French attacks followed the repulse of strong German assaults on French positions northwest of Verdun, in fighting that continued throughout the night. After important artillery preparation the Germans made several attempts during the night to capture a French redoubt in Avocourt Wood, said the official statement. They were repulsed by our infantry fire. The German losses were most heavy. Between Oise and Aisne a strong German reconnaissance was dispersed. Aviators on both sides continued very active during the night. German squadrons bombarded Luneville, Epinal and Belfort, doing only slight damage. Early yesterday French aeroplanes dropped eighty shells on Metz and Sablons railway station.

300,000 AUSTRIANS SMASHING AT ITALIANS

Most Determined Offensive Against the Italians Since the War Began —Austrian Forces Are Bent on Invasion of Northern Italy—Italians Driven Southward on a Five Mile Front

AMSTERDAM, May 18.—Three hundred thousand Austrian troops, concentrated on a thirty-five-mile front, are striking against the Italian lines in the Tyrolese Alps in the most determined Austrian offensive against the Italians since the war began.

The official despatches transmitted from Vienna contain no hint as to the exact nature of the operations. Several Berlin military critics intimated to-day that the Austrians are developing a great offensive and are bent on the invasion of Northern Italy.

The fighting is spreading eastward from the Adige River Valley, across the high Alpine peaks and rocky plateaus. The Italians have been driven southward on a five-mile front extending from Piazzo to the Upper Astico Valley.

British Smack is Sunk

LONDON, May 18.—The fishing smack Research has been sunk. One of the crew was killed, two injured. The rest were landed.

Asquith Meets With Success in Ireland

Examiner Special:

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 18.—Officials here profess to be without definite information as to Premier Asquith's plans for the new administration in Ireland. It is accepted that the present order of things will be changed, and a Dublin correspondent of the News declares the Prime Minister has virtually become Chief Secretary for Ireland through accepting a post on the Irish Privy Council.

Monster French Air Cruisers Soon Ready

Examiner Special:

PARIS (By Mail), May 18.—Monster French air cruisers, each mounting one of the famous "soixante-quinze" guns so destructive at Verdun, will be in action against Germany's air forces before many days.

Successful experiments with this new terror of the air have just been completed. In all probability Sergeant Aviator Treille Grandeigne, hero of several recent air exploits, will pilot the first of the new battle planes.

LONDON, May 18.—Jeremiah C. Lynch, of New York, a naturalized American citizen, was arrested for participating in the Irish rebellion and court martialled yesterday, the American Consul at Dublin wired the Embassy this afternoon. Lynch was to be sentenced to-day.

LONDON, May 18.—The French steamer Mira, 3,460 tons, has been sunk.

THE WEATHER

Cold, showery and most unseasonable weather still continues. This morning the thermometer marked 35 degrees as the lowest point reached last night. This is but a few degrees above the freezing point. Much of the northern portion of the province had a covering of snow yesterday, also a freezing temperature. The rainfall, while not heavy has been continuous rain falling every second day. The total for the month is now about two inches.

Introduction in Legislature of Pacific Coast Province.

VANCOUVER, May 17.—A Prohibition bill is being introduced in the British Columbia Legislature this afternoon. Recently the liquor interests have been making a great campaign in favor of compensation. This the Government has denied but, as a compromise, prohibition people have agreed to consent to an extra six month's delay, before prohibition comes into force. The date will therefore be July 1 next year instead of January 1. Druggists refused to take any responsibility under the bill to sell liquor on doctor's prescription so the Government will provide dispensaries for the selling of liquor for medicinal purposes.

TEAM CAPTAINS FOR 93RD CAMPAIGN TO MEET TO-NIGHT

Important Meeting Will Be Held in the Recruiting Rooms, Simcoe Street—A Full Attendance is Requested

TO HELP SOLDIER BOYS

The meeting of the team captains for the 93rd Battalion Regimental Fund Campaign, which was to have been held to-morrow night, has been changed to to-night on account of the fact that many of the members desire to attend the Creatore Band concert to-morrow. The meeting will be held to-night in the recruiting rooms, Simcoe street, and a full attendance is requested. The men who took part in the Patriotic Fund and Belgian Relief Fund campaigns are urged to be on hand. It is of the utmost importance that the campaign for the 93rd should be a complete success, and much depends upon to-night's meeting.

DON'T MISS CREATORE'S BAND TO-MORROW NIGHT

This Band is World-Famous—Is Assisted by Signora Emilia Bernabe, Soprano

Those who go to hear Creatore and His band at the Grand tomorrow night will enjoy a treat never to be forgotten. Nothing like him has ever been seen before in this or any other country. His sincerity cannot be questioned. He merely allows his emotions to get the better of him, but not to the extent that it is a weakness. His men cannot resist his fervor any more than can his audience, and so the results are not surprising. His band is composed of fifty players who put color into their work and can master a volume of amazing intensity, reflecting their director's magnetism, totally unlike any other organization before the public. His programmes are always inviting throughout. He knows just what he is playing, the story, the music, the scene, and the playing is such that he is recognized by the leading musical critics of this country as the most wonderful diretor of the day.

"THE MASQUERADERS" AT THE EMPIRE

A Fine Picture for the Week-end —Hazel Dawn Taking Leading Role

In the "Masqueraders" Henry Arthur Jones the noted English playwright has achieved the impossible in the co-mingling of comedy and drama. The gay and delightful girl who auctions off a kiss for charity tires of her life at the inn and marries a wealthy man, only to find that he is a drunkard and a rogue. Trial and tribulation follows rapidly upon each other, culminating in a tensely dramatic situation, in which her husband actually stakes her at cards against the fortunes of the man who loves her.

Eastern Ontario Leads Dominion in Recruiting

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, May 18.—The total number of recruits enlisted in Division No. 3, including Peterborough, Kingston and Ottawa, up to May 15th, was 32,673. When 7,657 more are secured this division will have given its full quota to the half million men Canada is to raise. Division No. 3 leads the Dominion in the proportion of men it has raised to its population, having already contributed one in every ten.

MILITARY MANOEUVRES BIG FEATURE OF THE HOLIDAY CELEBRATION

93rd Battalion Will Be Reviewed at the Exhibition Grounds in the Morning and There Will Be Military Exhibition and Sports in the Afternoon---Battalion Leave For Camp on the Following Morning---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

At a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting held in the recreation room of the Armouries last night arrangements were made for the patriotic demonstration and farewell to the 93rd Battalion on Victoria Day, May 24th. The event is expected to be one of the biggest military events ever held here, and will be the more impressive on account of the fact that next day the 93rd will leave Peterborough on the first stage of its journey to the European battlefields.

It was decided that on the morning of the 24th the battalion will be inspected and reviewed at 10:30 o'clock at the Exhibition Grounds. Efforts have been made to have Sir Sam Hughes visit Peterborough for that purpose, but in the event of the Minister being unable to be here, it is likely that Major Ponton, of the headquarters staff, will represent Colonel Hemming, the D.O.C., as reviewing officer. The review will give the citizens of Peterborough a chance to judge for themselves as to the training and capabilities of the 93rd.

In the afternoon there will be a grand programme of athletic sports and military exhibitions. The latter will include physical drill work, an exhibition by the 93rd Machine Gun Section, and a demonstration by the Battalion Signallers, the latter to include the laying and operation of a field telephone. The 93rd Battalion will meet a picked local team in a ball game, and there will be many field and track events, including a motor-cycle race. The Band of the 93rd will be in attendance. The ladies are arranging to sell meals and refreshments at the grounds, and all the proceeds will go to the regimental fund of the 93rd.

It is expected that there will be a huge crowd of visitors in Peterborough for the occasion, as the relatives and friends of the boys in the battalion will be here to say good-bye. It is probable that many will remain over until Thursday to see the departure of the 93rd for Barriefield.

Co. Sergt.-Major Stevenson of the 97th Battalion, American Legion, is a visitor in town to-day. He was at the armouries this morning.

North Bay, May 17.—The following well known hockey players joined the 228th Battalion to-day: McNamara Boys, of the "Soo"; Jack Brown and Gordon Keats, Torontos; Duncan, Pacific Coast, and Roy Beaudro, of the Kenora Thistles, besides seven amateurs. Following Colonel Earchman's campaign in the north country last week 30 more recruits reached North Bay on Tuesday, making a total of 250 for the week. The total strength of the regiment to date is 425, which is a remarkable record, taking into consideration the number of men who have already enlisted in the North Country.

Port Hope, May 17.—When the band of the 136th Battalion returned from their recruiting rally in the Province of Quebec, they brought with them a large Dane dog, tipping the scales at 130 pounds, which now appears regularly with them on parade.

Word was received to-day from Pte. Jack Garnett, who was reported a few days ago to be in the hospital suffering from a gunshot wound in the face. He says he is able to be up and around, and that the wound was not of a serious nature, although somewhat disfiguring. A German bullet took him above the left eye.

The City Council of Berlin, Ont., has decided to have moving pictures taken of their battalion, the 118th. This would provide a permanent record of the North Oxford unit, which shortly goes into camp. The cost was estimated at $270 and this sum has been set aside for the picture, the arrangements for which have already been made.

The 80th Battalion, of Belleville, which includes a number from Peterborough, have left Belleville. Following is a despatch from Belleville referring to their final departure:

It was truly a patriotic demonstration that attended the leave-taking of the 80th Battalion from our city on Saturday night. For the moment

CONCERT AT FRONT BY A CANADIAN BAND

Signaller Jack Heron Says Heads Were Held a Little Higher and Backs a Little Straighter When the Band Played "O Canada"

A LETTER FROM FRONT

Mrs. M.A. Heron, 304 Brock street is in receipt of the following most interesting letter from her son Signaller Jack Heron at the front with the 5th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery.

My dear parents,—Had I been told twelve months ago that I should on the last day of February be living in a monastry in France you can imagine with what incredulity I should have heard the oracle, yet here I am in a beautiful old building in part of which monks still carry on as they did scores of years ago and in the other portion of which about 200 soldiers are housed during convalescence. But I must explain how I got here.

Our battery was moving---why and where I cannot say. We started off one Friday night and travelled about 20 miles in a fine rain which soaked us all. There was no horse for me so I had to ride on the timber of the firing battery wagon.

I was tired by the time we reached our destination but we had to fix up horse lines and feed and water the animals. Everything was wet and everybody felt miserable. I was carrying two pails of water up from the stream when I slipped and fell throwing both pails of water over my head and down my neck. We had hot tea and went to "bed" in a barn. I found that we were billeted in the largest farm in Northern France. We practiced signalling, every day for six days. There is just one incident I should like to relate.

One night we got our horses to do some observation work and set out. I found they had given me a great heavy horse more like an elephant.

We had to jump some ditches and my horse I think had never before considered the possibility of his jumping even a three foot stream. Buster (that is his name) gathered himself into a ball like elastic then loosed out like a spring---and we were over. After that I dropped to the rear and gave him a good start at the jumps. It was some nerve (and body) racking experience.

Well on Friday morning we started off on a route march---in snow and rain. I was not feeling too well but stuck with them until we got back to three or four miles from our billet, then dropped out and lay down in a field for half an hour.

I walked back by easy stages and lay on my back for the remainder of that day and the three succeeding days. Then they put me in a hospital where my diagnosis was "influenza with complications". I was there until a week ago—existing for fourteen days on bread and milk, oxo and custard. Now I'm up here to convalesce. In addition to having my temperature registered twice every day and taking medicine thrice in the 24 hours I wash floors and go hunting souvenirs.

If we wash floors in the forenoon we can go out in the afternoon, and I have taken advantage every day yet.

The first day I went down to the village nothing of interest occurred except perhaps my helping a mule take a load of coal up a slippery hill in one of the French three-wheeled carts. The owner invited me (in faulty English and I have no doubt excellent French) to partake of liquid refreshment in a nearby estaminet. I refused. I can shrug my shoulders now quite nicely.

On the second day I went to see some graves near here of India's sons who fell at Ypres. Sixteen of them are buried in a little plot—on one of the crosses is this pathetic legend "Unknown" died of wounds.

INVESTIGATION INTO REBELLION NOW UNDER WAY

Government Knew Several Days in Advance That the Irish Rebels Planned Open Revolt But Failed to Disarm Them

REBELS HAD 15,200 MEN

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 18. — The causes leading up to the Irish rebellion and the steps taken by the Government to put down the revolt were under investigation when the newly appointed Royal Commission met to-day.

Lord Hardinge, presiding said the Commission would inquire into the movements leading up to the outbreak, to whom the information of these movements was first communicated and what steps were taken.

Sir Matthew Nathan, former undersecretary for Ireland, who resigned with his chief, Augustine Birrell, was the first witness.. Nathan made a lengthy statement outlining the formation of the Nationalist volunteers which were destined he said, as counter organization to Sir Edward Carson's Ulster volunteers during the Home Rule strife. A vast majority of Nationalist volunteers remained loyal, Nathan testified.

The British government knew several days in advance that the Irish rebels planned open revolt, but did not disarm them, fearing great bloodshed. Sir Nathan made this admission to-day before the Royal Commission. Secret service officers had learned that the Irish leaders had been informed that the Germans would cooperate with them in a great land, sea and air offensive. Sir Matthew said the Irish constabulary and military were at once warned and it was undoubtedly due to these precautions that Sir Roger Casement was captured a few hours after he landed. At the beginning of the disturbance the rebels numbered about 15,200, Sir Matthew stated. Irish rebel sympathizers in America contributed large sums of money for buying arms and printing seditious literature, the former Under Secretary added. Nathan said the authorities believed if the proposed rebellion were let alone, it would die of its own accord, without bloodshed. He said the officials realized that forcible interference was certain to cause serious disorders.

It was believed that the Royal Irish constabulary, with regular troops at Curragh Barracks, would be sufficient to cope with the situation. He admitted that the authorities were mistaken in this calculation.

"The rebels exhibited greater organization ability and greater military skill than we had attributed to them," admitted Sir Matthew. "They also acted with great courage."

"Was there not license required to bear arms in Ireland?" asked Lord Hardinge.

"Yes," responded Nathan, "but it was not enforced."

Overseas Club is Arranging For Empire Day in the Schools

The Overseas Club is arranging for a series of Empire Day addresses in the schools on May 23rd. Prominent citizens are being approached by members of the club and it is the intention to provide notable local speakers for this occasion which will more than ever impress upon the school children the significance of Empire Day. The meetings will be held in the schools at 2.30 o'clock and an interesting and memorable occasion is promised for the school ars. This is one of the first evidences of the interest of the Overseas club, the tobacco fund apart.

WELCOME.

The glasses if you need them. What a wonderful comfort properly fitted glasses are to a pair of weary eyes. They are new sightsavers. Do your eyes need them? If so, don't delay another day, but come and see Dr. Lacey and we better. 616 George street.

ALAS POOR COELEBS!

This war time means a hard time for the unfortunate bachelor. If he doesn't enlist, he is blacklisted. Now another blow descends upon his poor poll, by the increase of his municipal poll tax five hundred per cent. The bachelors of the city, all and singular, are being served with green poll tax notices in which the modest "$1.00" of happier times is overprinted with a bold "$5.00." One drop of mercy in the done, is the overprint of "ten" days on the "one day" in which he is required to cash up. There seems to be no way of escape for the bachelor. If he "screws his courage" to the popping point and seeks to escape the moral humiliation and actual hardship of an increased poll tax by taking refuge in matrimony and be coming a householder and respectable ratepayer, he is faced with a 150 per cent. increase in the marriage license fee—from $2 to $5. This is enough to drive him b... the ranks of the 83rd the military fighting ranks where he has a chance to return unwounded and sound, instead of entering the arena of matrimonial warfare, where there is certainty of his figuring in the casualty lists, sooner or later. Truly the poor bachelor is cornered—beset on both flanks. It is stated that when the scorpion is surrounded by a ring of fire he stings himself to death. No bachelor who values his skin, will do that; his only recourse is to grin and bear it, or to betake him to a consolation that will not easily be available after September 16th.

RUSHING MILLIONS THROUGH

The rushing of a loan or gift—the terms are, in this case, convertible—of 15 million dollars through the estimates, to the Canadian Northern Railway, shows an undue anxiety on the part of the government, to favour the company. The Borden government have, in this matter, shown themselves unfaithful stewards of the people's money. According to the government's practice this matter was introduced into the Parliament at the end of the session. No time was given adequate to the importance of the proposal to discuss its merits and see that the interests of the people were safeguarded. Fifteen million dollars is a good deal of money to be carelessly and perfunctorily voted. Another object to the proposal was in the form in which it was presented as an item in the supplementary estimates, where no safeguarding amendment could be offered. If the proposal had been embodied in a bill there would be a chance for members to offer amendments which precluded, by submitting it as an item in the supplementary estimates. For instance an amendment might be offered and very properly passed to the effect that the people should have some "show" for their money, by provision being made for the government taking over sufficient of the common stock to give the people a controlling holding of stock. This would be good business, especially considering the munificent gifts the government have showered on the Canadian Northern. In presenting the proposal in the estimates the government are depriving the people's representatives of a chance to consider the terms on which the loan is made—the item must be accepted or struck out. A sort of high and deliver attitude is forced upon Parliament, and through Parliament, upon the people.

NOT TRAINED TO ECONOMY

Canadian woodsmen are in England to cut timber which is in urgent demand. "Every effort is being made to have the work done economically," says a British official. Just there a clash may occur. The Canadians may cut timber fast and well, but as far as doing it economically is concerned, ... this a country where even ... timber cutting has not been much practised.—Toronto Star.

A BAR TO TRADE.

Scarcity of ocean transportation is evidently a bar to expansion of trade; and this truth is emphasized in a practical way. The Export Association of Canada, which was organized a few months ago for the purpose of securing orders for Canada from the other portions of the British Empire and the Allied countries, has booked actual orders with Canadian firms within the past few weeks aggregating more than half a million dollars. This amount could have been increased many fold but for the scarcity of ocean transportation. That the Association has been so successful in spite of the scarcity of space and the abnormally high prevailing freight rate should encourage Canadian manufacturers to prepare for export business. The Association is sending a special representative to Siberia this month. He will go via Vancouver, and will open offices in Vladivostock, continuing his investigation and sales as far west as Omsk, on the Trans-Siberian Railway. If Canada years ago had taken as energetic and practical interests in encouraging ship building as it has done in lavishing expenditure upon internal facilities of communication, even if it had had to divide its expenditures, there would have been better trade promotion facilities than we now have. There is now no lack of transportation facilities to get goods and wares to the seaboard, but there our transportation facilities end in a blind alley. The ocean highway is virtually closed from lack of shipping.

POLICIES NEEDED.

Mr. Arthur Hawke, is engaged in a much more patriotic work now than when he was leading the hosts of the "British Born" in the 1911 elections in a "patriotic" campaign against an imaginary danger. He addressed a Toronto Liberal Club in Toronto a night or two ago and advocated for Ontario "a progressive construction policy." That can only come from having a progressive government, with constructive ideas and ideals. Government is not merely spending money. That is a mere matter of administration, the role of the paymaster. Real government is the problem of creating money. This can be done by the the application of a progressive policy that will develop all our resources, agricultural and mineral, which would involve development of our industrial and commercial resources. Such a policy would include a programme of improvement of municipal, civic and social conditions so that the agencies of development, the people of the country, should be made "fit" in the highest sense, for implementing the details of a progressive policy. With the government as leader, civic bodies and municipal bodies could and would follow its example and would initiate policies, with a definite aim of accomplishment, with a spirit of ambition towards definite ends, something to be worked up to. This would mean the elimination of the haphazard, aimless, hand-to-mouth methods of federal, provincial and civic governments, that prevail in this country; methods in which the creative, the achieving element is lacking; in which, instead of creating circumstances and conditions, and governing them, governments, general and civic, allow circumstances and conditions to govern them—the tail to wag the dog. We need a stronger spirit of initiative, a creative spirit, which is the real spirit of progress. As it is this spirit is lamentably lacking. We content ourselves with picking up the "wind-falls" in the orchard of opportunity instead of rigging a climbing apparatus and hand-picking the fruit of opportunity. This may be regarded as academic talk, and so it is; but at the same time it is pertinent and will continue to be pertinent, so long as the conditions that justify it exist—till we come to be governed in all the arenas of our interests by creative statesmanship instead of by the slaves of circumstance; till true patriotism, the good of the country and the community, are the governing motives of governments, big and little, till partisanship becomes an incidental detail instead of a devotion; till power and office become recognized as responsibilities and not as rewards.

CANADA'S PAUPERIZATION OF HER RAILWAY INTERESTS

It is as easy to pauperize an interest as an individual, and the established policy of helping promoters to build railways for themselves has developed a condition demanding heroic treatment. If transportation, like manufacture, had to pay for itself it would have developed normally, and no service would be rendered that was not worth its cost. But transportation has been made in Canada, a dependent ward of the State, without restraint or supervision. It has plunged headlong into debt which the State feels under a conscientious obligation to discharge. Following the postponement of the case of the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific, which postponement has cost the Dominion $23,000,000, the case of the Quebec and Saguenay has come up for settlement. For this $5,000,000 is asked. As with the other two lines, the question to decide is whether the Dominion shall buy the road or merely pay for it and leave it the property of the promoters. If the issue would stay there, the road with is debts and losses, might be a good thing to give away. But it will not stay there. Private corporations will not continue to operate unless they can make the road, or rather the public, pay. If this ward of the State to continue to lose money the loss will inevitably come from the Dominion. Assuming responsibility for the debts and good name of the railways makes the assumption of ownership inevitable.

It is deeply to be regretted that the Dominion Government faced the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific situatio with helpless incapacity. Absorbed in a multitude of little things and distracted by the necessity of a few really important decisions regarding the war, the Ministry could do nothing but yield to one more prosperous demand. Will the next demand and the next be met in the same way? The outlook is not hopeful and will not improve unless the people bring pressure to bear on their representatives. With regard to these lines there is also the issue between keeping what we pay for or giving it to private corporations.

Arguments against Governmental ownership of railed highways have lost their force. Political corruption did service for many years, as if one privately-owned railway seeking public money was not a greater corrupting influence that the entire railway inflease under public management. No one knows this better than the experienced politicians. A few cheap men in sinecures under public ownership would bear no comparison to the millionaires created, the vast payments to subsidy-getters, the freight-rate favoritism that made vast monopolies possible, and the manipulation of Governments under private ownership. Governmental incompetence has been urged as if the Governmental handling of private railway corporations did not require vastly greater ability than the mere operation of the roads. Dealing with shippers, passengers, employees and construction engineers does not demand nearly the capacity required for dealing with magnates. All that is now concealed would be openly exposed under Governmental management, and the public would soon learn that evils seen are much less formidable than evils hidden.

The real and seldom discussed evil of Government ownership arises through the possibility of get-rich-quick schemes through promoting comparatively useless extensions. The man with the pull could buy up a few thousand acres and persuade the Government to toss a million in to his lap by extending a railway to his holding. An effective remedy for this would scarcely be considered but the danger could be mitigated by an application of the local improvement principle, which would leave little, preferably nothing as a reward for pre-emption. The people must not be misled into attributing the situation to the war or into hoping, with the Government, for some miracul our deliverance. The urgent duty devolving on the Dominion cannot be evaded without disastrous results.

PATRIOTIC FUND WILL NEED $10,000,000 FOR NEXT YEAR

Conference in Toronto Discusses Problems Involved in Care of Dependents—Average Family Helped is $40 a Month—Better Off Than Previously, It Is Stated

TORONTO, May 17.—Problems in the granting of assistance to the relatives of enlisted men were discussed by the delegates from the Eastern Branch Oranization in conference today at Foresters' Hall. The question of eligibility for assistance was taken up and many cases with unusual features were considered showing the difficulties the local branches have to contend with in the administration of the fund. Most of the members seemed to be of the opinion that the young married women, without children, should not receive as much help as by rule they are entitled to.

Sons Share a Problem

Sir Herbert Ames stated that their great difficulty did not lie with the direct dependants of the soldiers. It was what he termed "indirect dependants" that gave them most trouble. For example, one son of a family went on active service. He has helped, with others, to support a household. This was an example of the problems which sometimes faced them. The young strong, married woman was another proble. In most cases these were better working than 'gadding about.'

"The other great problem troubling us at headquarters is the marriage after enlistment of a young man who had no intention of wedding when he did enlist. This man's wife should get no help. All these constitute a very severe drain on the resources of th fund."

"The question in the first place concerning those on the edge has always been submitted to Ottawa" stated Rev. A. H. Moore, of Quebec When grandfathers and grandmothers, for example are given as dependants we always do so. When the question of remote dependants is left open, the local branch is liable to make too big a grant. Remote dependents should be left to some other organization than the patriotic fund."

It has been our practice to recognise the marriage of men subsequent to enlistment, but we have often had our doubts about the desirability of helping some of them. The local branch needs some specific instructions with regard to the assistent advocacy of members of the fund, who desire to help friends of their's who go on active service. They often want special terms for these."

Might Be Breach of Faith.

Mrs. E. S. Green, of Grey County, emphatically opposed the cutting off of grants to the married women without children. These women are entitled to the money, because their husbands have enlisted on this understanding.

"How should we treat indirect dependents?" asked Sir Herbert Ames 'Should we err on the side of generosity?"

"Surely that is a question of money," said a delegate. 'If we have the funds we an afford to be generous; if we have not we ought to retrench.

"Well," replied Sir Herbert, 'we have enough money for this year but we shall require at least $10,000,000 next year, so that cases like these should be given great consideration before being helped.

"Should married women receive assistance if the marriage took place after enlistment?" asked Sir Herbert.

"No, no, no," answered the delegates emphatically.

Referred 'Baby' to Committee

"What are you going to do if there is subsequently a baby " asked Mr Chas. L. Dunbar of Guelph. This question was referred to a committee.

"The reservist's wife has given us least trouble" said Mr. W. H. Lovering, of Hamilton. The reason of this may be their nationality, for around Hamilton the Scotch race predominate.

Mr. Lovering introduced a discussion on the determination of assistance. He pleaded for personal contact with those who desired relief "One minute's conversation will do more than a week's correspondence Uniformity in the scale of assistance is both possible and desirable. Once eligibility is admitted there should be a fixed sum that the applicant might obtain. I am in favor of the lowering of the amount allowed at present in most cases."

"Post-enlistment wives, who eventuall have a baby, granted good conduct and the desire to make a home should be put on the list after the baby's birth."

"The question of working wives has always bothered us as it has other branches. We have never discouraged women from staying in active service, but where they have a family, we always think they ought to stay at home. Very deservedly man women who formerly had to work hard, are now having for the first time in their married lives, a little rest and enjoyment.

Mr. Lovering suggested that all wives receiving the seperation, whether childless or not, should not receive more than $5 a month.

"The average family under our scale" said Mr. J. K McNeille, of Lindsay, "is $40 a month better off than before the soldier's enlistment Of course, remember, I am only speaking of the average family."

"Seventy-five per cent., of the donors of this fund are institutional and municipal," said Mr. W. C Noxon, of Toronto. "Undoubtedly we shall need more money in 1917 and that money will be raised by taxation, mean municipal taxation Mr. McGarry, of the Provincial Government, indicated that yesterday The test into the economy, fairness and honesty of the administration of this fund will not come now, but after the war."

Big Families a Problem.

North Bay, through their delegate Mr. A. Jackman, wished the case of men with more than four children placed before the conference. A large proportion of the men up we had very large families some of them as many as seven or eight children.

The Oshawa branch, though Dr T. E. Kaiser, urged absolute uniformity. "We have also come to this conclusion that the next levy should be one of taxation."

'We are also all the time getting letters that the scale should be uniform," said Sir Herbert Ames, 'but I wish to point this out. The easterns ity limits is that maximum, and we in the head office, always advise less for smaller towns. Yet in the North Country of Ontario, coal, especially in winter, is very much dearer than in the south, so that the rates throughout the North Country need to be higher than in Montreal and Toronto."

We have been trying to put it on the honour of each committee.

If in your community they can live on a little less, than we trust to you to save the fund by so much money.

"We don't want this uniformity business in Collingwood at all," declared Mr. David Williams, The allowance that would just be fair there would make millionaires of the people in the town of Stayner. Another thing, we promised the men on the firing line certain things and it would not be fair to make any reduction."

"Suppose the fund runs out," interjected several voices.

"It won't run out, while there are good Canadians to Contribute," replied Mr. Williams, amid cheers.

Is Scale too High.

A committee was appointed to meet to-night to discuss the following questions: Should childless wives be helped? Is a reduction in the scale necessary

A discussion on the desirability of withholding at times as a disciplinary measure the grants to women and should saving be compulsory, was begun by Mr. H. T. Watt, of Brantford.

"We used to advise the women," said he, 'but we found that moral suasion did work out very well, so when a woman owed money, we sent her a cheque for part and a deposit account slip for the rest. 'All of them now allow us to make this deduction which is not made in an arbitrary manner, but after the necessity of saving for the husband's return, has been gently pointed out."

'To deal with the matter of credit given to soldier's wives, we sent grocers and butchers a letter warning them that debts contracted after the women came on the fund, would not be settled by it."

Why Do Women Worry?

A Sign of Failing Health

Worry is a disease—and it's more—it produces other diseases, because it breaks down the nerves and saps the vitality of the body.

What a pity women don't realize that if they were well—if the blood was nutritious — if the nerves were strong—if all the organs were active—then the little things that irritate and prey on the mind wouldn't receive a moment's thought.

The woman who worries has a poor appetite—she sleeps poorly. If it only lasted for a day or two it might be of small consequence—but she grows limp, miserable, unhappy—worse day by day.

She needs Ferrozone which cures worry by curing the conditions that render worry possible. For nervous, weak women, no tonic is so good; thousands it has cured just like Mrs. M. F. Etherington, of Troy, who writes: "I am quit willing to give a public testimonial for Ferrozone, believing it to be a tonic of superior excellence and one that will rapidly build up strength and supply new energy to anyone not feeling well. Last spring I was in a very poor condition of health. 'I was nervous, felt tired, and completely worn out. No doubt it's quite a common complaint with ladies of my age, but I placed great reliance in Ferrozone, and took it for several weeks. It made me quite strong, and in face I have been in better health ever since. I can heartily recommend Ferrozone."

This is why it gives color, clearness to the skin, buoyancy to the step, brightness to the eyes—because with good digestion and activity of the body in all its parts there's health. Price 50c per box at all dealers.

Wind Storm Did A Lot of Damage Around Hastings

Trees Were Uprooted, Silos and Fences Levelled to the Ground —Hastings News

HASTINGS, May 16.—A very severe wind storm passed over this district on Thursday last, doing considerable damage. Trees were up-rooted, buildings blown over, fences levelled to the ground and some silos blown to pieces.

The weather is not very favourable for spring seeding and some of the farmers have practically nothing done yet.

Sunday last was duly observed as Mothers' Day in most of the churches, the addresses and music being in keeping with the occasion.

Word is to hand of the death at the front of a nephew of Mrs. (Rev.) D. A. Thompson in the person of Crawford Jamieson, whose parents reside in Toronto.

The soldiers attended divine service in the English church on Sunday morning. They were accompanied by the local band.

A number of the boys marched to Warkworth last week and rather appeared to enjoy the outing.

The W.M.S. of the Campbellford district met in convention in the Methodist church, Hastings, on Thursday last, with a large attendance of delegates from the different auxiliaries. The morning session opened with devotional exercises led by Stirling Auxiliary, after which the minutes of the last convention were read and adopted. This was followed by reports from the various auxiliaries, circles and bands, all of which were most inspiring. Some other items of business were disposed of and adjournment was made for dinner, which was served in the basement of the church. Needless to say this part of the programme was much enjoyed, everything in the way of appetizing food being set before the hungry guests and served in the most pleasing manner. After ample justice had been done to the viands a short time was passed in social intercourse, until 1.30 o'clock, when the afternoon programme was taken up. This began with a consecration service led by the Havelock Auxiliary and was followed by a very capable address by the district organizer, Mrs. Lawlor of Norwood, who showed by the way in which she handled her subject that she was mistress of the situation. Mrs (Rev.) Sanderson of Campbellford, next appeared in a well rendered solo, which was followed by an interesting paper, "How to secure and interest new members," by Mrs. J. Atkinson of Dartford.

After a discussion on this paper, the Hastings Mission Band gave a chorus, "Scatter the Light."

A question drawer was next conducted by Mrs. Ashton of Campbellford, which proved very interesting.

A solo by Miss R. Andrews of Norwood, and a paper, "China and Its Problems," by Mrs. B. W. Squire, brought a very successful convention to a close.

It was decided to hold the next meeting in Warkworth.

Mrs. R. G. Lawlor, D. Organizer.
Mrs. L. H. Stephens, Sec'y.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Stewart of Toronto, are renewing acquaintances in and around Hastings.

Miss Getrie Huycke of Peterborough, spent a few days here during the week with her uncle, Mr. L. T. Huycke.

Miss Pollock of Stirling, spent Thursday in town.

Mr. Douglas Dickson and child of Kingston is visiting her father, Mr. Jas. Buck.

Mrs. McCutcheon of Stirling, spent the week end here with her daughter Miss McCutcheon, teacher

Mr. Breene of Lindsay, travelling agent for the J. Deere Plow Co., was in town on Monday in the interests of the firm.

Mr. Ernie Tate is occupying the house recently vacated by Dr. Wade and family.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison of Keene, spent Thursday in Hastings.

The local lacrosse team has been re-organized as follows:
Hon. Pres.—Alex. Wilson.
Pres.—P. M. Howard.

FARMING WITH THE AID OF FORTY PER CENT. DYNAMITE

Interesting Demonstration Was Conducted Yesterday Afternoon on the Farm of Mr. R. A. Wilson, Otonabee—A Speedy and Effective Way of Removing Stumps, Trees, Stones, etc., From the Land—Peterborough Hardware Company Will Handle the Local Sale of C. X. L. Stumping Powder.

What a few sticks of stumping powder will do to stumps, rocks, trees and other obstructions that hinder free and easy cultivation of the land, was demonstrated yesterday afternoon to the apparent satisfaction of a large number of farmers who foregathered on the farm of Mr. R. A. Wilson, Lot 24, Concession 13, Otonabee. The occasion was the demonstration of the use of C.X.L. stumping powder by the Canadian Explosives Ltd., Montreal. Mr. J. C. Lowrey, representing the manufacturing company, conducted the demonstration while Mr. A. W. Pratten was present in the interests of the Peterborough Hardware Company who will handle the local sale of C.X.L. stumping powder together with supplies.

A Safe Method.

Those who have been long accustomed to view the use of explosives with fear must have suffered a change of heart Stumping with dynamite has long since passed the experimental stage as was conclusively proven yesterday. It is a speedy, safe and economical method of removing obstructions from the land. Leading orchardists of to-day are planting fruit trees in holes exploded with C.X.L. stumping powder instead of in spade dug holes. The subsoil is loosened up and enables the roots of the trees to immediately expand in search of nourishment and not remain cramped up in a limited space.

Removing Pine Stumps.

Yesterday's demonstration opened with the removal of a pine stump that to the old fashioned stumping machine would have presented many difficulties. In all about fifteen minutes was required to lay the charge and remove the stump. Nothing but a fragment of the original stump was left in the hole. The stump was removed at a cost of about forty cents. The next stump was even larger and more difficult. Underneath it was a large air space which tended to reduce the resistance necessary to give the powder the proper effect. This stump was removed as speedily and effectively as the first one. Not a fragment remained in the hole which was conical in shape and could be easily filled in.

A Large Boulder.

A large boulder weighing according to actual measurement in the neighbourhood of five tons was turned completely upside down in the hole in which it had long been buried. This was done with a comparatively small charge so that when the stone was broken up by a second charge it could more easily be removed from the hole. The stone was broken by the simple expedient of placing a few sticks of powder on top and covering it with what is known as a mud cap. It was shattered into fragments small enough to handle.

The climax was reached when a large-sized elm tree was removed from the centre of a field. Some of the spectators were inclined to doubt whether such a feat could be accomplished. This doubt was speedily dispelled by the demonstrator who lost no time in preparing the tree for its fate. There was a muffled explosion and the tree took an aerial course accompanied by a shower of earth and stones. The demonstration was complete, and the faces of the farmers registered satisfaction. They gathered around the fallen tree and held a post mortem, after which they dispersed.

How It Is Packed.

C.X.L. stumping powder is packed in boxes containing one hundred cartridges weighing fifty pounds to the box. It is sold by the Peterborough Hardware Company. Farmers who may not have sufficient need for a fifty-pound box can often induce one or more of their neighbours to make a joint effort. Close to the field where the large stone mentioned above was removed, was a field of clover about twenty acres in extent. In the field was two pine stumps. They have been there for years. Stumping powder would remove them at a cost not exceeding one dollar.

Increased Demand.

With the increased demand for agricultural produces, caused by the war, which is now devastating the European countries, the farmer cannot afford to have unproductive land. Every acre of tillable land will be required to offset the great falling off in agricultural products, and it is up to the farmer to take advantage of this situation.

C.X.L. stumping powder is an explosive manufactured expressly for the farming trade; it is less dangerous to handle than Dynamite and more effective for agricultural purposes. It has been rightly termed by thousands of satisfied users as the farmer's friend.

The farmer of to-day cannot afford to continue cultivating land strewn with stumps and boulders, getting only half a crop and spending a portion of the profits on repairs and renewal of equipment, or letting valuable land under stumps and boulders lie idle.

FOUR LICENSED CLUBS ABANDON EARLY CLOSING

York, Toronto, Peterboro' London Object—"No Punishment," Says Flavelle

TORONTO, May 17.—The York, Toronto, London and Peterborough Clubs have notified the Ontario License Board that they are changing their attitude on 8 o'clock closing. Other clubs have probably taken the same ground, but intimation has not yet been received from them regarding the discontinuance of the previous understanding to close at 8. It is understood that the position of the clubs is that they would not have adopted voluntary 8 o'clock closing had they known at the time that prohibition was coming.

The only punishment the License Board could inflict if they felt so inclined would be to cancel the licenses; they could not tamper with the hours. Chairman Flavelle indicated yesterday that he did not think the board would attempt to punish the clubs.

200,000 WAR ORPHANS.

Religious Question Complicates the Problem of State Care in France.

PARIS, (Correspondence) May 17.—Eight hundred thousand French children have been made fatherless by the war, according to a statement made by Senator Jenavrier in a debate in the Senate. This number exceeds by 10 per cent the average total of birth in France. Half the child hood of France ha estimates, will be brought up without a paternal guide

The Government and the Senate are considering how they shall be cared for. A bill prepared by the Government and somewhat modified by the Public Instruction Committee of the Senate declares in principle that the State shall assume the expense of bringing up; educating every child whose father has either been killed or disabled by the war. The "wards of the nation" they are to be called and special guardians are to be provided for then under the provisions of the bill under discussion. The special guardians are to be appointed by committees in each department, under the general supervision of a central committee. A mother who accepts the patronage of the State for her child or children must accept the guardianship of a person outside her family. This provision has encountered the opposition of the Conservative and Catholic members of the Senate, who see in it a rupture of the "sacred union" or parties, and a measure destined to a political end through the lay education of children of Catholic parents.

Under the law of separation of Church and State Government could not give a child religious instruction. Moreover, it is pointed out, the child's bringing up under the patronage of the State would be largely supervised and controlled by the Prefects, who are the recognized political agents of the Government. The Conservatives demand for mothers aid of the State and, at the same time, the right and the facilities for giving their children such religious instruction as they see fit. Under the present laws half-orphans would have no relief whatever if the mother refused the conditions offered by the State, since pensions are allowed to full orphans only. It has been proposed to remedy this deficiency by a special law, now under consideration in the Chamber of Deputies. If a compromise is not reached by the Senate while the war lasts, it is deemed certain that the contention will revive the struggle between th Catholics and the other elements of Parliament after hostilities have ceased

BUDAPEST (Correspondence) May 17.—An official report says that the number of Hungarian 'war orphans' up to the beginning of 1916 was 36,400. The Ministry of the Interior has appealed to the local authorities to appoint special commissions to supervise the bringing up of these war orphans and exercise control over their guardians.

What to Do to Get Fat and Increase Weight

The Real Cause of Thinness

Most people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Most thin people stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay there in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body —something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power

For such a condition it is well to recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe a patented drug, but is simply a careful combination of six of the most effective and powerful assimilative and flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet has been wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often, according to reports of users, has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold at all good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 Antoine St. Montreal and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

A BELGIAN REFUGEE'S GRATITUDE

His Pathetic Letter to a Peterborough Friend—His Devastated Home Described

The accompanying letter, which was written to Mr. Frank Whitehouse of this city, is well worth a perusal. The writer, Mr. Cyrille Vaststracte, is a Belgium refugee, now residing in Sherborne, Dorset, in England, where Mr. Whitehouse met him during his visit to England last summer. He writes a clear and intelligent letter, with a full appreciation of what Canada has done for the relief of his distressed compatriots:

Sherborne, April 8, 1916.

My Dear Mr. Whitehouse—I received your most welcome letter. It is quite comforting for me, a Belgian, to notice how nobly your townspeople have responded to the call in behalf of the Belgian relief fund. I have no authoritative voice, but let me assure you that, as an individual, I am only expressing with my hearty and sincere thanks, the feelings of gratitude of every Belgian for whatever is done for our so sorely tried a nation. Noble Canada, all Belgium loves you and fully appreciates what you have done for her. Citizens of Peterborough, you are entitled to a large share in our humble thanks for your generous help. Your magnanimous effort in raising £2,800 pounds in three days from a population of 23,000 people speaks for itself. You members of the committee to whom the initiative is due of this work of charity, you may be proud of your efforts. How much I would like to express to every one of you my admiration for the work accomplished and crowned with such big success, and how much I would like to see you Mr. Whitehouse once more, not like the occasional traveller I met at the time, but as the true gentleman inspired with noble ambitions you have proved to be. Your esteemed letter will remain as a remembrance in which I will always see with pleasure what the committee of Peterborough, and of which you were a worker, have done for our cause, and a lasting thought of gratitude will accompany it.

His Devastated Home.

Concerning the photos of Belgium I promised to send you, I shall only be able to send you some when the war is over. Impossible to get anything out of Belgium now. Since November last I received no news from my place, Roulers, situated ever since the last sixteen months, within ten miles of the firing line. My premises by that time were still standing. I could never have dreamt to have such a prolonged stay in England on account of the war. Only those can realise what war is, who, having to abandon every thing at home, have to take refuge abroad quite unprovided. Hard times we have indeed for the time being, but courage keeps up, with the hope of final victory on our side. Meanwhile, however, wicked Germany is ruining our once so prosperous country by exactions of every kind. Not satisfied with the ruins of towns and historical buildings they now systematically cripple and kill all the economical resources of our nation to the advantage of their own. In my place Roulers, a manufacturing town of 28,000 inhabitants, there is not one mill working. People walk about the streets and dare not speak to each other for fear of suspicion from the Germans. People do not leave their houses unless forced to by some business matter. On any pretext civilians are heavily fined especially the well to do people. Our town is transformed into a big military camp, with at least 25,000 German soldiers. Living is very expensive; no meat can be obtained. Terror reigns as master, and many hardships are endured. I am told that people with the continuous strain of fear and apprehension are so much changed that they can hardly be recognized. What a change we shall notice once we get back. Nevertheless, in the present trials we have the satisfaction of having held aloof the banner of honour. Testimonies of sympathy for our cause have risen from everywhere. We have the right on our side, and I trust that once again our flag will float out to the breezes of Heaven on independent Belgium.

I thank you, Mr. Whitehouse, for your kind wishes, and shall be glad to receive every now and then a line from you.

'Tis sweet to be remembered
As through this world we stray,
To know we have one kindred soul
To cheer us on our way.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortsville, B.O., writes: "I wish to state our gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it saved our child which a friend said would soon pass on to the grave."

THE PROBLEM OF CANADIAN SHIPBUILDING

The Cunard Steamship Company recently bought three second-hand steamers, having failed to find builders able to quote for new tonnage. For the three boats, the company paid a higher rate per ton than they would have paid before the war for new vessels. Two years ago the little British schooner "Coquitlam City" was built on the Pitt River. She had her adventures and, becoming severely strained during a voyage, was laid up. The boat has just been chartered in San Francisco to load lumber for Australia next July. A $200,000 cement order recently had to be refused by a Canadian firm on account of the shortage in tonnage.

There are but three incidents of a tonnage shortage which is daily becoming worse. It affects the conduct and the length of the war and the transaction of business during the war. Its most serious effect is likely to come after the war, when we will all be clamoring for tonnage during the big commercial campaign which will then be waged.

In the House at Ottawa last week Sir George Foster, minister of Trade and Commerce, said that the government had made efforts to have vessels built. In the first place, it had asked responsible persons what amount of tonnage subsidy would be required to encourage the building of wooden vessels of economical tonnage say from 2,000 to 5,000 tons. In reply it had received an offer to construct such ships if a subsidy of $8 a ton were paid for 15 years, or $80 a ton in all. He did not think that was reasonable.

The government had also received an offer to build steel ships at the rate of from $125 to $135 a ton with delivery in the latter part of 1917. Sir George said the price was high and that the time of completion was too far distant. Therefore, he thought that it would be necessary to consider first the period of emergencies and then the period following the close of the war. As far as the latter period is concerned, he held that a country with Canada's producing capacity should have a considerable and a growing merchant marine, and that government assistance might be necessary to that end.

It is doubtful whether this country will be able to build many ships for "the period of emergencies," but it is certain that if we are to enter the shipbuilding business, with any success, for the period following the war we must begin at once. Sir George Foster intimated that the government might be willing to co-operate in a shipbuilding enterprise.—Monetary Times.

"THE PRINCESS PAT"

"The Princess Pat" the latest triumphant success produced at that palace of historic art, the Cort Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, Thursday May 25, under the direction of John Cort. The book and lyrics of this delightful three-act comic opera are by Henry Blossom, the music by Victor Herbert, and the staging by Fred G. Latham.

This is the combination that gave to the stage such other pronounced hits as "Mdlle. Modiste," "The Red Mill," "The Prima Donna" and "The Only Girl". In "The Princess Pat" the authors have added to their already enviable reputation. The opera has an abundance of humor, and sweet charm both in book and music. The story of the play to which the gifted Victor Herbert has set his score has to do mainly with the Princess Patrice di Montaldo (nee Patrice O'Connor called Pat for short. The young lady has come to believe that her husband, an Italian nobleman, has grown negligent in his demonstration of affection since their marriage and to bring him again to that desired condition she enters into a scheme with Bob Darrow, a sort of adventurer chap, to arouse his jealousy. To do this she begins a wild flirtation with Anthony Oleson, a wealthy old duffer who is engaged to marry Pat's friend, Grace Holbrook. Matters are carried out to a point of elopement and all disagreements are brushed aside and everything ends happily, as it should in all good comic operas. It is a simple story, but told with scintillating humour. Numbers in Mr. Herberts score which have already become popular the county over are: 'Allies' 'she Him Guess,' 'I'd Like to be a Quitter', but I find it Hard to Quit' 'Love is Best of all,' 'For Better or for Worse' 'Neapolitan Love Song' 'I wish I was an Island in an Ocean of Girls,' 'Flirting', 'All for You,' 'In a little World for two,' 'The shoes of Husband Number one as worn by number two,' and 'Two Laughing Irish Eyes.' Pretty girls, elaborate costumes, augumented Victor Herbert Orchestra and a cast of superior excellence completes the splendid presentation.

IMPRESSIVE SERMON BY HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP O'BRIEN

A Number of Clergymen From Peterboro' Attended the Funeral in Lindsay of the Late Capt. Kylie

The remains of the late Captain Edward Kylie were laid to rest in Lindsay yesterday, the funeral procession being marked by all the quiet grandeur that goes to form a military funeral, the services at the church and at the grave being of the most sad and impressive character.

The service at St. Mary's church was sad and impressive, the stately edifice being crowded to the doors. A large choir assisted in the solemn requiem mass, while the following clergymen officiated: His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Peterboro; Rev. Fr Carr, of St. Michael's College, Toronto; Rev. Fr. McColl and Rev. Fr. McCauley, of Peterboro; Rev. Fr. Guiry, of Kinmount; Rev. Fr. Foley, editor of the Catholic Record, London, Ont., Rev. Fr. O'Sullivan, Port Hope; Rt. Rev. Mons. Casey, and Rev. Fr. Ferguson, of Lindsay. Rev. Fr. Collins, of Lindsay; Rev Fr. Phalen, of Cathedral, Peterboro; Rev. Fr. McGuire, Enniskmore; Fr. Galvin, of Downeyville; Fr. Meagher, of Lakefield; Fr. McCarty, of Norwood.

At St. Mary's Church.

Solemn requiem mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien of Peterboro; Rev. Fr. Foley, Editor of the Catholic Record, and cousin of the deceased, acted as arch-priest; Rev. Fr. McColl, of Peterboro, deacon; Rev. Fr. Carr, C. S. B., President of St. Michael's College, Toronto, sub-deacon, and Rev Fr. Frank O'Sullivan of Port Hope master of ceremonies.

Mgr. Casey's Address.

After the celebration of mass, Rt. Rev. Monsignor Casey ascended the pulpit and delivered a most elaborate address, taken from Apocalypse Chap 14, verse 13: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labors," etc.

Monsignor Casey said in part: "We are assembled to pay our respect to a young man who was a credit to his town, the Province of Ontario and the Dominion of Canada."

The speaker dwelt upon the school days of Prof. Kylie and followed his career from the time he entered St Joseph's Academy in Lindsay until he graduated from Oxford College in England. "His career was marked with success throughout his student days, his master mind overwhelming all competitors in all halls and colleges of learning. Prof Kylie," he said, "took up history as his study, and while at Oxford through his research the writings of many historians have been found incorrect. Though he loved English, and received tempting inducements to remain there and accept a professor's chair, his love was greater for Toronto University, where he took it as a choice to fill a professor's position in the institution where he first directed this bark on the sea of knowledge.

Monsignor Casey also dwelt upon the spirit that prompted Prof. Kylie to enter the military field in defence of his home and the Empire, having told the speaker on one occasion that he felt behooved to go even farther than remaining a lecturer of history to prove his worth for the country he loved, and said he must be an example and shoulder his gun in defence of the Empire. Could a man possess a nobler spirit! Not only did he love his King and country, but he worshipped a higher power in a most fervent way, that when the great call came the fas prepared to meet his Maker, who rewards all according to their works."

Monsignor Casey spoke of the bereaved parents, whose poignant grief he trusted would be alleviated through the thought of the heroism of their son, who died as manfully in defence of his country as if he had fallen in the field of battle."

Bishop O'Brien.

After absolution, His Worship Bishop O'Brien of Peterborough, in a short sermon eulogized Prof. Kylie, and said he was pleased to see so many persons from a distance in the church, who came to pay tribute to the deceased Captain and Professor. His Lordship said his memory would forever remain green in the minds of Ontario people, for seldom was it the privilege for a country to possess a man of such rare attainments and knowledge.

The panegyric given by the speaker was of the most laudatory kind, and showed that no longer did men like the late Ed. J. Kylie accept the philosophy which was at one time taught by German professors. He not only ignored the teachings on certain subjects, but he was also against the autocratic form of government, and with such convictions felt that he should go to the front and do his part to suppress a tyrannical monarch, who endeavours to rule the world.

The speaker closed by pronouncing his benediction, and asking the prayers of the faithful for the deceased, who was gone to fill a higher position in the realm of eternal bliss.

The choir put forth its best efforts and rendered choice music during the service. Miss Mary Fleury presided as organist. Rev. Father Phelan, of Peterborough; Rev. Fr. McCarty, of Norwood, and Rev. Fr. McAuley, of Peterborough, assisted, the latter rendering a most beautiful solo, while Mr. Seldon Meehan sang baritone in good form.

The body was then carried on the shoulders of six members of the 109th Battalion to the hearse, where the large procession wended its way to the Roman Catholic Cemetery, followed by several platoons of soldiers and citizens.

At the cemetery the coffin was placed in a metal case and lowered into the grave. The religious ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Ferguson of St. Mary's Church, and Rev. Father Foley, after which a military salute was fired and the last bugle call given.

ENTENTE IN CANADA

French Brigadiers at Montreal Over British Regiments

The first big Ypres memorial parade in Montreal was by a long way the most impressive and imposing military event that has been pulled off in Montreal. As a matter of fact, there were very nearly as many men on parade as there were on both the French and English sides at the battle of the Heights of Abraham, which decided the fate of Canada. But this time the French and English troops were marching together, and both carried the same flag, while English brigades were commanded by French-speaking officers and vice-versa. One of the striking features of the parade was the strength of the French overseas battalions. The 163rd, which was organized by Major Oliver Asselin, was rapidly coming up to strength, and the 150th, under Lieut.-Colonel Barre, made a brave showing, while the 206th, the youngest of the French-Canadian units in line, turned up with nearly 400 men, under Lieut.-Col. Pagnuelo. Recruiting amongst the French-Canadians, in the Montreal district anyway, had bucked up a good deal.—Beck's Weekly.

Swedes and German Orphans

The women of Sweden are aiding German war orphans on a large scale. Under the protectorate of Queen Victoria a large society has been organized, to procure temporary homes for several thousand German boys and girls whose fathers have been killed on the battlefields. The children will be taken care of in Sweden until the German government can provide for them. Many of them will be adopted by the members of the society, if the German authorities consent to this.

LIEUT. BOYD, OF BOBCAYGEON KILLED IN MESOPOTAMIA

BOBCAYGEON, May 18.—Dr. H. O. Boyd received the sad news that his eldest son, Lieut. H. O. Boyd, of the 10th South Lancashire Regiment, England, had been killed in action in Mesopotamia between the 9th and the 12th of May.

The late Lieut. Boyd was the first Bobcaygeon soldier to give his life for his country. At the outbreak of the war he was teller in the Bank of B. N. A., in London, Ont., and went to England in August, enlisting there in the above regiment. His promotion was rapid, and he was gazetted to a Lieutenancy in the Lancashire Regiment. He was recently transferred to Mesopotamia, and as a transport officer was in charge of some 700 horses and mules, under the command of General Sir Percy Lake. General Lake was in command of the relieving force.

The late Lieut. Boyd was attached to the B.N.A. staff at Bobcaygeon after completing his education in the schools, and for a time was ledger-keeper and teller, later on being transferred to London, Ont. He was an enthusiastic curler, and was a member of the bankers' rink, the other members being A. R. Bottum (skip), J. R. Moyle, and J. Smith.

Dr. and Mrs. Boyd have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement. A second son, Mossom R. Boyd, is attached to the 39th Battalion, now overseas.

The object of the society are to foster a missionary spirit among the Catholics of this city and to assist the needy mission in the sparsely settled sections of the west and in Newfoundland. The membership is growing steadily and it is likely that this branch will include a large representation of the congregation.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, rash, rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

Ham Sandwich Is Raised To the Level of a Luxury

Cooked Ham 40c. a Pound, Brings a Wail From Restaurants, Also a Highly Successful Counter Attack By Making Sandwich 10c.

The impossible has happened, the restaurants are charging ten cents for a ham sandwich. This indeed is a serious salient thrust into slender resources financial. The thin, attenuated line of the high cost of living has been deeply dented at numerous points, but the ham sandwich position was thought secure, even immune. Just imagine, two slices of bread of prescribed proportions, length, breadth and thickness, and a transparent piece of ham cut as thinly as a highly developed slicing machine could pare it off without rendering it invisible, sometimes butter, but generally nothing in the form of a cement and emollient. Such was the ham sandwich with its unlimited profit possibilities. But now comes the restaurant man with a lament that cooked ham is over 40 cents a pound, hence the five-cent sandwich must go. This seems a more effective method to flesh reducing than bread cards or rolling on the floor.

Magistrate's Decision Has Been Reversed

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, May 18.—Jude Madden has reversed the decision of Magistrate Rankin, Napanee, who fined F. L. Hooper, druggist of that town, $300 for selling liquor without a license. Hooper had twenty gallons of liquor on the premises and it was claimed that the law permitted druggists to carry only ten. Judge Madden held that the Act allowed ten gallons of each kind of liquor. As Hooper was a temperance worker and member of the Napanee committee of fifty, the case was of especial interest.

GRENFELL HOPEFUL OF WORLD'S FUTURE

Famous Missionary-Doctor Describes Experiences at Front—Wonderful Medical Discoveries

During the winter of 1916, Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, of Labrador fame, was working with the Harvard Surgical Unit, 22nd General Hospital, of the British Expeditionary Force, in France. He writes in "Among the Deep Sea Fishers" as follows: "22nd General Hospital, B.E.F., France, February 13, 1916—Thank God, the able surgeons and scientists have now devised ways to fight 'trench foot,' the fatal tetanus and typhoid bacilli; to mitigate the danger of the murderous gas bacillus; and a thousand and one merciful splints, apparatus, and methods to save the untold agony and suffering which the war inflicts. But, in spite of it all, it is a new world in which we live here. The old life seems somehow a dream of the bygone happy days 'when the world was young.' Will it ever be the same again? No, never, but a better world will emerge. God is on his throne; out of evil shall come good.

Praises France

This beautiful land of France, shall without a doubt rise from this debacle a renewed nation; while our own generous and unselfish people, who have been obliged to let their splendid qualities be evident in spite of their sort of half-shame at owning up to them, will, I know, have larger views and higher ideals of the meaning of life for having answered a call that has led them from their peaceful homes all over England to months in the hell of these awful trenches.

"Here at the seat of physical war one learns many things—chiefly, what little good talking is per se as a method for attaining ends. It has to come to deeds in the end, and the only translation of God's love that will transform the earth must be at cost and sacrifice, as the Master showed us. Here I have been visiting among the friends of poor French prisoners, and seeing many pathetic cases of exiles—poor and aged men and women robbed of home and every possession and driven out like rats, many to perish.

Aged French Hero

"One dear old fellow with whom I spent an hour last night, is seventy years old, white haired, tall and dignified. He had to leave his home with an old hand-cart in which he dragged his aged wife. When he reached the French line, even his 'berger' dog deserted him and went back to stand by the ashes of the ruined home. The poor old fellow wept as he thought of the 'might have been.' Nowhere in the world can young men learn better life lessons than here, if they have eyes open to see the vision.

"The inalienable possessions of life are not the things we have, but the things we give to life. These things survive fire, and sword, and death itself. The joys of life are memories, not of things possessed, but of deeds done, and its sorrows are not those of physical wants, but of spiritual failures. Success in life can only be measured by those things which we carry with us when we leave it. I have been looking at the row after row of crosses which mark the last resting places of thousands of gallant boys."

Didn't See The Letter

Interesting Evidence Before the Shell Commission To-day

OTTAWA, Ont., May 18.—In cross examination to-day, B. F. Yoakum told the Commission he had not seen the letter which Sir Sam Hughes said in Commons that Col. Allison was sending to munition manufacturers stating that nothing was to be added to tenders on contracts as commission for the writer, Col. Allison. Yoakum said if he had seen such a letter things would have been interesting. This was the letter on which Sir Sam based his eulogy of Col. Allison for saving money to the British Empire. Apparently big munitions men like Yoakum didn't receive a letter.

Frank Yeigh Will Give Lecture

For King, Country and Empire—A Well Known Speaker

A graphic panorama of the war will be given in the armouries on Monday evening, May 22nd, when Frank Yeigh of Toronto will give for the first time in Peterborough, his patriotic picture war lecture, entitled, "For King, Country and Empire." A large number of beautifully tinted stereopticon slides will be used to illustrate this timely theme, while the descriptive lecture will be no less enjoyable. Mr. Yeigh has a Dominion, indeed continental reputation for his travel lectures. Having just returned from successful engagements in New York and Philadelphia, Mr. Yeigh's re-appearance in Peterborough will no doubt draw a bumper audience. He has given this subject nearly a hundred times since war was declared, and the press speak of it as being one of the best treatments of the conflict presented to the public.

MILITARY NEWS

The 93rd Battalion wants to secure four buglers and a drummer before leaving for camp next week. Apply at the Armouries at once. This is a good opportunity for five local youths. The Battalion goes into camp on Thursday next, so that it is important that any one wanting to join the Bugle Band should apply immediately.

The non-coms of the 93rd Battalion who took the recent course at Montreal, in bayonet fighting and physical culture, have been offered positions on the instructional staff of No. 3 Military District—a tribute to the efficiency of the men. It is not likely that any of them will leave the 93rd, preferring to go overseas to remaining on the instructional cadre.

previous like occasions were forgotten in the emotional outburst of pride for the gallant fellows as they paraded Bridge and Front streets for the last time. Crowds gathered from every section, immediate friends visited the soldiers at the armouries; knapsacks were packed, blankets rolled, and at the allotted hour, headed by the now celebrated band, led by Lieut. H. A. Stares, the boys swung into the street, down Bridge, up Front street, as far as the upper bridge, and return, the waving of handkerchiefs and lusty cheering, making the welkin ring. In the ranks headed by the Battalion band, led by Bandmaster Hinchey, were the boys of the 155th, determined to stay by their comrades to the last.

The scene, pathetic yet inspiring, will never be forgotten by those who viewed the parade. If was the final tribute to those who were giving all perhaps even to their lives—for home and country.

With only a week left before its departure from the city, the 93rd Battalion is now hard at work making preparations for going into camp at Barrieffeld. The supplies, equipment, blankets, haversacks, uniforms, etc., in the quartermaster's stores is being packed in boxes and shipped to Kingston. To-day Capt. Rollins, the 93rd's quartermaster, left for Barrieffeld to purchase lumber and other materials needed and to-morrow a squad of carpenters from the Pioneer section of the 93rd will go to Kingston to build the canteen and do other necessary work. An advance party of some twenty-five men will leave for Barrieffeld on Monday to put the camp in shape for the arrival of the main body of the battalion on Thursday. The 93rd will leave for camp about 9 o'clock on the morning of May 25th, travelling to Kingston on two special G.T.R. trains.

The 93rd Battalion ball team held a practice yesterday in preparation for the game with a picked Peterborough team on Victoria Day. Among those out was Capt. Widdifield, who used to be the battery mate of the famous Doc. Burton of Barrie. Capt. Widdifield caught for Barrie here some years ago when the Northerners defeated the Peterborough team by 3 to 1 in a memorable eleven innings battle. Burton pitched for Barrie on that occasion, while "Yebbie" Flaherty was on the firing line for Peterborough. The shortstop for the Peterborough that day was Pte. Roscoe Kendry, one of the few Peterborough boys who left with the first contingent who are now on duty with the 2nd Battalion at the front.

The physical drill squad of the 93rd Battalion, which is to give an exhibition at the holiday celebration, are making rapid progress under the direction of Sergt.-Major Miller. Exhibitions will be given by the Battalion machine gun section, under Lieut. Crisp, and the signallers, under Lieut. Gardiner. The latter in addition to flag work, will give a demonstration of how a field telephone is laid and operated.

The Havelock Standard says: Mr. and Mrs. J. Reid were in Kingston over the week end to see their son, Pte. Lyman Reid, who is seriously ill from tuberculosis in the Mowat Memorial Hospital near that city. We regret exceedingly to announce that there is no hope held out for Pte. Reid's recovery, and that the end is but a matter of time.

The news about Pte. Reid will be received with regret here. Pte. Reid enlisted with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., early last year and drilled here for several months, during which time he made many friends.

The Havelock Standard says: Orders were received at Peterborough on Monday that the 93rd were to go to Barrieffeld on Monday next, but it has since been arranged that the Battalion will remain in Peterborough over Victoria Day, May 24th, in order to take part in the big demonstration that is being arranged for in Peterborough on that day. This will give Havelock and Belmont people a splendid change to go to the city and bid the "boys" farewell and to see how "classy" the Havelock platoon is in comparison with other platoons in the Battalion.

Another Peterborough boy who has enlisted outside of the city is Robert Merrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Merrell, Homewood avenue, who has enlisted at Dauphin, Man., with the 226th Battalion, C.E.F.

QUEBEC, May 17.—The C.P.R. liner Metagama is due here Saturday next with a large number of invalided soldiers returning home after overseas service. The vessel will also carry a large number of passengers with mails and general cargo.

The Examiner has received a very handsome post card from Signaller J. R. Hern a local boy in France with the Canadian Field Artillery.

April 20th.

Greetings from a Peterborough boy in France. I think there are men from Peterborough in every unit. I met Quick, a former newspaperman of St. Paul's, now with the Battery We're still winning. Tout pour la victoire.

J. R. Heron.

CONCERT AT THE FRONT BY A CANADIAN BAND

You remember reading of these Gurks and Pathan regiments which started on a charge and never came back. Sixteen of them lie here.

To-day I went out again and watched a bombardment going on at Ypres. You see a little flash then a ball of smoke slowly spreading in the wind, and you know that this is death. It is queer to watch a battle from the mountain top.

This morning I heard a machine gun going up above and looking up I saw a Taube (German Scout) being chased by one of our biplanes.

This afternoon I stood on the spot where Prince Henry of Battenburg (the German Emperor's youngest son) was killed--near a large crucifix.

On Sunday night we had a service here. The chaplain had cold so the Colonel spoke, taking as his text "And there appeared unto Him" and applying "He shall give his angles charge over thee". We sang "Abide with me"; "Fight the good Fight" and another hymn.

Last night we had a Canadian band here giving a concert. They opened with "Napoleon's Last Charge" and as we heard the swords clash and bugles peal we felt we could dash through to Berlin right then. Then they played a French waltz, suggestive of home and peace. Next was an item after a soldier's own heart "Are we downhearted No!"

The following items were rendered:

Overture--The Light of Cavalry.
Trombone Solo--The Death of Nelson.
Song---"Mary"--Major Slater.
Encore--Rule Brittania.
Discriptive piece--A Hunting Scene.
American Opera--Teddy Tromb[illegible] Hello, Hello! who's your lady friend
March--"Freedom's awakening"

Then the conductor announced "The King" and we stood to attention. Oh! you should have been here then to see, here and there in the crowd a head held a little higher, back a little straighter as 'O Canada' was played. It was great!

The whole concert was strange--we were in a long hall, filled with pulpit and platform. The end wall (against which the platform was placed) bears a painting of Mount Calvary and the crucifixion.

This painting, (which is done right on the plaster) measures about 15 feet by 12 feet and is flanked by two smaller paintings (each 4 feet by 12 feet) of scenes in the Garden of Eden. Imagine in front of this a band playing and soldiers singing. To me it seemed strange.

I am writing this in the dressing room. Seats are ranged down the sides and a doctor and orderlies are going around dressing wounds. I am waiting to see the Colonel.

We have quite a number of Canadians here although it is an Imperial Hospital. For several days snow has lain on the ground but it is going away now.

This old place is full of surprises. To-day I saw a workman dig German harness out of a sand bank. The monastry was once held by the Germans and I have heard there are hundreds buried within the boundary wall.

I should like to get souvenirs of all these places I visit but dear only knows how long the war is going to last and I can't carry a load with me for anything over a couple of months.

We have a lot of those books "News from Home" containing clippings from the newspapers in Toronto and Montreal. The principal mark of public censure now seems to be the slacker, and from what the papers say I am glad I'm in France and in khaki.

Did I tell you of our send-off from Le Havre? I just read my diary today and wondered. The camp commandant gave us a great speech about "rampant militarism; despotism, etc and ended up with "In the name of Canada give them hell three times over". Then the chaplain spoke after reading from Joshua and his speech moved us more than the O. C's fiery as his had been "Be ye therefore strong and of a good courage, and the Lord, He it is that doth go before thee." "Men of Canada there are mothers, and wives, sisters and sweethearts away yonder in the towns and on the limitless prairie praying for you to-night. Yours is a great work.

This is a fight as great and a cause as noble as that to which Joshua went up so long ago; and these are the words of God to you "Be strong and of a good courage". Then can you fancy the scene as we stood with bared heads, resting on our rifles, in the flickering light while he sent us out with that benediction "The grace, mercy, and peace of God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit be with you now and until the day dawn and the shadows flee away." Then we marched off on the last stage of our long journey to the firing line. I did not see a minister again for three months.

This day is nearly done. I spent the afternoon lying on the mountain side watching aeroplanes and admiring the scenery. It is really beautiful the fields are being farmed and the vineyards tilled, nearly every field is a vineyard here.

This letter seems disjointed but I guess you may find something interesting in it.

I go to work in the kitchen and wash only half a floor twice every day. I get a good dinner in there. Yesterday I had soup, joint onions, kidney pie, boiled potatoes and baked potatoes, sago. To-day it was soup frish stew, roast potatoes and rice pudding.

This old monastry was commenced in 1068 so it's fairly old. I shall try to get some views of it.

Now I can't think of anything more to say. I expect there will be a sheaf of letters for me when I get home to my battery. It is up at its old position. I guess I'd better write to Ethel soon.

Say couldn't you clip pieces out of the paper which you think would interest me, have Ethel paste them in paper and send a book to me, every week or so; newspapers are so liable to be pilfered.

I have not received any photos yet. Lorrimer and Co. wants some.

Well now I'll close for the present. All I hope is that you are as well and as happy as I am just now

Your loving son,
JACK.

Three Degrees Above Freezing

The temperature this morning was thre degrees above freezing. This is about the coldest for the week. The minimum temperature for last week was two degrees below freezing. It has rained ten days this month in varying quantities. The probabilities for to-morrow calls for a rise in temperature. The farmers are the worst sufferers, and unless there is an immediate change for the better, a depreciation in this year's crop figures may be looked for.

Seeding Is Behind.

Mr. Allan H. Tool, of Omemee, who was in the city to-day, states that the spring seeding in that part of the country is not more than half completed. There is one farmer in the township of Otonabee with hundred and fifty acres of land who has yet to commence spring seeding. Similar conditions prevail throughout the county, and for that matter all over Ontario.

HALF the comfort of a shirt is in the neckband. Isn't it strange then that men will go on struggling with shirts that pinch and bind at the neck when they might have ease and all the other things that go with a good shirt by simply asking for shirts bearing the "Red Label"?

MONTREAL TRENCH PAPER

Interesting Facts About Make-up of Humorous Journal

The Brooklyn Eagle describes the make-up of a Canadian trench paper, which, it declares gives a first-rate impression of "spick-and-spanness" and of jollity and buoyant cheerfulness. As we read: The name of the newspaper is inclosed in a square box, in which aeroplanes and bursting shells and artillery are grim ornaments. In the centre is the medallion of the Royal Montreal Regiment, surrounded by the time-honored legend of "Honi Soit Qui Mal y Pense." Caricatured figures of Tommy Atkins are drawn to represent the initials "R.M.R." above, while the flaring name, Growler, spreads its tips from firing line to firing line in the picture. Underneath the name is the statement that the paper is issued by permission of the commanding officer, and that something or other has been "censored according to regulations." Whether it is the humor or the military facts that are censored is not explicitly stated. The date line shows that the publication is sold for 1d. which shows that Tommy has his jingling pennies even in the trenches.

While the managing editor directs that all communications be sent to him in the Canadian Fire Trench, west of German lines, he adds that "a branch office is contemplated just in rear of German reserve lines. The policy of the advertising department is very decided in its patriotism, judging by the next announcement that "German advertisements asking for munitions and food will not be accepted, nor can we publish anything from this source in our Help Wanted column." Then—and this is probably an ingenious idea emanating from the circulation manager to win the reading public by giving souvenirs—it is added that The Growler "will be glad to forward for our readers packets of munitions for the Huns, if put up in packets suitable to be sent via our 4.7 and 5.8 dispatchers."

WAR MAY END TOO SOON

Fear of Saskatchewan Soldier Who Wants Revenge

A Saskatchewan farmer of sporting proclivities serving in the Royal Fusiliers, writing of life at the front says: "I am not keen on leave except to get clean and have some fresh clothes and to tell some of these conscientious-objecting merchants what we think of them. We all dread lest a peace is declared too soon. I fear if war goes on another six months, people will begin to say, 'Oh, we've had enough; let's be merciful and not hit them too hard.' Let those people come out here and see desolation and misery and suffering beyond description and wholesale destruction. No, we must keep on going on and getting our own back."

If a garment is spotted by the rain it may often be freshened by laying a damp cloth over the article and steaming it.

OBITUARY

MR. W. R. COTTINGHAM.

OMEMEE, May 16.— There passed away at his home near Omemee at 3 o'clock this morning, after several months' illness, Mr. W. R. Cottingham, at the age of 65 years.

The late Mr. Cottingham, who resided on his farm, about one mile east of Omemee, was one of the most prominent farmers of Emily, and had lived there for the past forty years, during whic htime he established a feeling amongst his neighbours that will keep his memory forever dear to them. "A friend and a good neighbour" was what one man said about him this morning.

Mr. Cottingham was a relative of the late Squire Cottingham, who was one of the prominent men of Omemee in the early settlement of the village.

The deceased was an Anglican in religion and a staunch Conservative, also a personal friend of Sir Sam Hughes. Since his early days he has always taken a prominent part in the Royal Orange Association, being a member of L.O.L. No. 114, Omemee, and a Past County Master of the County Orange Lodge of Victoria, in whose deliberations he has always taken a deep interest. At the annual meeting in February the County Lodge forwarded him a letter of deep regret at his being unable to be present through sickness, it being the first session he had missed in a large number of years.

The late Mr. Cottingham is survived by his sorrowing wife, one son Hubert, who resides on the home stead; also two daughters, Isabel and Marion. Mrs. Thos. Richardson, Frederick avenue, Peterborough, and Mrs. J. Crowe, Brock street, Peterborough, are sisters, and Messrs. S. Cottingham, Donegal street, Peterborough, George Cottingham of Kinmount, and Thos. Cottingham of Argenta, B.C., are brothers.

The funeral of the late Mr. Cottingham will be held under Orange auspices, on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A number of prominent Orangemen from Lindsay will attend the funeral.

The remains will be interred in Emily cemetery on Thursday, 18th.

The Examiner, with a large number of friends in Peterborough, wishes to extend to Mrs. Cottingham and the bereaved family their sincere sympathy in the great loss they have sustained.

Hungry Folk Rush For Food

LONDON, May 18.—An experiment by the municipality of Charlottenburg, a suburb of Berlin, in feeding inhabitants of the city from public kitchens, resulted in failure on account of the rush of thousands of people for food, Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent telegraphs.

The appearance in the streets of Charlottenburg on Monday of two mobile field kitchens, known generally as 'goulash cannon' was the signal for the collection of a crowd estimated by the Berlin Tageblatt at 4,000 persons," the correspondent says. "The crowds stormed the kitchens, with the result that this municipal enterprise had to be stopped. The cause of the fiasco is said by the Tageblatt to be that the enterprise was inaugurated with insufficient means. The Magistrate of Charlottenburg issued a notice that owing to the rush the people it was impossible to distribute food in the street as intended. There was only 600 litres of food to be given out. The feeding of the people in this way cannot be undertaken until urther notice."

A HANDSOME LITTLE BOOKLET

The Stoney Lake Navigation Co., of which Capt. Frank Young is the energetic and efficient manager, has issued a handsome booklet relative to the beauties and attractions of Stoney Lake and its charming resorts. This booklet is attractively gotten up, displaying a number of pretty scenes, familiar in the wonderful chain of lakes above Lakefield. Stoney Lake, the lake of 800 islands, is described in picturesque language, worthy of its real natural beauty. The various summer hotels are referred to in the highest terms, full particulars being given as to the same and also as to the boat service. The booklet will have a wide circulation, and has a fund of interesting information for one not already acquainted with Stoney Lake.

BRANCH ORGANIZERS OF PATRIOTIC FUND NOW IN SESSION

TORONTO, May 17.—Provision for the dependents of soldiers has been a great encouragement for men to swell the numbers in Canadian battalions, according to the replied to Sir William Mulock's address of welcome at the opening session of the eastern branch organizers of the Canadian Patriotic Fund at Foresters Hall yesterday afternoon. Lieut.-Governor Sir John Hendrie, Sir William Mulock, Sir Herbert Ames, M.P., were among those present, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught sent his regrets as being unable to attend.

Sir William Mulock explained the object of the gathering as due to the wish of the parent body in Ottawa to conduct the affairs of the Patriotic League in harmony with public opinion.

Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, intimated that Provincial aid would be given for patriotic work, in his brief address to the meeting.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Acting Premier, echoed the words of his colleague. He declared that the money that is being sent to France is doing good, and that the Red Cross officials had spent every dollar to the best possible advantage.

Nova Scotia's Share.

Mr. Saunders of Halifax, spoke on behalf of his Province, saying that Nova Scotia was performing its full share. The powers of the Executive committee of Canada, having control of the 150 branches in Ontario, and having organizations which covered practically the entire area of Canada were dealt with by Sir Herbert Ames in his address. Manitoba had the independent organization in Canada he said.

Sir Herbert spoke of the average cost to maintain a family in the different Provinces. In Newfoundland the cost per month was $9.60; in Nova Scotia $14.41; in New Brunswick, $14.58; in Ontario, $14.93; in Quebec, $16.36, and in the west about twenty-five per cent. more than in the eastern Provinces. The figures gave an indication of the relative cost of living in the different parts of Canada, he said.

"Set the standard of decent living, and then the cost in various sections will adjust itself," said Sir Herbert Ames.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, Executive officer of Peterorough, and Mr. Justice Livingstone, President of the Welland county branch, gave addresses on branch and district organizations respectively.

The raising of money and the administrative parts of the work needed two separate committees, said Mr. Dobbin. The county distribution should be centralised as much as possible, he said.

Judge Livingstone gave a summary of the history of his county organization, which, he said, had attained results second to none in Ontario. In some cases voluntary subscription was the best plan, he declared, referring to Niagara Falls. In the townships the raising of money had been accomplished by a tax levy for this specific purpose.

ARMY MULES EAT ALL BUT ROCKS AND ROPE

Field Headquarters, May 8 by army motor truck to Columbus, N. M., May 15.—The value of the army mule, endangered momentarily by automobile trucks, has been vindicated by the results of this campaign.

The mules proved more hardy than horses in the bandit chases. They were better able to live off the country. They ate almost everything except rocks and one kind of rope. The one rope which they would not eat was the Mexican lariot, made of horse-hair. They also nibbled at trees, dead weeds, sticks and dirt.

ENEMY SOLDIERS ASK THE SWISS FOR FOOD

GERMAN TROOPS SAY THEY HAVEN'T EATEN ANY MEAT FOR WEEKS.

GENEVA, May 17—German soldiers along the Swiss-Alsatian frontier, chiefly elderly men of the Landsturm, have begun to ask food from the Swiss soldiers. The Germans say that they have not eaten meat for weeks.

Five German soldiers in uniform although fired upon, escaped across the Swiss frontier at Bodersdorf, near Basel, yesterday. They were interned at Berne.

The Neue Stuttgarter Zeitung says the food situation in the Rhine towns has become very serious. The paper suggests that cooking in private families be prohibited and that the population be ordered to eat in common at restaurants, where meat could be served once daily at noon, and only vegetables in the evening.

Eighteen German cattle dealers arrived in Basel yesterday hoping to buy cattle, which are becoming scarce.

300 PER CENT. RISE IN PRICE OF RENNET HITS CHEESEMAKERS

Imports Almost Stopped as Result of War

SOME FACTORIES SHORT

Dairymen's Secretary Urges Manufacture in Canada and Shows Opportunity.

Among other articles which have more than doubled in value since the beginning of the war, rennet, one of the principal ingredients of cheese, has increased in price almost more than any other product. Rennet is made from the stomachs of calves, and is manufactured principally in Europe. The war has almost stopped the exportation of it from there to America. This is making conditions serious both in Canada and the United States, and it has been rumored that some of the large cheese manufacturing plants will be forced to shut down. Others it is said have a large enough supply of rennet to last until the end of the war, provided that it does not continue beyond the time predicted by American and English authorities. Supply houses will only sell very small quantities at a time to the cheese makers.

At the beginning of the war rennet was sold at $1.90 to $1.90 a gallon. In 1915 its selling price increased to $3.00 and $3.50 a gallon. At the first of the new year it had risen to $4.00, and at the present time is selling at $7.00 a gallon.

Can Be Made Here.

That it is quite possible to manufacture rennet in America is proved by the fact that nearly all that has been used for the past several years here has been the product of two American firms. The rennets, however, were imported from Europe. There are no large factories for its manufacture in Canada, but attempts have been made since the outbreak of hostilities to establish some. Whether the attempts have been successful is not known as yet.

The amount of rennet used in the United States last year was about 100,000 gallons. To make this a million and a half rennets or calves' stomachs were required. Previously the supply had been coming from Europe, principally from Denmark. This supply has been almost cut off.

Conservation Urged.

Frank Herns, secretary-treasurer of the Western Ontario Dairyman's Association stated that it was quite possible to manufacture rennet in America. The supply of rennets, too, he thought should be obtainable here, and the quality could be fully equal to that of European manufacturers. "The thing we want to impress on the people is that they should save. Formerly farmers and butchers have been throwing away the rennets, now they must save them if they wish to create a supply in Canada." Aside from the necessity of economy he stated that rennets which before had been of little or no monetary value would now be thought bring a good price. "There need be no shortage if the people will only save," he said. "We are capable of manufacturing rennet in America, and all we need is the supply of raw material."

The Attempt To Plunge Sweden into the War Has Ended In Failure

Swedish War Crisis Has Passed--Aland Islands Fortified With View to Forestalling Move by Germany

STOCKHOLM, May 19.—The Swedish crisis has passed, and the Activist attempt to force a situation which would plunge the country into war has failed. Sweden will remain firmly and impartially neutral. The Government feels no alarm concerning Russia's activity in fortifying the Aland Islands, off the east coast of Sweden, between the Gulf of Bothnia and the Baltic Sea.

Reassuring statements to this effect were made to-day, in both Chambers of the Rigsdag.

This means that Sweden to-day is more united against entering the war than at any time since the world hostilities began.

The propaganda for war, which began with the recent interpellation of the Government in the Rigsdag regarding Russia's fortification of the Aland Islands is regarded as futile and it seems that the only chance now of precipitating war would be an overt act by one of the belligerent countries.

The agreement, which came as a surprise to the Swedish people today, was the cause of an intense feeling of relief. It is felt now that the Government either will ignore the Aland interpretation or answer it at some indefinite time in the future.

When the Rigsdag met yesterday the entire Swedish Cabinet was present in the First Chamber. The vice president of the Chamber and the presence of the Government officials suggested that it might be an opportune time to say something with respect to the general diplomatic situation.

FOREIGN MINISTER SPEAKS.

Foreign Minister Wallenberg at once responded, saying in part "Repeatedly and in explicit terms it has been stated from authoritative quarters during the present world war that Sweden, while always maintaining her right of self-determination toward every side, would preserve a strict and impartial neutrality, and that she desired eagerly to avoid being drawn into any war-like entanglements.

"I am now in a position to reaffirm declarations of this character hitherto given by the Swedish Government. The efforts of the Government in accordance with its duty to protect the rights and interests of Sweden from any violation, should not be misunderstood or misconstrued by anybody considering the manner in which Sweden during her very difficult situation constantly has fulfilled the demands of neutrality.

"I need hardly add that during the entire course of this crisis the Government has stood wholly apart from any discussion of foreign policies which would deviate in any direction from the declarations repeatedly given by the Government and that the Government must deplore any phenomena which would be likely to disturb faith in Sweden's neutrality."

MEMBERS CRY "BRAVO"

"As to the Aland Islands: Any one who has followed the historical development of this question must recognize its vital importance to Sweden. This was the opinion of the Rigsdag and the Government in 1908, and is the opinion of the Government in 1916; and it is believed the Rigsdag shares that opinion also in 1916. I can assure the Chamber that the Government deems it its duty to follow this question with unwavering attention, and nothing will be neglected to preserve the rights and interests of Sweden in this as in other fields.

"Any explanation beyond this I cannot, for obvious reasons give at this time."

Foreign Minister Wallenberg's statement was received with cries of "Brave"! Hjalmar Branting, the Socialist leader, immediately took the floor and thanked the Foreign Minister for his assurance that Sweden would maintain her right of self-determination and unwaveringly continue her policy of neutrality. He was followed by Admiral Lindman, former Premier, who spoke for the Conservatives, and M. Eden, on behalf of the Liberals. The same proceedings then ensued in the Second Chamber, where assurances of support of the Government were given by the three party leaders.

The position of the Government in 1908, referred to by Foreign Minister Wallenberg, was that the Swedish fleet would be threatened by any permanent fortification of the Aland Islands which virtually dominate the Baltic entrance to Stockholm, but was willing to accept solemn assurances from Russia, supplemented by assurances from France and Great Britain that no permanent fortifications in the archipelago were intended. It is believed that Sweden in the last ten days has received new assurances in this respect, Russia declaring that her only intention in the Aland Islands is to defend them against possible capture by the Germans.

Town Visitor (to farmer, whose chickens he has been admiring)—"I suppose you hatched all these chickens yourself?" Farmer—"Oh, no, we keep hens for that purpose."

"You can't fool the people all the time," announced the investigator. "I know it," replied the Trust Magnate, "There's plenty of profit in fooling half of them half the time."

Traveller—"It seems wonderful that Japanese dentists can take out teeth with their fingers." Little Jack—"Auntie can take out hers with her fingers—every one of 'em."

Always Ready To Help Her Allies

No one to-day accuses Russia of failure to cooperate with her allies. The arrival of a large Russian army in France is a final proof, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. But no direct proof was scarcely needed. Throughout the war Russia has struck whenever and wherever she believed she might be of real assistance to her comrades in arms. In this respect Russia's record is more admirable than that of any of her allies.

At the very beginning Russia repeatedly launched drives into East Prussia to distract the Germans from their western triumphs and to give the western Allies time to complete their military preparations. But when, many months later, the great German drive into Russia was inaugurated the western Powers were unable or unwilling to provide any counter irritation.

When the Bulgar-Teuton conquest of Serbia was in progress Russia attempted to create a diversion by a powerful drive in Eastern Galicia. And last of all, when Grand Duke Nicholas was well started on his victorious Armenian campaign he detached a considerable force from his main army and despatches it through Persia for the relief of the British in Mesopotamia.

This force could not advance with sufficient rapidity to save Townsend at Kut-el-Amara. But it is even yet advancing, and is now reported to be within sixty miles of Bagdad, the city which was Townsend's goal.

The advance of this army seems to seems to indicate that Russian co-operation does not cease even with the defeat of Russia's ally. Russia now seeks to succeed where England failed to vindicate the cause of the Allies and to gain revenge for Kut-el-Amara and Ctesiphon.

The size of this Russian army is not disclosed, but it cannot be great, as it is only an offshoot of the main Asiatic force of the Tsar. Yet it may succeed in its daring enterprise, for Russia has established in Turkey a valuable tradition of victory. Whether it succeeds or fails the attempt is admirable, and again discloses the Great Bear as somewhat of an altruist and an able exponent of international "team work."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS.

Three miles before her, with all sails set including staysail and balloon-jib, raced a fishing schooner. There was a fresh ten-knot wind blowing a little south of west — a wind that favoured the schooner, and she was putting her best foot forward, taking the green water over her bows in a smother of foam.

"Heavens! look at her go!"

The exclamation was one of pure delight in the speed.

"Maybe she's an American that's been caught inside the three-mile limit, and is pullin' away from the gunboar," remarked Pete.

That she was pulling away there was little doubt. In the fifteen minutes that elapsed after her discovery she had widened the gap between herself and her pursuer. She was now within a mile of the Lass.

"Why doesn't she shoot?"

As Code spoke a puff of white smoke thrust out from the blunt bows of the cutter, and the ball ricochetted from wave-top to wave-top to fall half a mile astern of the schooner.

"Out of range now, an' if she wind holds she'll be out of sight by nightfall," said Pete, who was moved to great excitement and enthusiasm by the contest. "Wonder who she is?"

He plunged down the companion-way to the cabin and emerged a moment later with Code's powerful glasses.

But Code did not need any glasses to tell him who she was. His eye had picked out her points before this, and the only thing that interested him was the fact that her wireless was down.

It was the mysterious schooner. He had never seen her equal for travelling, and he knew that she must be making a good fourteen knots, for the cutter was capable of twelve.

She had reached her closest point of contact with Code's vessel and had begun to bear away when Pete leveled his glasses. It was on Schofield's tongue to reveal the identity of the pursued when Ellinwood yelled:

"Good Heavens! Skipper! She has Charming Lass printed in new gold letters under her counter!"

"What?"

"As I live, Code. Charming Lass, as plain as day! What's happening here to-day? What is this?" Code snatched the glasses from Pete's hand and then leveled them, trembling, at the flying schooner.

For a time the foam and whirl of her wake obscured matters, but all at once, as she plunged down into a great hollow between waves, her stern came clear and pointed to heaven. There, in bright letters that glinted in the sun and were easily visible at a much greater distance, was printed the name:

CHARMING LASS OF FREEKIRK HEAD

"No wonder she's goin'!" yelled Pete, almost beside himself with excitement. "No wonder she's goin'! But let her go! More power to her! Yah!"

Code stood with the glasses to his eyes and watched the mysterious schooner and the pursuing vessel disappear.

CHAPTER XIX.
ELLINWOOD TAKES A HAND.

There were two things for Code to do. One was to sail north into Placentia Bay, Newfoundland, set seines, and catch the herring that were then schooling. The other was to run sixty miles or so north-east to St. Pierre, Miquelon, and buy bait.

Under ordinary circumstances he would not have hesitated. It would have been Placentia Bay without question. But his situation was now decidedly out of the ordinary. He was in a hurry to fill his hold with cod before the other men got off Freekirk Head: first, for the larger prices he would get; and, secondly, because he yearned to come to grapples with Nat Burns.

To seine for herring would lose him upward of a week; to buy it would take less than three days, including the round trip to St. Pierre.

But the money?

Code knew that in the French Island herring seldom went below three dollars a barrel, and that the smallest amount he ought to buy would be twenty-five barrels. Later on, if the fishing was good, he might send out a party to set the seines, but not now. He must buy. But the money!

Then he thought of the packet of money Elsa Mallaby had sent him. The cash was meant for any sailor who came to need it.

And the men with him were willing to fight to the last ditch and to take their lot ungrumblingly as fishermen early learn to do.

If he starved, they starved. So he decided he would not hesitate to use Elsa's money when a dozen men and their families were dependent upon him and the success of the cruise.

Thus the matter was settled and the order roared down the decks:

"Set every stitch for St. Pierre; we're going to bait up there. Lively, now!"

St. Pierre, Miquelon, is one of the quaintest towns in all of picturesque French Canada. It is on the island of the same name (there are three Miquelon islands), which is in itself a bold chunk of granite sticking up out of the ocean at a distance of some ten miles south-west of May Point, Newfoundland.

Rough and craggy, with few trees, sparse vegetation, and a very thin coating of soil, there is no agriculture, and the whole glory of the island is centred in the roaring city on its south-east side.

It is a strange city, lost in the midst of busy up-to-date Canada, with French roofs, narrow tilting streets and over the smell of fish.

There is a good harbour, and there are whirls where blackfaced men with blue stockings, caps, and gold earrings chatter the patois and smoke their pipes. In the busy time of year there are ten thousand men in the town and it is a scene of constant revelry and wildness.

The Charming Lass touched the port at the height of its season — early September—and, because of the hours with a good breeze behind. Code and Ellinwood immediately went over the side in the brown shallowness of the harbour close in, anchored in the bad amid a crowd of old high-pooped schooners, filled with noisy, happy Frenchmen. There were other nationalities, too, in the cosmopolitan bay—Americans setting a new spar or Nova Scotians in on a good time.

The Charming Lass cast her anchor shortly before six o'clock, having made the run in five and a half hours with a good breeze behind. Code and Ellinwood immediately went over the side in the brown dory of the mate and pulled for the custom-house wharf. The rest of the crew were forbidden off the decks except to sleep under them, for it was intended, as soon as the bait was lightered aboard, to make sail to the Banks again.

The bait industry in St. Pierre is one more or less open to examination. It is the delight of certain French dealers to go inside the English three-mile limit, load their vessels with barrels of herring, and return to St. Pierre. Here they sell them at magnificent profit to Frenchmen, Englishmen, and Americans. And, as the British coat of arms is not stamped on herring at birth, no one can prove that they were not legally procured.

But let a Canadian revenue cutter catch a Frenchman (or American, either, for that matter), dipping herring in any out-of-the-way inlet, and the owner not only pays a heavy fine, but he often loses his schooner and his men go to jail for trying to hoist sail and escape at the last minute.

Code had not reached shore before he had been accosted by fully half a dozen of these bait pirates. But he passed them, and, tying his dory at the wharf, went on up the street to a legitimate firm.

Immediately the business was finished, Code and Pete Ellinwood started back to the wharf.

The main street was ablaze with lights. Cafes, saloons, music halls, catch-penny places—in fact, every device known to separate sailors from their wages was in operation. The sidewalks were crowded with men, jabbering madly in the different dialects of their home provinces (for many come here from France yearly).

"Queer lot, these frog-eaters," said Peter, going into the street so as to avoid a thick, pushing crowd.

"Yes, they would come to a knifing over a count of fish and yet give their schooners to a friend in trouble. Too bad they ain't better fishermen."

"Yeah, ain't it."

Among Canadians and Americans the Frenchmen are held in contempt on account of their hooks, which are of soft metal and can be rebent and used again. The fish often get away with them, however, and these hidden hooks slit many a finger in dressing down.

The two comrades loitered along, watching the changing crowds, gay with their coloured caps and scarfs. Some men were already in liquor, and all seemed to be headed in that general direction. Suddenly, as Code was about to urge Pete along, he gave an exclamation and stopped short.

"What's the matter, skipper?"

"I wonder where he is now?" Code's eyes were searching the crowd. "I saw him right over there."

He pointed to a certain spot.

"Who? Are you crazy, Code?"

"Arry Duncan, the traitor that ruined our bait. I'd have sworn I saw him. It came all of a sudden and went away again. But I guess it couldn't have been anything but a close resemblance." He laughed nervously. "Gave me the creeps for a minute, though."

"Lor'sd!" shivered Pete, who had all the superstitions of the sea at his fingers' ends. "Methe he's chasin' us around fer wrongly accusin' him. They do that sometimes, you know. He's probably dead an' that's his sperrit, ha'ntin' us."

"Oh, rot, Pete!" growled Code in his most forcible manner. "Come along now or you'll be sidling into one of these doors and the Lass won't get out of port for a week."

"My soul an' body! Look at that Frenchy. Biggest I ever saw, Code."

They had returned to the sidewalk, and Pete forgot that he himself rose fully as high above the crowds as this stranger. In fact, nearly every one turned to take a look at the huge islander, who, in reality, stood six feet four, barefoot.

They were pushing down-street against the tide and making rather heavy going of it. Code manoeuvred so as to pass well to leeward of the big man who, he could see plainly, was just tipsy. But somehow the eyes of the two giants met, and the Frenchman seemed to crush his way through the crowd in Ellinwood's direction.

"Come on, Pete; get out of here before there's any trouble," commanded Code. He knew the mate's weakness for fighting.

The big Frenchman, who wore tremendous earrings, a bright scarlet cap with a blue tuft, and a gay sash, lurched through the crowd and against Pete Ellinwood with a malice only too plain. But his effort was attended with failure. Not only did Pete stand like a rock, but he thrust the other violently back with his shoulder, so that he recoiled upon those behind him, earning their loud-voiced curses.

"Mille tonnerres!" bellowed the Frenchman. "You insult me, eschop Canadien, Canadian pig! The half of sidewalk is mine, eh? You push me off, eh? You fight, eh?"

Code urged Ellinwood along and interceded personally, knowing that the big man would not touch him.

But the Frenchman would not be appeased. He was just drunk enough to become obsessed with the ugly idea that Pete had laid a trap to insult him, and, regardless of Code, kept after the mate.

By this time, of course, a huge crowd had gathered and was following Pete's retreat, yelling to both men to fight it out. Many of the mob knew a few English words, and their taunts reached Ellinwood's ears.

He and Code had not retreated a block before the mate suddenly swung around on his tormentors.

"I won't stand for that, Code. Did you hear what that big devil called me?" he demanded.

"What do you care what he called you? Get along to the ship. What chance have we got with those men?" Code grabbed Pete's arm and kept him moving away. Beneath his hand he could feel the muscles as hard as iron.

Finds Diamonds in Sea.

A story of a package of diamonds worth £100 ($500) found floating in the North Sea by one of the crew of a British mine sweeper was told in a police station recently by a deckhand, Walter Gleeson, who had been arrested while trying to dispose of the gems.

At the police station the deckhand confessed that while on a trawler which was engaged in the hazardous task of gathering up mines in the North Sea, he saw a package floating in the water. He got it with a boat-hook and when he opened it he found ninety-eight polished and seventy-five unpolished gems. The deckhand attempted, in company with a friend, to sell the diamonds to a jeweler at Cardiff. There was nothing on the package to indicate the owner or how the diamonds came to be floating about in the mine-strewn waters of the North Sea.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surfaces of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BEING 1,200 miles from Australia—her nearest relative—New Zealand is probably the most isolated civilized region in the world, and for the reason that most of those who live there are of the same race as ourselves, we should be especially interested in this beautiful country and her people. New Zealand is made up of a group of islands, comprising in all about 104,751 square miles. The coast lines are very flat generally, and the total circumference of the three main islands is 4,330 miles. The interior of New Zealand is interspersed with hills, valleys and plains, all of remarkable beauty. It has been said that both the scenery and climate of those fair lands resemble those of Italy and Sicily. There is always ample rain but never superabundance of it; azure is the favorite color worn by the sky, and the islands are like emerald and golden gems set in the silver form of the Pacific.

New Zealand is a productive country; the finest sheep and cattle are reared on the rich pastures, and oats, barley and maize are grown in abundance. Along the hillsides there are rich forests, and tracts of elevated ground that are too rocky to produce vegetation that is of commercial value never fail to grew plants that are delightful to the sight of man; no less than 140 species of wild fern are to be found in New Zealand, and many of these are 40 feet in height. There are volcanoes on some of the mountains, and adown the sides of others noisy rivers take their rapid courses. Parrots chatter merrily on the tree tops, and pigeons coo in the recesses of the woods. These are practically the only native birds. Native animals are also few, but European birds and animals, and even fish, have been introduced with success. Gold, coal, copper and sulphur are the chief of the New Zealand minerals. Gold was first discovered in 1852, and since that time something like $350,000,000 worth was found. Auckland is the principal gold mining area. The Canadian Australasian Line has a regular service of fine passenger steamers between Auckland City and Vancouver.

At present the population of New Zealand is something like 1,000,000 people, and nearly all are of British extraction. Still there are 45,000 colored folks. The early inhabitants of the country were the Maori tribe; they came there in their war canoes in the fourteenth century. In 1642 the islands were discovered by Abel Janson, a Dutch sailor, and Captain Cooke visited the place in 1769. It appears that when the famous captain returned to England he gave the English people a wrong impression of the place; he reported that the islands did not seem to be of much value, also that the Maori people would be a formidable race to attempt to conquer. Anyway, for 70 years after Captain Cooke's visit the British Government did not think it worth the trouble to annex the present proud possession. It was in 1840 that the Union Jack was first hoisted on the shores. At that time the Maori folks numbered 65,000. The decline in the race since then is due to disease and to war, for both have played a big part in the history of the Maoris. Before the British came these people warred amongst themselves, and later they warred against the British. Up to 1770 they knew nothing about pottery or metal, and until that period their battle instruments were their fists, clubs and stones—they were even unaware of the existence of bows and arrows. For immediately after the introduction of guns and swords amongst them fully one-fourth of them became no more. As time progressed these of the Maoris who were left progressed also, and between 1820 and 1840 many of them became Christian. Now the Maori children go to school side by side with children of our Southern cousins. Maori representatives take their part in the government of their country. Some of the Maori people are skilled at wood-carving and dyeing; they are an imaginative race, and have delightful poetry and tales to recite and tell. Their homes are pretty and their home life simple.

New Zealand has many things in common with Canada; she is a new country rapidly developing; she is rich; she is patriotic; she has sent thousands of brave soldiers to fight for the Empire in this great war. In New Zealand there are more men than women, and it is quite likely that after the war she will be a resort for some of the superfluous ladies of the Old Country, who, unable to have the opportunity of blessing some man at home, will seek the chance of blessing one abroad.

"Kaiser, Kaiser, Why Have You Made This War?"

Tortured Cry of German Officer When Wounded Are Shelled

Bandits Stole Both Cash and Cashier in Bank Robbery

An extraordinary vivid and dramatic battle picture is drawn in the "Russkoye Slovo" by M. Gregory Petroff, one of Russia's most brilliant writers.

The incident which forms the basis of the story was a desperate struggle for a village, finally seized by the Russians, during which the Germans bombarded a hospital in which their own wounded were lying.

"A fierce battle," he writes, "was being waged around the mansion of a country gentleman. The mansion was being used temporarily as a Red Cross hospital. The wooden outbuildings were on fire and the flames reached the verandah where some German wounded were lying. From every window and house in the village the Germans were firing on our men. The enemy resisted desperately, and their courage was the courage of despair. Our men were certain of victory, and continued to fight on their own initative, without orders.

"The German wounded crawled from the burning mansion, uncertain where to go, and those who were unable to rise from their beds were shrieking because the fire had reached the interior of the building.

Red Cross Shelled.

"A Russian soldier cried, 'Comrades, there is a Red Cross flag on that house. There are wounded there.' Another shouted, 'They are Germans but the first answer 'What of it? If they are Germans they are wounded and are in danger of burning.'

"But what can we do?" said another. The Germans are firing on the house.

The upshot was that the Russian soldiers decided to go to the rescue of the wounded Germans, espite the anger from German bullets and shells, and a few moments later our men were been dragging out the beds on which lay the wounded.

One of our men who had two fingers of his left hand shot away brought a German officer to our flying hospital. The officer walked with difficulty—his leg had been pierced with a bayonet, his shoulder shot through and his hand crushed. The wounded man was banaged, but fainting during the process. As soon as he recovered he saw the flames bursting from the burning mansion and made a desperate effort to rise.

Rescue of Sister of Mercy.

The doctor urged him to be calm, and held him down. 'But my wife!' cried the officer. 'She is in the house among the flames.' The doctor tried to reassure him, but the officer continued to assert that his wife, who was acting as a Sister of Mercy, was in the blazing building. The doctor inquired whether anyone had seen anything of the lady, and was informed that the mansion was believed to be empty. Then a German shell flew over the heads of the group.

"The rascals' said the doctor, 'they are firing on their own wounded; we must get away from here as soon as possible. After one or two trials they will discover our range.'

"The wounded German officer was still gazing at the burning mansion. Suddenly he cried look! My wife is at the window of the garret. She is trying to break the window glass, and the room is full of smoke.

"Looking up, the doctor saw a white figure wearing a Red Cross. A reservist took off his overcoat. 'She is in great danger,' he said. 'Just hold my coat,' and I will go into the house and throw her down. You must catch her in the coat. The brave fellow rushed into the burning house while his companions stood as though petrified.

Buried in the Debris.

"Several minutes passed; then the reservist appeared at the garret window and there was a noise of breaking glass. Two shells screamed overhead, but no one paid any heed to them—everyone was eagerly watching the attempt to rescue the Red Cross nurse. The reservist managed to drag her to the window—she was unconscious. Several men held the outstretched overcoat beneath the window, and the white figure fell into it.

"'Carry the lady to be husband,' ordered the doctor, 'and do it quickly, for the Germans have got the range. I shall wait for our hero—[illegible] is injured.' The soldiers [illegible] who was still unconscious and hurried from the courtyard. A moment later a German shell struck the burning building a deafening explosion was heard, and the walls of the house tumbled. The reservist had no time for escape and was buried in the ruins.

"A few minutes later the Sister of Mercy recovered her senses. She explained that on the arrival of the Russian soldiers she had rushed upstairs to escape their expected violence. 'But it was one of these soldiers who saved you,' the doctor remarked. 'Where is he?' the lady asked. 'In Heaven,' said the doctor, 'if there be [illegible] heroes who lay down their lives for their enemies.'

How the Kaiser Makes War.

"When the doctor told the wounded officer and his wife what had occurred they both wept. The officer said, 'Doctor, here is a pocket book, and in it you will find ff100. Give them to the commander of the regiment, and ask him to send the money to the family of the dead man. Give me also the address of his family. I swear that I will provide for them. I am very rich.' The officer's wife took off her ring and asked the doctor to give it to the reservist's relatives.

"The officer asked how it was that the Russian guns had been trained on the mansion, seeing that it was flying the Red Cross flag. 'Our guns!' replied the doctor sharply. 'They are your guns and our men have been rescuing your wounded while your guns were bombarding your own men and ours. This is how your Kaiser makes war.'"

"The doctor and his wife were astounded. 'Surely you are jesting'' said the man. 'It is no subject for a jest,' the doctor replied, 'unless your Kaiser is capable of making such a jest.'

"The husband and wife made a gesture of despair, and the officer, throwing up his unwounded arm, cried, 'Kaiser! Kaiser! Why have you made this war?'"

TWO MOTHERS TELL

How Their Sickly Children Were Made Strong and Well.

"For six years our little girl suffered from a bronchial trouble, she had no appetite, could not sleep and was so nervous we had to keep her out of school. The doctors said nothing but a change of climate would help her. We were discouraged, when one day a friend asked us to try Vinol, and after taking six bottles she does not look like the same child. She has a fine appetite, is lively, healthy and well, and Vinol did it all." Mrs. F E Rutford, Iola, Kas

Another Child Made Strong.—

"The measles left my little girl thin and delicate, and the doctor's medicine did not seem to build her up. I read about Vinol and got a bottle, and her improvement was rapid, her strength returned and she is now as well as ever." Mrs. E. Linot, Pittsburg, Pa.

We ask every Peterborough mother of a frail, sickly, ailing child to try Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it does not restore her child's normal health.

DRINK WATER TO AVOID SICKNESS SAYS AUTHORITY

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Daily Keeps the Doctor Away.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research in the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make everyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Waf Gie His Father the Job.—In a small town in Scotland a schoolmistress was teaching a certain class of little fellows their lessons. In this class was a boy, the son of a bodymaker in a certain coach works of the town, and who was famed for everything but understanding the lessons set. One day he appeared much more stupid than ever, indeed, so much so that his teacher stamped her foot and said: "Look here, Johnnie, I'll put up with this head of yours no longer! I'll just pack you off to Mr. Brown's, the joiner, and he'll fix you on a wooden head, which will be much better than this stupid thing." Johnnie looked up at once, smiling, and with a firm little shake of the head he replied: "Na, na! my father is a boy-maker, an' please, mem, I'll just gang tae him an' get 'im the job."

THE STRAND.

Englishmen the World Over Love Great Thoroughfare.

The Law Journal has taken the matter in hand. There should be a subway between the Temple and the Law Courts. The Strand, at this point, is one of the busiest thoroughfares in London, almost as bad as the Bank, which has a subway, or the corner of Tottenham Court road and Holborn, which hasn't. It was part of the original scheme, the Law Journal tells us, when the site of the courts was chosen, and the project has frequently been revived by the benchers.

The trouble with subways, in London at any rate, is that so few people, comparatively, use them. Your true Londoner may be known by his refusal to be hurried in crossing the most congested highway. Even the advent of the motor bus has brought about no change in this respect. With an air of leisurely unconcern that utterly declines to be hurried, he sets out on his journey when and where he will. If he is of true descent, he ignores "islands." He will perforce stay to let a motor bus pass him if he encounters it broadside on, but he can gauge a distance to a nicety, and as he goes, he thinks naturally and calmly in inches.

And thus he passeth on his way,
Unhurried in his stride,
His object? 'Tis, as one might say,
To reach the other side.

All this being so, we have a shrewd suspicion that the regular habitue of the Temple would still continue to make his journey to the courts aboveground, be the subway never so inviting or never so loud in insisting on its presence.

But to return to the Strand. The street has always held a fascination for the Londoner, and indeed for Englishmen everywhere. Other streets specialize, as it were—Fleet street in letters, Lombard street in money, Whitehall in martial glory and much history of kings and other people of high estate; but the Strand is just the common meeting ground of all—soldiers, sailors, tinkers, tailors, rich men, poor men, and so on into the region of the quiet, undesirable; all claim the Strand as their right and just rendezvous, and do walk, in large numbers, continually along its pavements. It is related of a countryman that having attained, by ways and means which he could never afterwards recall, to the Temple station, and having made his way to the Strand, he took refuge in a doorway. After waiting there a full hour by the clock he ventured, at last, to ask a passerby when he thought the procession would have passed.

And so from the low Temple archway, the site of the projected subway, we may take our journey west, past St. Clement Danes "where Johnson used to worship"; past Essex, Arundel, Norfolk, and Surrey streets, all named after sundry palaces which great lords of such title had hereabouts at one time; past St. Mary le Strand, where Thomas a Becket once was priest. And so on to Somerset House and Waterloo bridge. And over the way is Covent Garden and Drury Lane. The place is full of history. John of Gaunt and Wat Tyler rub shoulders with Bishop Berkeley and Geoffrey Chaucer and think little of the matter. The poet Marvell and the painter Turner forgather with Samuel Butler and Sir Peter Lely and think less of it; whilst Samuel Johnson and Inigo Jones meet point-blank and think nothing of it at all.

A Kitchener Story.

The best Kitchener stories are those told of his tours of inspection. Quite a gem in his way is the story of a certain commanding officer who was putting his troops through a series of manoeuvers before Lord Kitchener. Somehow or other he managed to get his men thoroughly mixed up. In the end, however, the C. O. bobbed up smiling, and, trotting proudly up to "K. of K." remarked. "There, sir; I flatter myself that that was extremely well done." "Oh, excellently, excellently!" was the suave reply. "May I ask what on earth you were trying to do?"

Sir Ian Hamilton.

General Sir Ian Hamilton recently celebrated his 63rd birthday, having been born at Corfu on January 16, 1853. In addition to being a distinguished general he is the author of three prose works—"Jauni la Jusk," "Fighting of the Future," and "A Staff Officer's Scrap Book," as well as a volume of verse, "The Ballad of Hadji and Other Poems." Several of the latter were written while he was in India. He first saw active service in the Afghan War, and afterwards in the first Boer War and the South African War. He was also in the Nile and Burmese Expeditions, and took part in the Chitral Relief Action.

The Kitten Was Saved.

The Deal lifeboat put out in a blinding snowstorm the other day to help a schooner which was driving before the gale. With great difficulty the captain, his wife, the mate, and three boys were rescued. When in the lifeboat the captain said that he had left two dogs, a cat, and a kitten in the ship. But when the lifeboat was being beached a wet, bedraggled kitten leapt on shore. It had, unseen by anyone, jumped into the lifeboat at the last moment.

Against Himself.

Sir George Reid does not mind telling stories against himself. One of his favorites concerns a meeting at which he told the audience, "Australia is my country, and my sincerest efforts have always been to do it the greatest service in my power." Whereupon a man at the back yelled out, "So you left it!"

Prefer the whip of your children, no matter how trivial the act. It will give them an honest desire to do better next time.

Taste!

You will heartily enjoy the taste and aroma of Cowan's Perfection Cocoa — and further, it is the most wholesome nourishing Canadian beverage.

FAMILIAR FACES GONE.

Many Types Once Seen in London Have Passed With the War.

It is tradition itself which has been most hardly hit by the war. Where are the traditions of London, the traditional institutions of her streets and taverns, writes a London correspondent? "All, all are gone, the old familiar faces!"—gone either to the front to fight the Germans or to the munition factory to feed the firing line.

Thus the streets of the metropolis would look strange to the eyes of a rejuvenated Johnson or Lamb. The absence of the organ-grinder, who, Italian or English, has largely deserted the streets for the trenches, they would naturally not notice.

But the organ-grinder is only one of the many more or less picturesque characters fast disappearing from our public places. Here is a list of some others: Costers; crossing sweepers, shoe-blacks, beggars, match sellers, hawkers of pirated music, coffee-stall keepers, apple women.

The last-named ladies, it may be noted, have probably found more profitable, if less picturesque, employment in one of the many man-depleted factories. Then one misses the eloquent-tongued itinerant toy hawker, of indubitable Cockney origin, whose place is now being taken by swarthy little Japs with soapstone ornaments to sell.

Another personality whose loss one bears with more equanimity is that of the charity canvasser—usually a long, lean, cadaverous, and be-spectacled gentleman of clerical collar and untidy cuffs—who once knocked gently but persistently at our doors.

Return of the Slate.

The increasing expense of paper these days of militancy has led to the reappearance of the school slate in some parts of the United Kingdom. However, the slate and slate-pencil makers may rejoice in the prospect, sanitary science will most certainly oppose the use of the old-time slate.

"Medical authorities rise up in indignant protest at the very thought, and condemn the slate with hot breath as the most malignant of all disease transmitters," says a Scotch paper. "Those of us who go back to the slate epoch will freely admit that on sanitary grounds there is everything to be said against it. The small boy is not a fastidious or a cleanly animal. By choice he "cleaned" his slate by spitting upon it, and rubbing it with the front of his hand, and no rules prescribing the use of a sponge could break him to this habit. He thus prepared the slate as a culture ground for microbes if he happened to be possessed of any, and the amiable trick of writing upon one another's slates injurious remarks about the owner or the teacher effected a free exchange of germs."

And yet, though I am by no means a reactionary, I really wonder whether there is less sickness among school-children, less spreading of contagious diseases than there was when we all used slates?

It is a marvel, scientifically speaking, that any of us lived through those days of half a century ago! Will the elderly people of 1970 speak in the same terms of their youthful days? And will they live happier, longer, and be more free from disease than are we who live in this year of grace?

Whistling in Buenos Aires.

In Buenos Aires the police alone have the right of whistling on the streets. Any other person whistling is at once arrested.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid and you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail you suffer from backache. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Mysteries of Night Strike Chord in Listening Posts

Rats, Owls and All of Nature's Wild Life Keep Nerves on Edge When Ears Are Keyed to Hear Sound of an Enemy —An Officer's Watch Near the Verdun Front

(Special Despatch.)

PARIS, Saturday.

One of the unforeseen but important features of modern warfare, as it has developed through trench fighting, is the listening post, or "poste d'ecoute," as it is called by the French. Frequent references are made to it in the official communications and many stories have crept into the attempts which have been made to define its character.

A French writer of note, who is a lieutenant in the army fighting in the Verdun section, gives a description in very practical form of a listening post. Incidentally he speaks some errors which have arisen on this subject, and among others that which has considered the listening post as an attempt to modernise the American Indian's method of scouting by placing his ear to Mother Earth. It is interesting to note that this error is not confined to the civilian war correspondents, but that it is shared by soldiers in the different armies.

The listening post is usually fixed as to location and the same post may serve in a way for both of the adversaries. The lieutenant's description follows:—

"We go forward to the listening post with stealthy tread, after having covered our helmets with mud so that they may not reflect the moonlight. The moon is high and large and ice cold as it shines among the skeletons of the broken trees.

"Nothing stirs. The wood which has been so anxiously contested for by both sides seems dead. Branches hang down, trailing plants fall like locks of hair; stumps amputated by the shells, their wounded limbs in the clearings, which have been torn from all sides, make with their principal branches great gestures of malediction and of horror.

The Phantom Oak.

"All this serves as a cifcle around a great oak tree, majestic as a phantom, which has white draperies in its branches. They are the little parachutes which have fallen upon it fast from the illuminating shells which both sides send up at night to lighten the district. In such a scene one is inclined to carry one's imagination cold to the time when the earth, having been cold, will reveal to the indifference of the stars only ruins of cities or vestiges of forests.

"The wood seems dead. And yet men are spying out through the undergrowth where the moonlight profusely scatters fantastic shadows. They are spying also in little communicating trenches which circulate under this growth, and among the bared roots of the trees and under broken down trunks the grand drama is being pursued, intensified by the anguish [illegible] woods.

"There are dead bodies in this clearing which shows like a large moon spot between the two lines; in reality it is a factitious clearing, for here so many aerial torpedoes, so many trench howitzers and so many mines have torn up the trees that there no longer remain above the fallen branches anything but uneven posts, shredded to the summit. And the moonlight floods the scene, whitens and inundates the district.

"It is in the shadow of one enormous root, in a deep hole which it made in pulling itself out of the ground, above which it remains in tortured form like the hair of Medea, that our advanced watchers have taken their position.

"It is a bad spot if ever there was one. Several times Germans, without any impedimenta or accoutrements and with their hands and faces blackened like demons, have come crawling through the dead branches to throw hand grenades upon us.

"Besides, everything here is disturbing. One can be attacked from all sides, even from behind. The men watch with tense nerves, and when I approach the men furthest forward I am careful to make a little noise so that they may not be alarmed.

"'Whist, gently! They are listening.'

"'What have you here?'

"'Ah! it is you, Lieutenant. For the last few moments something is going on under the ground that is not right. There is a noise of knocking, and at the same time there is a shaking, and then there are pauses. At present there is nothing to be heard, and now it is beginning again, as if something was hollowing out, was piercing very rapidly and then stopping to take breath.'

"A moment ago we heard the noise of a motor,' said another of the men.

"'It must be a driller,' said the first one.

"From one listening post to another they transmit this suspicion, which at the beginning probably was nothing more than the hallucination of a watcher whose ears were humming or whose heart was beating too strongly. It must be said that no officer ever was able to hear this annoying and dreaded noise of underground work.

"Engineers listened vainly with the aid of microphones. But apprehensions quickly became realities in the middle of the mysterious night and the hostile woods.

"'Listen, it is beginning again. Don't you hear it?'

"I press my ear to the ground, but can hear nothing. And yet, yes, there is a dull sound. An irregular cadence which rebounds against the earth rather than shakes it. Might it not be one German watcher who is stamping his feet in his hole to keep them warm. This German is only fifteen metres away from us, we know, between two broken stumps. We hear him coughing at intervals with a stifled cough.

"'A ball!' my watchers whisper.

"'In places of this kind one cannot place barbed wire, but on a dark night long sticks, at the end of which are placed empty cans, are distributed here and there in the grass, and they strike together at the first careless touch.

The Empty Can Alarm.

"'One of them has been ringing. What is that, crawling stomach down? We peer out with all the intensity of our vision and I draw my revolver in order to be ready to bring down, before it has a chance to aim or to throw a missile, the agile shadow which is perhaps about to spring up in the silence of this inextricable growth.

"'Minutes pass. If it is a man he will play dead for a moment, perhaps for an hour. But it is not a man, for the cans ring out feebly two or three times and then something utters a faint cry and runs off into the brush.

"'An animal,' said the first soldier.

"'A measly rat,' said the second, with a tone of contempt. 'And what a number of them there are around here. There are so many dead bodies.'

"'Whist, it is a man,' and the speaker presses down still further in the shadow with staring eyes. 'I am sure that it just moved. It is not stirring now, but I am sure.'

"'Where is it?'

"'You are looking too much to the right. Do you see that white speck shining twenty metres away under the moon. Well, a few metres to the left there is a round fallen limb which is leaning against a stump, which makes a shadow. At the bottom of that shadow there is a black spot. Do you see it? It is coming toward us. It is stopping now and now it is coming on again.'

"'Are you sure?'

"'Oh, certain, Lieutenant! When he rose to advance I saw something shine on his back. Ah, the rascal, I'm going to take a shot at him.'

"He raises the weapon to a low position toward his shoulder, for he must avoid the risk of giving an alarm or showing it above the sheltering border, and he leans it on a root. He approaches a little closer to the edge of the cavity for greater surety and he aims long and carefully at the motionless mark, which, indeed, presents the appearance of a human form.

The Mysterious Shadow.

"'Clack!' The detachment lifts the echo of the wood like the crack of a whip. Nothing has stirred. The soldier remains with his cheek against the rifle, shaking his head and trying to see.

"'You made a mistake, Soldier.'

"'Not so sure. They are vicious. He did not get it under his skin, but he felt the wind from it and he is playing dead.'

"'I take my glasses from the case and I look. Even on dark nights objects seem more distinct through the lenses, and the brush which I am examining shows up to-night with a marvellous limpidity.

"'There is nothing at all in the shadow of those two trees but a dead branch, all the twigs of which I can distinguish.

"'It was a mistake that is only a dead branch,' I say.

"'Clack! It is the response of the enemy. His bullet struck somewhere in the trunk of the fallen tree whose roots hide us and not very far away. It did not come from the suspected spot but from the left, from a little trench whose sinuosities are connected with the roots of the trees. The German watcher had fired aiming at the flash of the shot from our side.

"'I like that better,' said Sellier peacefully. 'A shot is something clear, something you can understand. But I do not like all those mysterious happenings in the undergrowth. Great heavens, I would never have believed that there are so many things which creep around in a wood.'

"He is right. One perceives everywhere cautious steps, furtive movements which remain in suspense. Mysterious life is passing in all directions.

"'Something slips down in the air and settles on a dead tree with a silken swish. Then a sinister cry is raised in the silence and from a distance another answers.

"'It is an owl, and the other fellow down there is talking German to him. On these moonlight nights, they sing all night,' Sellier says.

Intoxication of the Life.

"I withdrew, breathing in deep breaths of the icy air. My blood is beating more quickly and I feel the intoxication of this dangerous and fascinating life inundate me.

"The same moon which lights me sheds the same cold and pure light all along the interminable line of the front, on the beaches, on the plains, on the hill tops, on the bombarded cathedrals and on the destroyed villages, everywhere that similar little listening posts stand out from the main line and watch each other. This moon dips her reflection in the Yser, in the Aisne, in the Meuse, and in all the black waters which are flowing in silence under the broken bridges.

"I am a link in the living chain, which bars access to France and protects the sleep of the nation. On my vigilance depends the solidity of the entire chain.

"Is it not true comrades, who like me mount this epic guard and who know also that at the most unexpected hours there comes this sudden flood of ardent vigor, that there always is mixed with it a feeling of pride?"

GERMANY MAKES PROVISION FOR THE "WAR BABIES"

(Special Despatch.)

BERLIN, Saturday.—The government has made provision whereby young women who were engaged to soldiers that had died on the battlefield can legally take the name of their deceased fiance and also prefix the name with the title of "Mrs." This new law is particularly designed to protect the "war babies" and make their births legitimate.

In order to guard against fraud in such cases proof that an engagement existed must be furnished, and testimony of the young woman's friends or relatives must be forthcoming to establish her claim, and the consent of her nearest relatives to this change of name must also be given.

WAR AS EMANCIPATOR OF TURKISH WOMEN

(Special Despatch.)

BERLIN, Saturday.

According to correspondence from Constantinople appearing in the German newspapers, Turkish women are now permitted more freedom than heretofore has been known, and the war has been the cause of this emancipation.

"Since the Allies abandoned the Dardanelles attack," writes a correspondent, "Constantinople has become normal and is now so far removed from the theatre of war as any big city in neutral countries. The cafés and motion picture houses are well attended and the theatres are crowded. Recently there was a big first night in the Petit Champs, the occasion being the performance of a French comedy. The actors were Turks, but the actresses were all Armenians, as Turkish women are not yet permitted to appear on the stage, but the general opinion is expressed by all thinking Turks that before long their women will make their first appearance as actresses. The emancipation of women in Turkey has made remarkable progress since the beginning of the war. In the best society in Constantinople the women no longer wear their veils when receiving their guests. Though veils continue to be worn by the Turkish women in the street, still the fashion has made them so flimsy and transparent that they might just as well be dispensed with.

"Consequently all the fascination and mystery that heretofore surrounded the harem has suddenly disappeared. There is no longer any such thing, and in its place there is simply the usual family life. The Turkish woman is as much a housewife as her European sister, and in this war her resources have been taxed to the utmost. Despite the fact that the rich agricultural country of Anatolia is not far distant, the prices of all necessaries of life have increased enormously. Coffee, which is Turkey's great drink from morning until night, is almost prohibitive in price. Sugar has become such a luxury that honey is now used for sweetening purposes, and milk can only be purchased by the well-to-do classes.

"French influence has a strong hold in Turkey. Despite the high prices the store windows are filled with goods from Paris, and even while French guns were thundering at the gates of the Dardanelles the boycott against French goods was only a half hearted affair. All Germans here acknowledge the deep French influence, and all cultured Turks speak French as fluently as their own language. Of course, some of them also speak German, but the Germans will have to work mighty hard if they hope to dispel the French influence. At present there are so many German soldiers and sailors in the streets that the German language is heard on all sides, and by order of the government the French signs on show windows have been removed and all announcements are displayed in the Turkish language."

Suez Canal Well Guarded, Says Man Making Trip

Saw French Aeroplane Station, Indian Camps and Transports and Graves of Those Fallen in Battle, and Tells of Mine Sweepers at Work Daily.

(Special Despatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

The Soerabajasche Handelsblad prints an interesting article of a journey through the Suez Canal made on the steamship Tabanan by a passenger from Holland.

"When we arrived at Port Said," writes this traveler, "the decks of the Tabanan were covered with sandbags in order to prepare against any possible attack by the Turks. The ship's lights at the stern were reflected and the passengers were ordered below. We were told that there was a strong Turkish force on the east side of the canal, and a few days previous they had fired on a French mail boat.

"At three o'clock in the afternoon we entered the canal. To the right we saw the French aeroplane station, with the wreckage of a hydroplane lying nearby, and to the left was a large encampment. Behind that as far as the eye could see the land was under water.

"Guided by a hydroplane overhead our ship slowly made her way. In the meantime darkness had set in, but, nevertheless, on both sides of the canal we could see the camps of the Indian troops. We passed two large transports carrying hundreds of horses.

"The ship anchored when we had made the journey half way through the canal, as no vessel is permitted to traverse the southern half of the canal at night. This is due to the fact that under cover of night the Turks lay mines. Therefore, every morning mine sweepers are at work. It is also forbidden to throw anything overboard. Recently a patrol boat sighted a box floating in the water, and this information was telegraphed to the various stations along the shores of the canal. Soon after the report spread that it was a box of dynamite, and as a consequence the canal was closed for an entire day.

"In the morning the Tabanan continued the journey through the southern half of the canal. We saw numerous stones marking the graves of those who had fallen in battle. Near Serapium we saw the resting place of Major von Hagen. The cross of granite which some loving hands had placed there had fallen on its side. On the right shore were lines of trenches occupied by Indian troops. Behind were Australian troops drilling with camels. At the entrance to the Red Sea we were met by the French war ships Requin and Mouraim. From all we could see the British, by means of war ships and aeroplanes, as well as patrol boats, had the canal well protected against any possible attack by the Turks."

British Capture Kilimanjaro, the Kaiser's Own Mountain

(Special Despatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

The campaign, which is removing from the map of the world the last vestige of Germany's colonial empire, will most profoundly wound the vanity of William II. through the capture by the British of Kilimanjaro Mountain, declares Mr. A. Fits-Maurice in the Paris Figaro. Kilimanjaro, the highest summit in Africa and one of the highest in the world, was the Kaiser's mountain, and he gave his name to one of its peaks.

When in 1886 the Commissioners were marking out the boundary of the new colony that had been conceded to Germany, William, who was then only Prince Imperial, insisted that this region be granted to Germany, and Lord Salisbury courteously consented to do him this favor. In order to make it possible they had to describe a rather large loop in the boundary, which, if it had been on a straight line, would have cut the mountain in two, leaving the highest peak in English territory.

The conquest of German East Africa is only a matter of time. Bounded on the east by the ocean, on the north by British possessions, on the west by the Belgian Congo and on the south by Rhodesia and the Portuguese colony of Mozambique, Germany's last foreign possession is encircled on all sides, and its last defenders will not have the opportunity to escape by being disarmed in neutral territory like those who fled from the Cameroons into Spanish Guinea.

The German colonists had the hardihood to invade British East Africa, where they met few opponents. It was there that General Smuts, who left the Cape with his army by sea and disembarked at Mombasa, went to meet them. They were quickly put to flight. Taveta, which they had occupied, was promptly retaken, and the South African army, dividing, penetrated German territory in two columns, surrounding Kilimanjaro and routing the Germans.

Another English force entered the German colony on the north, coming from Uganda, while the Belgians on the Congo attacked in the Lake Tanganyika region, and more English troops moved up from Rhodesia.

All these movements had for their objective the railway line which crosses part of the German territory from Dar-es-Salaam, on the ocean, to Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika. It was on this railroad that Emperor William relied to tap the mineral riches of the Belgian Congo for the profit of his empire.

"We Held the Line for the Empire at the Fight at St. Julien"

(Special Despatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

In reply to certain criticisms of the First Canadian Contingent which appeared in the Canadian press recently one of the "first liners" writes for the Dead Horse Corner Gazette, a trench newspaper of the contingent, a unique poem with a Kiplingesque swing. The poem, which was written at Viamertinghe, Belgium, regarding the brave showing of the Canadians at St. Julien, is as follows:—

"You say that the First Contingent
Are bums and rotters and snides;
You say we sullied your honor,
And a whole lot else besides.
We are probably all that you call us,
But you must admit we're men,
So I smile when I hear you bragging—
For we fought at St. Julien.

"We were a bit wild and roguish,
Though a soldier isn't a lamb;
And we drank and squandered our money
And none of us cared a damn.
So you thought us as black as painted,
But you'll change your opinion when
You meet the souls of the Germans
Who died at St. Julien.

"When you've learnt the lust of battle,
When your bravest and best are gone,
When seventy per cent are stricken,
And the rest keep fighting on—
You cease to mind the ravings
Of an editorial pen,
When you've tasted the blood and slaughter
At a fight like St. Julien.

"For though the First Contingent
Are bums and rotters and snides,
The dregs of a nation's manhood,
And a whole lot else besides;
Though we ruined your reputation
And blackened your name, but then—
We held the line for the Empire
At the fight at St. Julien."

Says the Socialists Fail to Grasp Real Meaning of War

(Special Despatch.)

PARIS, Saturday.

"Certain socialists," says a writer in the Paris Temps of March 24, "of more or less recognized standing in the international organization lately have made some statements regarding the war which tend to show that even at this late stage of the conflict the revolutionary spirits do not seem to grasp its real meaning."

"In the Prussian Landtag Dr. Liebknecht has indicated the errors of the Imperial Government's policies, but after all he has laid the whole responsibility for the war on capitalism. Similarly, Hjalmar Branting, leader of the social democratic party in Sweden, has maintained in an article written for the Daily Chronicle that as long as there are capitalists in the world there will be international difficulties, eventually leading to war. Here is a paradox unquestionably anti-pro-eminently socialistic, and more particularly savoring of German socialism, because it tends to charge all the belligerent nations with a part in the heavy responsibility which attaches to Germany alone. If the war would be attributed to the existence of what we call a capitalistic regime."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Road to Arcady.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

Copyrighted, 1915, by Associated Literary Press.

"How very extraordinary!" said Christopher Kent. He sat up and surveyed the red covered cart drawn by a very plump pony that had stopped by the side of the road.

A girl in a smart costume of tan covert climbed down from the front seat and fed the pony out of the shafts, tied him with a long tether so that he might crop the juicy sod and then returning once more to the cart helped a somewhat fragile but smiling lady to descend.

"Well, of all things!" said Christopher helplessly.

But words failed him as he watched the further proceedings of the girl in tan.

From the depths of the cart she brought forth a little folding table, which she proceeded to set up in a place screened from the gaze of passing folk by a hedge of wild honeysuckle.

On the table the girl set a shining copper kettle, two cups, two plates, a small teapot and various tin boxes and little glass jars, whose gay labels proclaimed the deliciousness within.

"It's a picnic," the young man decided, and as the older lady lighted the alcohol flame and it burned beneath the copper kettle Christopher sighed.

In ten minutes he was due at the Sunset inn for his supper. He would eat it with the rest of the surveying party of which he was the head. They would have fried ham and boiled potatoes and pie, and the only woman would be the girl who waited on the table and who was big and frowsy and stupid.

And here within a stone's throw of where he lay under the great oak were two ladies making tea as daintily as if they were in their drawing room.

He laid down his book. "It's a romantic situation," he reflected, "and far be it from me to evade it." With that he stepped jauntily into the open.

He saw the girl lift her head and look at him, and as he went toward her she rose and came forward.

"I am so glad," she said, "to see some one who will tell me if there is a place near here where I can get oats for my pony. I gave him the last this morning."

"I was just coming," Christopher replied gravely, "to find if there was anything I could do for you. It is an unusual circumstance, I might say a great treat, to see ladies up here. I felt that I must offer you the hospitality of the mountain road—the keys of our city, as it were."

The girl gave him a quick glance, noting the strength of the tall figure and his air of good breeding. "I am sure," she said, "that you are very kind, and now if you will tell me your name I will present you to my mother, Mrs. Ames."

The older lady acknowledged the introduction genially.

"You must stay and have tea with us," she said. "I am afraid we can't offer you much but tinned things. But they are really good, and Eleanor was able to get some eggs and some lettuce this morning, so she is going to have a salad and make an omelet in the chafing dish."

"Then your picnic has been an all day affair?" was Christopher's question.

"It has been an affair of two months," Mrs. Ames said, with a smile. "We live in the cart."

"You live"— Words failed the young man as he looked at the two graceful women, each with the indefinable something that proclaims the sheltered woman.

It seemed incredible that they should trust themselves alone in the mountain wilds with their pony and their frail little cart.

But the daughter was explaining smilingly. "We lost everything," she said, "in the panic last fall. And mother's health failed at the same time. The doctor said that she must have the mountain air, and we had the pony—he was a pet from my little girl days—so we bought the cart and started on a trip of adventure.

"We have been on the road two months and haven't had a single uncomfortable experience. Mother has gained ten pounds, and we have had a lovely time."

"But isn't it a bit dangerous?" Kent asked.

"We were a little scared at first," Eleanor admitted, "especially at night. There was always an owl to hoot or a dog to howl or a frog to croak, but after we got used to it we slept like babies."

Kent shook his head. "There's a pretty tough class among the miners up here. It's different lower down, where you come in touch only with agricultural communities. But some of these men are very ignorant and very rough."

"Please," the girl cautioned, "please don't tell us about them. We want to reach the top of the mountain, and I am not a bit afraid."

She was making the omelet as she talked, turning it expertly with a thin knife and tasting it up when it was puffy and brown.

"It is a food fit for the gods." Kent commented when she had served it with the salad and cream cheese and crackers.

"If you only knew," he continued, "how good it seems to eat once more of the food of civilization. You should see the cooking we have at the Sunset inn."

"This is the food of Arcady," Eleanor told him. "Mother and I call this the perfect land. And tomorrow we shall reach the heights!"

The way she said it thrilled Kent with a new emotion. How beautiful she was with the dreams in her eyes!

"You must let me watch over you while you are here," he said after a silence. "I am afraid some of these half savage foreigners may make it displeasant when they know you are unprotected."

But Eleanor would not hear of it. "Indeed we are safe," she protested. "Every one we meet has treated us with fine courtesy."

But he was not convinced, and all that night he slept on the ground within calling distance of the red cart.

The next day the pony drew the red cart to the top of the mountain, and there the ladies set up a permanent camp, facing the sunset, with the valleys stretching far below them.

Every day Christopher Kent climbed the forest road, taking with him sometimes a fish that he had caught in the stream or a brace of birds to be broiled over the fire.

And always the two lonely women welcomed him. Mrs. Ames frankly and Eleanor with a dawning shyness that gave him hope.

"I have had a bit of good fortune," he told the girl one morning eagerly. "My uncle has written that when I go back in December I am to have a part interest in his business. It means a big income and a settled place for life."

"And you won't come again to the mountain?" she asked.

"No, my work will be done in town." She sat very still, looking off over the valley. "Poor mountain!" she said. "How lonely it will be when we are gone and the winter comes!"

She shivered a little. "It's such a gray October day," she added.

"What are your plans?" he questioned.

"Mine? Oh, I don't know!" a little drearily. "When I can leave mother I will go to work. In the meantime we will live with a distant cousin."

It was on his tongue to tell her how he loved her, but he felt that this was not the time or the place. Here he must be her protector, not her lover.

That night he could not sleep, and at last he rose and looked out of the window. The wind moaned and sighed in the trees; the moon was out by clouds. Somewhere in the distance the bell of a deadfall among the hills sounded, and he listened the eerie grew fainter those of the bears were going up the mountain.

He dressed hurriedly and followed. As he came near the little camp he heard the snarl of angry voices mingled with Eleanor's clear tones.

"You must let the pony alone," she said, "at once."

Then, as the wrestle of a lash cut the air, she spoke again. "If you touch him," she said, "I'll shoot."

Christopher came into the circle of the firelight on a run. A half dozen swarthy men were grouped about the pony. Within the cart covered Mrs. Ames. Eleanor stood on the back step and pointed her pistol straight at the snarling crowd.

She was enveloped in a long raincoat, and her hair was braided into two long golden ropes. She looked like a child, with her white face and slight figure, and when she saw Christopher she swayed toward him.

"Oh, make them go away!" she cried helplessly, and the pistol dropped from her nerveless hand.

The men turned and saw him, and at the sight of his set face they at once began apologies. "We just wanted to have some fun with the pony," they said. But he waved them away. "I'll deal with you later," he said, and they slunk away in the shadows.

Then Christopher went to the girl, who was bending over her mother. The older woman revived immediately in the comfort of a strong man's presence. "I was very silly," she said, "but they looked such brutes."

Eleanor made some coffee under the trees, and when Kent had carried a cup to Mrs. Ames, who was still in the cart, he came back and issued orders.

"I am going to drive you down into the valley," he said. "You and your mother must spend the night at one of the farmhouses."

"But"— Eleanor protested.

"There are no 'buts,'" he told her. "You are to obey," and he smiled down at her.

The light from the dying fire showed the tenderness in his strong face, and, seeing it, she said "Oh!" with quick drawn breath.

"Dear heart," he murmured, "just once you must obey. But if you could promise to love and honor always we might make a marriage service of it tomorrow. There's a little church in the valley, and I know the minister."

"You are doing it just to take care of us," she said, flashing.

He took her head in his. "I am doing it because I love you," he said. "Shall we find the little church, Eleanor?"

"Oh, who would have believed that the road to Arcady led there?" she whispered, with a wonderful light in her eyes.

Was Troubled With BOILS
ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him: "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and disrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockrell, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My sister told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils and they all say it is great medicine." I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

Of all overworked women probably the housewife is the hardest worked. She has so much to attend to, with very little help. Her work can be lightened if she knows the value of system and she should pay and take a short rest in the daytime. A physician who became famous almost around the world, Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., the specialist in women's diseases, for many years practiced medicine in a farming district. He there observed the lack of system in the planning of the work.

If it is a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The disorder should be treated sensibly and systematically with Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For diseases from which women suffer "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful restorative. During the last fifty years it has benefited from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery and distress caused by these diseases.

If you are a sufferer, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Slang That Isn't Slang.

"We are so used to slang," said the woman who thinks, "that we have fallen into the habit of including in that category almost every unusual word or phrase—for example, the verb 'to faze,' which means to baffle, to confuse, to perplex. That word is misspelled variously phase, phaze, pheaze and feaze. It is not slang, and any woman may use it without fear, for it is as good English as any other in the language. Shakespeare employs it, spelling it 'feze,' as it should be spelled. Then there is the phrase 'lie down,' which almost everybody regards as slangy when used in the sense of surrender to obstacles or fatigue. It, too, is not slang.

"We have for it no less an authority than Thomas a Kempis, who certainly cannot be considered an imitator of George Ade. That eminent writer says: 'Love feels no burden, thinks nothing of trouble, attempts what is above its strength, pleads no excuse of impossibility, for it thinks all things lawful for itself and all things possible. It is therefore able to undertake all things, and it completes many things and warrants them to take effect where he who does not love would lie down.' She undoubtedly uses the expression as meaning to give up in the face of difficulties. It's better not to chide a word or phrase as slang unless one is sure."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SEPARATE SKIRT.

Style Tips About This Revived, Popular Garment.

The separate skirt is in for an excellent season. Always the outing period is favorable to the skirt of crash linen, velveteen, corduroy and kindred fabrics. To these has been added recently an exceedingly fine silk jersey with a satin finish, which may be considered the skirt de luxe of the season.

If one chooses a velveteen skirt it must be of a pastel color. To wear a skirt of black velveteen for sporting purposes is to advertise oneself behind the times. The models of delicate blue, pale pink, violet, canary, silk green and rose are exceedingly modish. To be sure, the white velveteen is also listed. It must be remembered that the velveteen is newer and smarter than the corduroy.

Should velveteen be considered too delicate or lacking in serviceable qualities there is the linen alternative in heavy weave and in the so called pastel or rainbow nuances. There is little attempt to drape these skirts, but the lines are very full, and many of them have pocket accessories.

For dressy purposes there are separate skirts of striped taffeta, principally in the black and white combination, or of shot taffeta, made with plaitings or ruches to go with the separate blouse of georgette crape, which may be garnished with bead embroideries or appliqué motifs. The black taffeta skirt will always find a place in the sartorial affections of the practical woman, and now it is much more dressy in its lines and trimmings than during the past few seasons.

One cannot omit mention of the broadly striped linens and heavy cotton fabrics that are offered in the new skirts. To say that they are striking is to put it mildly. Anything less than an inch wide for the stripe is regarded as too mild and unobtrusive to be worthy of a place on fashion's schedule.

Black and white stripes come in for approbation, but they by no means have the field to themselves.

The difficulty in cleaning gas globes is largely due to the ornamental roughness of the glass and it is often hard to clean them with soap and water, even with the addition of soda. A little salts of lemon added to the compounds will make the task easy.

In cleaning upholstered furniture do not beat directly upon the covering as this helps to wear it out and scatters the dust in clouds, but lay towels or thick cloths on top and then do the beating. These cloths should be carefully gathered up and shaken out every little while.

GERMANY DRASTIC WITH FOOD SHARPS

One Writer Says System Saved the Nation—City Children Now Cared For in the Country.

Drastic action by the German authorities in their efforts to see that, despite the admitted shortage of foodstuffs, the people of the cities are protected against the machinations of the "food extortioners," as described in recent cables from Berlin, via Holland and Scandinavia, was clearly foretold in numerous articles appearing in the German press during the past month. Police raids upon butchers and other dealers in food who overstepped the regulations were regarded by the Berlin newspapers as the natural sequence of an order issued by Dr. Clemens Delbruck, the Minister of the Interior, to the local officials in connection with the campaign against the extortioners and reported as follows in the Berliner Tageblatt of April 19:

"The vexatious phenomena appearing in the food market are to be done away with, so far as this is possible, through a better co-operation between the police authorities and the local officials. The regulations prescribed by the municipalities and the price-fixing bureaus can only be made effective if they are kept under close observation by the police. The Minister does not fail to recognize the difficult task that faces the police administration, with its materially reduced personnel. But care must be taken to see that the officers intrusted with the execution of the law are authoritatively instructed as to the rules applying to the matter of supply and consumption, as well as regarding the maximum prices. The royal and municipal police administrations have been admonished in this sense. In the case of municipal administrations the necessary information may be imparted by the city authorities handling the matter of food regulation. Similar action is expected in the cities having a royal police administration."

In the meantime the numerous items about food questions appearing in the columns of the German press of all political shades give the impression that in the face of the frequent official assurances to the effect that the Teuton nations are in a position to "hold out" indefinitely so far as food is concerned, the situation is constantly becoming more nearly unendurable, especially for the poorer classes who are unable to pay the high prices prevailing, and that a further limitation of consumption in the case of those who are in a position to buy what they need will be necessary in order to make the supplies on hand last until the next harvest. One of the latest plans for filling the stomachs of the children living in the larger cities embraces their transportation by the wholesale to the country, where food is not so scarce.

Prepare for New Crop.

An idea of the seriousness of the situation as it presents itself to many German publicists is given by the following excerpts from an article by F. Hoff, a member of the Reichstag and of the Prussian Diet, printed in the Berliner Tageblatt of April 17:

"Preparations for the coming harvest year must be made on the basis of its being a war year, quite independent of the fact that peace may be concluded in the nearer or more distant future. Even after peace has been happily attained the system of the production and distribution of food that has been so completely changed by the war can resume its former shape but slowly as it seems impossible to abrogate the Government regulations in this field as soon as peace has been restored.

"This opinion is openly shared by the Government. Already on Feb. 16 Dr. Michaelis declared in the Prussian Chamber of Deputies that the preliminaries had been begun to handle the coming harvest year on a war basis. Still we should be thankful that the convention of German cities pointed out this fact with especial emphasis in its last memorial to the Imperial Chancellor.

"Thus far all the imperial regulations directed to guarantee the rational and economical use, and the equitable distribution of our stocks of foodstuffs, have been confined during the course of the harvest year under the pressure of temporary events and considerations.

"We can approve these words of the convention of German cities without hesitation. Among all the criticism directed toward the measures taken by the Government the words, too late, have almost always occupied first place. Timely preparation, the working out of a clearly outlined economic plan for the entire harvest year, and then its logical execution is what we need and what we must demand. In so doing, however, the only point of view to be taken into serious consideration is that which aims at the best possible use of the food on hand for the nourishment of the people, even if it renders further reduction of our stock of cattle unavoidable, something that in itself is to be deplored.

"This is true first and foremost in the matter of our supply of bread. Of course, we must confess that this part of our economic war machine has relatively functioned the best. The bread cards saved the Fatherland in the beginning of 1915, when we realized that, in consequence of our far too large stock of cattle in relation to our home production — in peace times 30 per cent was dependent upon the importation of foreign feed — some two-thirds of our stock of grain for bread had been consumed during the first five months of the harvest year 1914-1915. If it had been possible materially to increase the bread ration for the harvest year of 1915-1916, say, to about the same as in time of peace, it would have been a great contribution to the nourishment of the people.

Bread Scarce Now.

"Unfortunately that could not be done. For instance, if we had more bread and flour, it would be much easier to endure the scarcity of meat than it is at present. The shortage of grain for bread is due in a great measure to the poor harvest of 1915, but it must be admitted, unfortunately, that certain mistakes in organization were also largely responsible. And even in the harvest year of 1915-1916, despite the relatively poor harvest quantities of grain good for bread have been to cattle or used in other irrational ways. * * *

"In the future, therefore, we cannot permit ourselves the luxury of feeding bread grain to cattle under any circumstances. All the grain suitable for the nourishment of the people—naturally after the amount needed for seed has been set aside—must be held ready for the people's food and in this connection entirely in the sense of the convention of German cities a material increase in the bread ration must be taken into consideration at once."

At the meeting of German Mayors to which Herr Hoff refers numerous suggestions regarding the best methods of "stretching" the foodstuffs on hand were made, and some new regulations were agreed upon.

According to scattered items in the German press and reports brought out of the empire by neurals, practically every foot of tillable ground in the country has been planted this spring, and the authorities hope that the united efforts of the people and the Government will result in a harvest large enough to carry the nation through the next war winter, provided due economy is practised and the "food extortioners" put out of business through a system of distribution practically abolishing the middlemen. It is understood that the occupied territories in Russia, Belgium and France is also being planted upon the largest possible scale.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Salmon in New Zealand.

Systematic attempt to establish the quinnat salmon in New Zealand waters was first made in 1899. It was decided to concentrate efforts on one river on the east coast of the South Island—the Waitaki River. For several years after that large importations of ova were made, and in 1907 it was found that the fish were returning from the sea to spawn. Since then their numbers have been found to be increasing yearly, and the inspector now states that the number of running fish this year was much greater than since the commencement of the experiment. It was also found that there was a large run of fish up the Rangitata River, about seventy miles north of the Waitaki, and some had found their way even farther north. The largest quinnat salmon yet caught in New Zealand weighed over thirty-two pounds.

A Widow at Nine.

Marriage at the age of 13—as in the case of a woman who has just died at Shoreditch, Eng.—would not have been regarded as extraordinary in the 17th century. In those days children of noble families, particularly wards in Chancery, were frequently wedded at the age of 9, and sometimes even at 5. Little Moll Villiers, the Duke of Buckingham's daughter, was not merely a wife, but a widow at 9, and we read of her romping in the garden and climbing cherry trees in her widow's veil. In almost every instance, however, such marriages were in the name only, and the little wives were allowed to reach their teens before taking up the burdens of wedded life.

Rids Poisons From the Blood Clears Up the Complexion

Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used

The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. The sallow complexion tells him that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples tell him that the kidneys are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons.

You can apply this test in your own case and may be able to add other symptoms, such as headaches, pains and aches through back and limbs, spells of biliousness and indigestion.

If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how quickly they will rid your system of poisonous impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

Mrs. F. N. Hall, 103 Queen street, St. John, N.B., writes: "I am glad to say I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with splendid results. I was greatly troubled with constipation and pimples on the face. I tried other remedies and used liquid arsenic three times a day for a year to get rid of the pimples but received no benefit. I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and it was not very long before I was completely cured. The pills acted on the bowels, kidneys and liver and cleansed them of all impure matter. I think they cannot be beaten as a means of ridding a person of that tired aching due to weak kidneys, and I would not be without them in the house for any money."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SPORT BLOUSE.

By Anabel Worthington.

A model of simplicity, showing art. This design as a ladies' sport blouse would seem to strengthen the belief that Americans like practical clothes. With the material in pencil stripes, smartly contrasting with that used in the collar, there is pronounced style effect. A blue strip of the blouse material, following the collar edge, is noticeably smart; a similar blue strip running down the outer edge of the right front, which laps the left in closing, is also very effective, and large, covered buttons are another feature of interest. The sleeves are quite full and gathered at the wrist, where a novel cuff is headed with a strap of the material used in the collar, giving fashion's look to the sleeve, with a button to decorate the cuff. An unusual strap fastens the left side of the front and decoratively holds the wide girdle of silk, satin or velvet, as may be preferred. Material woven with a military braid stripe will be admirable for this model.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To make a duplicate of the model we only 2¾ yards of material in 36 inch width, with ⅝ yard goods for the collar and sleeve strap and 1¼ yards ... for the girdle. If you ... cents to the office of this publication this may obtain the pattern.

WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN BEGINS MONDAY

Two New German Divisions Participated in Fresh Attacks

Germans Succeed in Occupying a Small French Work South of Hill 287 But Otherwise Were Repulsed in an Attempt to Throw the French Out of Avocourt Wood---Attacks Were Preceded by Very Heavy Artillery Preparation.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, May 19.—(French Official Communique).—In an infantry attack, led by two new divisions, the Germans last night occupied a small French work south of Hill 287, but otherwise were repulsed in an attempt to throw the French out of Avocourt Wood, north-west of Verdun, the War Office announced to-day.

The infantry attack was preceded by the heaviest artillery preparation, German guns raking the French front for several hours with terrific drum fire.

The enemy then rushed forward against both the Avocourt Wood positions and the French works of Hill 304.

On both wings, the German attack was halted abruptly. Only in the centre, where the French work was occupied, did the French line yield.

The French retained the German fort captured yesterday in this region.

In the Argonne a German attempt to penetrate a small French salient near St. Hubert was stopped by French fire.

Lieut. Navarre, of the French air forces, who recently challenged Immelman, the German air hero, to an aeroplane duel, brought down his tenth enemy aeroplane yesterday near Belleric. Another French flier shot down a German plane near St. Menehould. Cerardmer, in the Vosges region, was bombarded last night.

Birrell Testifies in Irish Investigation

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 19.—Augustine Birrell, who resigned as Chief Secretary for Ireland, following the Dublin rebellion, was the first witness to-day when the Royal Commission resumed its investigation of the causes leading up to the outbreaks.

Birrell confirmed the lengthy statement of Under Secretary Nathan yesterday, in which Nathan said the Government knew in advance the plans of the rebels, but did not disarm them, fearing bloodshed. Birrell then read a statement of his own, dealing chiefly with the growth of the Sinn Fein movement.

Late in March Birrell swore he asked Lord Kitchener and Sir John French Commander of the Home Forces, to send more troops to Ireland, because he was nervous about the situation in Dublin. They refused, on the ground that they had no troops to spare. Birrell said he always felt very ignorant of what was going on in Dublin cellars. For that reason he asked for more troops, believing their presence would act as a deterrent to the Sinn Feiners.

Birrell said that the defiant attitude of the Ulsterites undoubtedly encouraged the rest of Ireland to revolt.

Ulster Provisional Government, he said, encouraged gun running, and made plans for warfare in Belfast with all pomp and ceremony of rebellion.

This affected those inclined to be disloyal elsewhere, he said. Catholic Irelanc contended that what Ulsterites were allowed to do they could do. If Home Rule had not passed there would have been a revolt at the beginning of the war.

Birrell said it was impossible to over-estimate the bad effect created among Irish Catholics by the advent into the British Cabinet of Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader.

Birrell explained that drilling of armed bands of men was not suppressed before the rebellion because it would have been difficult to prove the men had hostile intentions.

"Was the policy of non-intervention in dealing with Ulster volunteers a Cabinet decision?" he was asked. "Yes," was the response.

"Did the Cabinet make a similar decision regarding Sinn Fein volunteers?" he was asked. "No," he responded.

Berlin Voting On Change In Name

A SOCK SHOWER FOR 93RD BATTALION

The 57th Chapter, I. O. D. E., wish to thank the ladies who so kindly helped make their sock shower such a success on Saturday. Over six hundred pairs were received. Quite a number were contributed from the surrounding districts. As the 93rd will be here for a few days longer, it is earnestly desired that a sufficient number of pairs be provided to give each man a pair. This will mean about 400 pairs.

Mrs Hill, 303 Brock street, is convener of the shower and still has some wool left. If anyone will volunteer t knit the wool may be had at the above address. Socks may be left with the convenor or at the recruiting room on Simcoe street any day this week.

CREATORE'S BAND WELCOMED TO-DAY ON ITS ARRIVAL

Famous Organization Met at G.T.R. Station at Noon and Escorted by the Band of the 93rd Battalion

BIG CONCERT TO-NIGHT

Creatore's famous band arrived in town on the noon G.T.R. train to-day, ready for their big concert in the Grand Opera House to-night, which will be the greatest musical event in years. The celebrated musicians were surprised when they alighted from the train to be met at the station by the Band of the 93rd Battalion, who greeted them with a lively march. The visiting band were escorted to the Empress Hotel by the 93rd and on their arrival expressed their thanks by cheering the local band. Lieut. Gliddon, bandmaster of the 57th Regimental Band, was at the station to meet Signor Creatore, and accompanied him to the hotel. To-night's concert, the profits of which are to be donated to the regimental fund of the 93rd Battalion, and should be liberally patronized. Creatore is one of the most celebrated conductors in the world, and his band has a world-wide reputation.

While Rain Falls Street Oil Doesn't

Supposing it does rain every day, why be gloomy? We are spared the discomfort of dust and the annoyance of those who seem eager to complain of it. Ald. McIntyre doubtless regards "our daily rain" with considerable satisfaction. It obviates the early use of street oil and probably will enable the genial and acquiescent Chairman of the Board of Works to oil a few streets other than those originally decided upon before the deluge. Of course it may clear up to-morrow and remain cleared for weeks, and the country side would soon be deep in disfiguring dust, not to mention the unwatered streets of the city

NO REHEARSAL

There will be no rehearsal of the 57th ban to-night, owing to the appearance at the Grand of Creatore's Band.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

It is requested that all members attend the meeting on Monday next, May 22nd. Clair Jarvis, Esq., Head Clerk, will be here. Business important.

Why The 93rd Requires A Regimental Fund

In connection with the campaign for the Regimental Fund of the 93rd Battalion, the question is being asked "Why is such a fund needed?" Here are a few of the reasons:

1. Extra rations for the men. The government provides necessities. The men need and should have more than is provided. Men accustomed to home fare and its plain variety.

2. Recruiting expenses. The regiment has already incurred so much as $2,000.00 of expense in recruiting, and this expense will be still incurred after it goes into camp. The officers and men should not be required to pay this.

3. The regiment could not leave camp for a route march without kitchens to provide meals. One is needed for each company.

4. Extra care and comforts for the sick.

5. Music for the band, and repairs for instruments and drums.

6. Extra marquee tent for use of the men. Sort of headquarters, and as a gathering place in rainy weather, and for recreation purposes.

7. Sporting goods for the men of the rank and file. Games and sports benefit the men and aid in good feeling, comradeship and esprit de corps.

8. A small motor truck. A very great convenience. There is much to fetch and carry.

A word of explanation in regard to rations: It is not proposed that the men shall be regaled with luxuries, but merely that the Government allowance should be supplemented. For instance in the army scale, tea is not laid down for use at dinner. There are not many of use who could get along without tea. This is one of the things that the fund will be able to supply. For supper the allowance is bread and cheese, or bread and jam, etc. Eggs are not included in the Government list, and if they are supplied the men must be paid for out of the regimental fund.

The other needs such as field kitchens, marquee tents, etc., are clearly recognized. Counties all over the province are seeing to it that their men are supplied. Peterborough must not fall behind in this respect.

HUGE PHOTOGRAPH OF 93rd BATTALION WAS TAKEN TO-DAY

Peterboro' Soldiers Face 42 Centimetre Picture Machine Without Flinching---No Church Parade on Sunday--Advance Guard to Leave For Barriefield Camp on Monday---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The 93rd Battalion, which will be soon leaving Peterborough to face the Germans had to face a 42 centimetre camera this morning, when the Roy Studio took a photograph of the whole battalion. The huge panoramic camera was operated from a high platform erected by the Pioneers, and the Battalion was drawn up in semi-circular fashion with the Armouries as a background. The picture will be one of the biggest of its kind ever taken in Peterborough and the group was the largest number of overseas men to be photographed in this city. Afterwards the Studio took individual photographs of A and B Company and of a number of the platoons. C and D Companies, the Machine Gun Section, Signallers, etc will also be photographed so that there will be a complete photographic record of the battalion in Peterborough. Posing for the camera put also a complete stop to the drill this morning.

There will be no Church parade for the 93rd Battalion on Sunday, the men being allowed to spend the whole day with their families as it will be the last Sunday for the battalion in Peterborough.

A writer in another column makes the suggestions that all men who tried to join the 93rd Battalion and were rejected on account of physical disability should be given an opportunity to march out with the Battalion before it leaves Peterborough. "A. R." buttons may now be had at the Armouries by those who failed to pass the medical examination, the "A. R." standing for "Applied and Rejected."

Whirlwind Campaign For Battalion Fund

ROOSEVELT RAKES THE ADMINISTRATION IN UNITED STATES

Calls the Governmental Representatives Ninety-six Per Feeble and Sarcastically Refers to Note-writing as an Intellectual Amusement

SLAMS FORD AS WELL

Special to The Examiner:

DETROIT, May 19.—Col. Roosevelt carried a message of dire warning to Henry Ford's bailiwick to-day. Speaking before an audience of representative Detroiters, he lambasted Ford's pacifism, raked the Wilson administration for "make-believe preparedness" and announced that only a policy of staunch readiness of democratism, through nationalizing and of Unity of purpose would keep America in the forefront of nations.

The Colonel accused influential Germans, who reflected the German Government's views, of approving the German-American peciket plans in the United States, with the idea of keeping America unprepared while maintaining Germany ready.

He said the present Governmental representatives at Washington were "ninety six per cent., feeble" and sarcastically referred to "note writing and other intellectual exercises" while scornfully inveighing against the "policy of culpable weakness and timidity" pursued by the administration.

Roosevelt declared for standing army of quarter million men, an efficient fleet and universal military training as only means of prepared ness which would save the United States nation.

Sent Supplies to Moore Hospital At Shorncliffe

The Peterborough Progressive Club has lately received a letter from Mrs. Clegg, wife of Lieut. Col. Clegg of this city now on duty in England, saying that the Moore Barracks at Shorncliffe was in need of supplies and asking if some could not be sent them. The club has forwarded to them this week the following:

Hospital supplies: 4 sheets, 6 pillowcases, 12 dayshirts, 12 nightshirts, 3 pyjamas, 1 jacket, 11 soft cushions, 4 round cushions, 20 slings, 227 hospital handkerchiefs, 20 water bag covers.

Surgical supplies. 180 pads, 12 x16, 350 pads 9 x 12, 170 compresses, 400 pads 6 x 7.

A bale which was sent to the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe some time ago has arrived safely. There will be no meeting held on Wednesday, May 24th.

RAGS! RAGS! RAGS!

We want ALL your old rags old clothes, old rubbers, even your old dust rags—and if you have some old papers and magazines that the Ashburnham ladies didn't collect last week we will be glad to take them too. Clean out your bureau drawers and sewing boxes! Tie all your men folks' old linen collars in a bunch—they are in a class by themselves. If you haven't a rag bag, make one now for the Play Grounds Committee. Use an old flour or potato bag, or if you can't find a bag, get all your old clothes together and tie them into as compact a bundle as possible. They will be called for on Tuesday morning, May 30th.

REMEMBER, old rubbers, old stockings, old collars, old dust rags, old suits, old papers, and all the nice new clippings from your summer's sewing. Anything and everything in the clothing line—save them for the Play Grounds' Committee.

Ten Teams of Ten Men Each Will Start Out on Monday Morning on a Two-day Canvass of the Citizens for the 93rd.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

The whirlwind campaign to raise a regimental fund for the 93rd Battalion will be commenced next Monday morning when ten teams of ten men each will start out on a two days' canvass of the city. Preliminary arrangements were completed last night at a meeting in the recruiting rooms, Simcoe street, where the 'Old Guard' of patriotic citizens, whose energetic efforts resulted in the success of the Patriotic Fund and Belgian Relief Fund campaigns, met to discuss next week's effort. Mr. Dan O'Connell was voted to the chair and Mr. S. R. Armstrong acted as secretary of the meeting.

Mr. O'Connell in an opening address informed those present of what it was hoped to accomplish. He stated that the Speaker's Patriotic League had been asked to supply speakers to wait upon the councils of the different townships and urge that municipal grants be made to the fund. From these sources Mr. O'Connell thought that they could count on $3,000 being secured from the county, leaving the balance of the $10,000 to be raised in the city. By a voluntary subscription, Mr. O'Connell believed that $6,000 or $7,000 could be collected in the two day campaign and from the big demonstration on Victoria Day, after which it was proposed to wait upon the City Council and ask them to pass a grant completing the $10,000. Mr. O'Connell remarked that he knew that the citizens had been called on frequently to make contributions and would be called on again, but in spite of those facts it would be a shame and a disgrace if the 93rd Battalion was to be allowed to leave Peterborough without a proper recognition by the citizens in the form of an adequate regimental fund, which was needed for many things. The battalion had been raised in the city and county and there was scarcely a person in this city or county who was not affected by its departure—scarcely any one who had not a relative or a friend in the battalion. They were leaving Peterborough next week and with a comparatively short time would be on the firing line, and unfortunately some at least would never return to their home county.

In the discussion that followed Mr. F. D. Kerr referred to the regimental fund as a contingent fund that was needed for many unexpected things. In the British army in peace times these contingents were taken care of by wealthy officers. Canada's army was a democratic one, however, the officers of which as a whole were not wealthy, and it was therefore necessary that the citizens of Canada who loved democracy should see that their men were properly equipped. Because some of the earlier contingents had not received proper treatment in this respect was not a reason for repeating the mistake. Mr. Kerr referred to the good work of the farming community in regard to the 93rd Battalion and remarked that the municipalities of Havelock, Norwood, Asphodel, etc., had already agreed to co-operate in

A SUGGESTION.

Is it not worth while considering whether it is not better for the 93rd Battalion to defer the date of its going under canvas till the first of June, when we may expect that the present unfavourable weather will begin to be at an end? The weather conditions, if they continue as they have done for the past month will make camp life uncomfortable at least; and tend to produce causes that may impair the health and physical fitness of the battalion, if they do not induce in many cases permanent disability. A week or ten days won't make much difference in the matter of training, but it may mean much in the matter of health. It may be said that the soldiers wil have to submit to harder weather and other conditions at the front. But we might spare unnecessary hardship at home; and moreover we want to send out our battalion when it goes overseas in the pink of condition. Besides there is the natural desire that we at home should want to keep them with us as long as possible. We shall be very dull and lonely when they leave us. If the date of departure is postponed for the sake of an Empire Day jubilation, might not a little further postponement be agreed to for the sake of their comfort and health?

ARE WE MADE OF MONEY?

Our legislators at Ottawa, that is the controlling majority, seem to think that Canadians are made of money—millionaires; they show such a reckless indifference to the expenditure of our money. When the House is due to adjourn, when the session is practically over, they bring down estimates for millions, for railways to be voted by one-tenth of the members of parliament. On Wednesday night 20 members of the government party—one-eighth of the people's representation—jammed through a vote of four million dollars to a private railway in Quebec. Sir Rodolphe Forget, who represents two constituencies, Charlevoix and Montmorency, voted for this gift to himself; for he is the chief owner of the railway. The indifference of the government members to the financial interest of the country is shown by introducing proposals to give away millions of the public money in the rush time of the closing hours of the session, and voting them through by a compliant majority.

Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, has been preaching economy, in national expenditures, and the people have been urged to practice economy and thrift. How much on Finance Minister has practiced what he preaches is shown by the fact that he has in this year of war and war burden, brought down the biggest civil supply bill in the history of the country. Taking the main and supplementary estimates the Government has brought down and passed, a total programme of expenditure of nearly 200 millions—$200,743,000—exclusive altogether of the 150 millions voted for war purposes; a total of nearly half a billion dollars voted in one year for a population of 7½ millions to pay. That means $64 per head for every man woman and child in Canada.

The people willingly submit to taxation in support of the war. That is an absolutely necessary expenditure. But at the same time it would have been thought that the Government might have reduced the burden, by lessening the civil expenditure of the country; might have eliminated prodigal gifts to privately-owned railways.

Besides the local burden of extra taxation, municipal and provincial the mounting cost of the necessaries of life, might have induced the Dominion Government to spare the taxpayer. But while the Government has urged us to the practice of "Patriotism and Production" it has itself exercised patriotism and prodigality, by spending more on the people's money in a burdensome year of war than in any of the prosperous years of peace. The Government seems to think that the people are made of money, and that they rejoice in paying taxes. They do rejoice in assuming heavy taxation, in the interest of saving the country from German exploitation; but they might be spared the burden of unnecessary taxation for other purposes than winning this war; from being oppressed with a burden of debt, aside from the war, that will in effect, be slightly less worse than German domination.

SANITARY INSPECTOR.

The City Council is confronted with a serious responsibility in the matter of the appointment of a sanitary inspector—as important a responsibility as that of the outfall sewer and disposal plant, which will involve altogether, perhaps, an expenditure of more than $200,000. The latter is necessary in the interest of the public health; but the expenditure will be practically useless to this end, if we do not provide the more important complementary condition—the perfect as possible sanitary condition of the city; and that can only be obtained, or hopefully aimed at, by securing qualified, able, fearless and efficient inspection—by employing skilled vigilance, a good man to give his whole time to the work, unhampered by any other official responsibility.

It is perhaps superfluous in this advanced age to argue the importance of the public health. All our fitness for fighting the battle of nationhood, the battle of life, depends upon the health of our people individually. The people cannot be healthy and sound and robust, if they are compelled to live in the midst of insanitary surroundings, such as are bound to develop where there is a congestion of population. The problem of maintaining sanitary conditions under such circumstances has engaged the attention of the best scientific minds of the world, and practical means have been devised, that must be applied in every urban community, if we would promote and preserve health and ward off disease and death. It is a matter of fact and of record, that civic sanitation—the preservation and promotion of health—has greatly reduced death rates. This means that neglect of sanitary measures that involve increase of the death rate is nothing less than criminal.

To have and hold sanitary conditions in Peterborough, we must have efficient sanitary inspection; to have this we must have an efficient sanitary inspector, and to provide this constitutes the great responsibility now facing the City Council.

We must hold what we have gained in the matter of effective dealing with our sanitary problems. The late inspector has worked things into, under the circumstances, a fairly satisfactory state, and in a sense prepared the ways and means—laid the foundation—of further progress. What we have gained in order to be held can be kept only by means of the application of skilled and intelligent vigilance.

In the appointment of a successor to Mr. Spence, the only consideration should be efficiency. Within reasonable limits, there should be no consideration of expense in order to get the best service. A cheap man, almost necessarily, means an inefficient man, and inefficient service. If we save a few dollars a year in salary payment, it will be poor economy if it involves inefficient service. That would mean insanitary conditions, and those would mean disease and death. The payment of doctors' bills, the loss of wage-earning through ill health, would be a mighty high taxation individually and collectively, to set against the paltry saving that would be effected by employing an inefficient inspector simply because he works cheaply.

Without anybody in mind for the position we are permitted to urge in the interests of the public health, the self-evidently right policy that should influence the Council in making the appointment. The sole motive should be to obtain the best man in every way for the position of Sanitary Inspector. The decision as to the best man should be influenced solely by his qualifications for good, true and faithful service. No personal considerations, no "pull" of any kind should have the slightest bearing upon a decision that involves the health and life of our relatives, ourselves, and our fellow citizens.

Monstrous Assumption of Responsibility and Theft of the Money of the People

Only one good feature appears in connection with the Quebec & Saguenay Railway deal at Ottawa, and that is that it precedes the adjournment of the House. There will be no danger of another like it for a year. Such things are prudently rushed through at the end of the session, so that they will not make an impression too deep to fade from the short memory of the people who pay. The payers will be relieved of five million immediately, with the probability of five million more, and the Senate has rejected legislation designed to make it more difficult to repeat the operation. Sir Rodolphe Forget, who represents two constituencies and is supposed to speak for twenty others which he is said to have delivered to the Government at the latest general election, defended the deal and helped to force it on the Government. If he did, as his admirers claim, deliver twenty constituencies, the cost to the Government, or rather to the people, will be half a million each. And the end is not yet.

The road is a losing enterprise, and this helps to justify the title "wizard" applied to those who make or rather get vast sums out of such undertakings. The line is about sixty-two miles long, from Quebec to Murray Bay on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, and about 85 per cent. of it is graded. The seven miles on which rails are laid, from Murray Bay to a pulp mill, are barely paying operating expenses, and falling into disrepair. The cost of finishing the line is estimated, on behalf of the Government, at a million, but there are grounds for the belief that twice or three times that sum will be involved. The section now unfinished will serve only thirty thousand people in a sparsely settled country, enjoying water transportation during the summer months. Construction work was stopped in 1912. The road is to be valued according to the money actually expended in construction, not to exceed $4,625,000. The bonds to be assumed to the extent of $3,000,000 cover other terminals in Quebec to the value of $800,000. Sir Rodolphe Forget, who now has no interest in the line—fortunate Sir Rodolphe!—declares that all the money obtained has been put into the road, although Mr. Hurrill could not reconcile this with a cost of $66,000 per mile. French money invested in the railway, amounting to $4,000,000, was obtained by the sale of bonds to Parisian investors at from $90 to $92. When they discovered the nebulous nature of the enterprise they were not admonished concerning the sensitiveness of the Dominion regarding obligations it had not assumed. On the contrary, they were led to part with their bonds at about $60 to a group of Canadian financiers. This purchase of the bonds by our own manipulators has made the Dominion sensitive to such an extent that the public will be made to assume the obligations at par. If the road served no other purpose than the issue of bonds it would mean a fortune out of the French investors and Canadian taxpayers. Thus the fair name of Canada will be preserved, but that fair name seems much less sacred when involved in good faith investments by Parisians than is the clever investments of our own operators.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham declared the purchase and assumption monstrous. Mr. Turriff characterized the whole project as nothing but a political steal. This dip into the public till deserves all that has been said about it and more. But as the loss is determined upon it is better to obtain the losing road, bought at a fictitious price, than to pay its debts and leave it with promoters who might use it to help another bonding project the next time a Government was in difficulties and calling for help at any price. We must retake our highways. — The Globe.

"Where the Styles Come From"

Germans Invent "Counter Attacks" In Order to "Repulse" Them

"Teutons Caught in an Inextricable Net of Lies of Their Own "Lie Factories," Declares "Polybe" in the Figaro

"Polybe" in the Figaro exposes a new trick of the German General Staff, saying that every few days in their official reports they invent French counter attacks which only exist in their imagination and are, therefore, the more easily repulsed.

"They are caught," he says, "in an inextricable net of lies of their own lie factories. Recently on both banks of the Meuse about Verdun there has been one of the greatest general actions of the war on our front since the days of the Yser and the Marne. But the Germans would have it that there are only isolated engagements. This little gains thus become more appreciable and the general check less noticeable. This will prolong for a while the darkness of errors in which the German public is groping. And no German newspaper has published the fact that the Crown Prince has sent into battle since February 21 more than 1,100 companies.

"The losses of the first battles were 'supportable'. The General Staff showed some pride in finding this word, but they used it too much. Germany now knows the enormity of the holocaust. To-morrow it will learn that the latest combats have not been less fruitful of slaughter than all the others. One army corps lost 17,000 men, another 22,000; certain Bavarian regiments have lost fifty and sixty per cent of their effective. One of the reasons for the confident energy of our men is the sight of the heaps of German bodies which strew the ravines of the Meuse.

"Finally there is the lie about the Mort Homme, which becomes more embarrassing from one bulletin to the other. The War Minister has announced to the Reichstag the taking of Hill 295. The head of the General Staff does not want to say he has been telling an untruth. So he has to have recourse to military jargon about 'clearing' blockhouses and other works. It was only to clear away shelters that the regiments offered themselves to be mowed down by our mitrailleuses.

"Because we are brave and are conscious of our strength, we have had no scruple in admitting that the Germans bit into about five hundred metres on the northwest trenches of the Mort Homme while we hold all the others and that the summit has been for a long time uninhabitable except for patrols and passing ravens."

"Behind these guns there are others," says a Spanish journalist of the Nueva Mundo, quoted by "Polybe", and still others in successive lines which, mute and hidden, are awaiting their hour to enter the conflict. And back to these lines, still strangers to the battle, there is Verdun, the great sphinx of steel, whose street corners, houses and subterranean passages guard a terrible deadly secret. And behind Verdun forty kilometres (twenty-five miles) of trenches occupied by excellent troops and defended by excellent artillery again bar the road to that irreducible and inaccessible heart of France, toward which the tragic and mad despair of the German colossus pretends in vain that it is opening a passage by force of guns and men."

Thus far the Nuevo Mundo, while the Figaro the report that the Kaiser came near being killed by a shell on the Verdun front, says:—"That shell was in too much of a hurry. The Kaiser thus struck would have died among the soldiers he is causing to be killed for his treasure, and the courtiers of the Crown Prince would have said that he had died on the field of honour.

"It is necessary that the man responsible for this horrible war and who has ordered the massacres, the chief of assassins of children and women, die like a criminal—after peace, after the verdict."

This is the first public reference in the French press to the possibility of the Kaiser being tried and condemned to death for his crimes, although several Coroners 'inquests in England have branded him as a murderer outside the pale of civilized warfare.

Martin Hoover Got Judgment For $1,054.71 in Estate Claim

Full Amount Filed For Assistance to Mrs. Aaron Hoover During Her Lifetime — Judge Huycke Impressed — Mentioned Apparent Honesty of Plaintiff.

Mr. Martin Hoover received judgment this morning for the full amount of his claim, of $1,054.71 against the estate of the late Mrs. Hulda Hoover, wife of Mr. A. Hoover, now at Mimico asylum. In awarding the plaintiff's claim Judge Huycke stated that he was impressed by the apparent honesty of Mr. Hoover. He believed all that he had said, and from the evidence Mr. Hoover appeared to have been a true friend to his brother's wife. The claim covered monies advanced by the plaintiff during Mrs. Hoover's lifetime to pay off a mortgage, also expenses in connection with her funeral and other incidental expenditure.

Argument in the Garnsey Action Was Heard To-day

The argument in the Garnsey case, which in a hazy way, has seemed to have taken on more than the euphony of Jarndice and Jarndice, was heard by His Honour Judge Huycke to-day Mr. O. A. Langley, counsel for the plaintiffs, commenced his address shortly after eleven o'clock and was still talkin gat one. This is the $2,000 damage action for alleged illegal trespass and seizure. Of the personal motives actuating Mrs. Clarison Samson, the mortgagee, Mr. Langley spoke of the pitiless persecution and vindictiveness displayed toward the Garnseys, who would have been left with nothing to face a cold winter. At this point he was using the drab colours rather thickly. Legislation pertaining to mortgages assured to a man a reasonable number of chattels to maintain his position in the community and to supply his wants and necessities.

Mr. O'Connell, Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. B. D. Hall were to continue the argument this afternoon.

MEXICANS KILL CHINAMEN MERELY AS A WARNING

Marathon, Texas, May 19.—United States soldiers have rescued Jesse Deemer, the American storekeeper captured by Mexican raiders on Glenn Springs and Boquillas, Texas, according to a man named Terry, who arrived here to-day.

Ten Chinamen Murdered.

Columbus, N. M., May 17.—Stories of the murder of ten Chinese merchants at San Antonio, Mexi., by bandits believed to have been followers of Villa were brought to the border today by returning truckmen. According to the stories, the Chinese had been selling supplies to the Americans and were killed immediately after the withdrawal of the American troops.

Mexicans in the district occupied by the Americans have been warned that they would be killed if they dealt with the Americans and it is believed here that the slaughter of Chinese was intended as a warning to the native population.

MAY DECORATE ITALIAN DESERTER

Italian Joined Austrians to Gain Secrets, He Says.

Rome, May 19.—An Alpine soldier named Finimondo, who in the Tripoli war single-handed killed seven Arabs, using the bayonet, was sent to the Italian front shortly after the outbreak of the war. Recently he disappeared as it was said that, disgusted and tired of trench warfare, he had deserted. Since apparent proof of his desertion was available the was court-martialed in his absence and condemned to die as a traitor.

Finimondo has now unexpectedly returned, wearing the uniform of an Austrian officer. He reported that he purposely deserted, with the object of securing valuable information from the enemy and thus earn another medal similar to that which he was awarded in the Tripoli war.

The "deserter" explained that he used stones to kill Austrians guarding him, including an officer, whose uniform he was now wearing. He then collected such valuable information with regard to the Austrian positions, strength, location and their guns that the sentence of death was revoked. It is expected that Finimondo will be decorated instead of punished.

SAVES A COUPLE AND ARRESTS THEM

POLICEMAN RESCUES MAN AND WIFE, RESUSCITATES THEM AND THEN ACCUSES THEM OF ATTEMPTING SUICIDE.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Prompt work by Policeman Frank Strickland, of the West Forty-seventh street station, saved the lives of Charles Graner and his wife, Mrs. Nellie Graner, in their rooms on the second floor at No. 514 West Forty-seventh street.

When neighbors smelled gas Policeman Strickland was called. He entered the Graner apartment with a passkey. He found the rooms filled with gas and Mrs. Graner was on the floor and her husband in bed, both unconscious.

Placing one under each arm the policeman carried them down to the fresh air of the street and there began the work of artificial respiration while another policeman telephoned for an ambulance. Before the ambulance with a pulmotor arrived Policeman Strickland, watched by a large crowd, had revived Graner and his wife so they could stand up. Then he put them through the "setting up" exercises which he learned when a "rookie".

When they were able to walk Policeman Strickland hooked an arm about each of them and walked them a mile and a half through west side streets until they were as bright and chipper as ever. Then he led them to the West Forty-seventh street station and booked both up on charges of attempting to commit suicide.

Graner is a machinist, out of work. The police said his wife told them they had become despondent, decided to die and that she had turned on the gas.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

Percy Tompkins Will Spend Six Months in the Ontario Reformatory

This morning Magistrate Dumble redeemed a promise made two weeks ago when he sentenced Percy Tompkins to six months in the Ontario Reformatory. This is not the first time that Tompkins has appeared in Police Court on a charge of vagrancy. Two weeks ago the accused appeared before Magistrate Dumble and was allowed to go with a warning. He was also promised six months in event of his again appearing in Police Court. This promise was liquidated this morning and as a result Tompkins' place of residence will be assured until September next.

According to the police the accused constituted a nuisance and was repeatedly found soliciting alms. For some time he worked in a local restaurant for the munificient remuneration of six dollars a week and found. A portion of this colonial allowance was dissipated over the bar.

Bluejay Ends Fight By Picking Up Rat

Steals Prize From Hen, Rooster and Guinea.

Brookdale, N.J., May 19.—A black hen, a game rooster, and a guinea hen on the farm of Samuel Dodd, near the Passaic county line, discovered and fought for nearly an hour over a good sized rat which had been crippled by the rooster.

Each bird asserted its claim to the prize in the best way it could. When the fighting was tiring the combatants along came a bluejay which settled the ownership by picking up the rat and flying into the corn crib.

The farm hands and others who had watched the battle asserted that the bluejay's trick entitled the bird to all the honours that have been heaped upon the species.

Mrs. Clendenes Fell to Her Death Sleep-Walking

KINGSTON, May 19.—In what is supposed to have been a state of somnambulism, Mrs. J. W. Clendenes, a patient at the General Hospital, walked out of a window on the second floor of the surgical ward, falling to the ground below, and dying a few hours later from the shock and injuries.

Mrs. Clendenes, who was 43 years of age, and came from Canboro, near London, Ont., had been in the hospital about ten days.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

A number of applications for the position of Sanitary Inspector have been received at the City Hall. The present incumbent has asked to be relieved of his duties not later than the end of the present month.

A LIKELY APPOINTEE

It is altogether likely that the Council will invite Mr. F. W. Miller to assume the duties of Sanitary Inspector. Mr. Miller is thoroughly conversant with the routine connection with the office.

93RD BATTALION GRANT

One thousand dollars is probably the limit to which the Council will go in the matter of a grant to the ten thousand dollar fund to be raised for the 93rd Overseas Battalion.

THE POLL TAX.

The increase of five hundred per cent., in the poll tax is meeting with little criticism. A few have already paid the claim which the city has upon the single men of the city.

IF THE DEAD COULD PARADE

Germany's Last Men Would Take Five Days to Pass.

NEW YORK, May 19.—New York saw 132,000 men march twenty abreast past the reviewing stand in twelve hours in the preparedness parade.

The present United States army at its full authorized strength of 120,000 men could pass in about eleven hours—less than a day.

The United States army of 208,000 fighting men agreed upon by Congress could pass in a marching day and a half.

The dead of Germany alone in the war are put by British official figures at 700,000. That number would take more than five marching days to pass.

The armies fighting at Verdun are in the neighbourhood of 900,000 men. They could pass in a week.

The British Empire's present army is estimated at 5,000,000 men. They would take more than thirty-six days—six weeks of daily marching.

Plan to Free Girl Who Paints Works in Asylum Cell

POUGHKEEPSIE, May 19.—Marion Blakelock, daughter of R. A. Blakelock, the painter, and herself an artist, who seeks to be released from the Hudson River State hospital in Poughkeepsie. A movement similar to that which won freedom for her father from the Middletown asylum, is under way among art patrons in Chicago, it was said by Superintendent Charles W. Pilgrim yesterday.

Miss Blakelock's works have found ready sale, although done under adverse conditions in the local asylum. As an incompetent she is having difficulty in marketing the paintings. Within a few days a committee will be chosen by the local court and habeas corpus proceedings to secure her freedom will follow.

District Meeting Was Concluded

Hopeful and Encouraging Reports Presented by the Various Delegates

The Peterborough District meeting of the Methodist church closed yesterday afternoon. Hopeful and encouraging reports were presented by the various delegates. The reports in the main showed an increase in membership and an increase in missionary funds as well as funds for other purposes.

Morning and afternoon sessions were held in the Charlotte Street Sunday School Hall. Rev B. Greatrix presided.

Whirlwind Campaign For Battalion Fund

securing a word Rimeon for their men.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, who regretted that he had to leave early, expressed his hearty sympathy with the campaign and his desire to assist. The city and county of Peterborough he said, could not allow the 93rd to depart without a proper regimental fund. "We would be cravens if we did so," remarked Mr. Matthews amid applause.

The following team captains were then selected to proceed with the canvass.

No. 1—L. J. Picard.
No. 2—W. H. Dunsford.
No. 3—Adj. McElheney.
No. 4—W. J. Oke.
No. 5—G. A. Gillespie.
No. 6—C. G. Graham.
No. 7—C. H. Pennefather.
No. 8—H. G. Walker.
No. 9.—Walter Stocker, Wm. Lytle.
No. 10—Frank Whitehouse.

Lists were divided up and it was decided to start the campaign at Monday morning at 9.30 o'clock in the recruiting rooms, Simcoe street, will be the headquarters and the teams will have supper and report at six o'clock each evening. To-day the captains are busy getting their teams together ready for the big drive on Monday and Tuesday.

HOW FRANKFORT STOPS WOMEN'S ALLOWANCES

"Married women whose husbands are at the front only have to present themselves at the office to obtain repayment of the price of their seats."

Such was the notice which, the Paris Figaro announces was flashed on the screens of all the moving picture places in Frankfort one day last month. The women, agreeably surprised, hurried out to the ticket office, where another surprise, less agreeable, awaited them. Officials stationed there hurried them off to the police headquarters, where they were bluntly told that, discovering they had money enough to go to places of amusement the city had concluded to stop their usual allowance.

HONOURING THE A. R. MEN

Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Would it not be a fitting opportunity to give the "applied and rejected" men the honour that is due to them: first by asking them through your columns to bring or send this certificate to the Armouries and get this badge; secondly by giving them the opportunity of separating themselves from the "slackers" by mustering at Central Park or marching for once (before they go) behind the battalion they once tried help fill up. The 24th would be the time and if taken in hand now these men could get their badges in time for the occasion, quite a lot of these men do not know these badges are being issued and when on the street these men are often pulled up by a recruiting officer for the want of this distinguished mark. Thanking you for your trouble in giving this letter space.

Yours truly,
ONE INTERESTED.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Could someone kindly tell me why when we are giving the 93rd Battalion so much attention and planning for a big "send off" that we should forget the 53nd Battery.

The Battery is almost entirely composed of our Peterborough boys and because they have been training away from home it would seem as if we had almost forgotten about them.

Why then, can't we have them home all together and give them the "send off" they deserve.

Yours truly,
A READER.

Women's Stockings Shrinking in Length

Milady to Favour Half-Hose This Summer.

PHILADELPHIA, May 19. — Brothers will have to hide their socks from their sisters this summer. That this precautionary measure will be necessary was gleaned to-day at the opening meeting of the convention her of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear manufacturers.

Practically all the hosiery delegates agree women's stockings are shrinking in length. It is not young girls alone who favour half hose.

J. D. Morely of Boston stated that at Atlantic City he noticed elderly women were turning down regular length hose to get the modified effect.

Five Hundred Planes Were Engaged at Verdun Yesterday

PARIS, May 18.—The latest phase of the battle of Verdun was begun with a heavy bombardment, which increases daily with violence on both banks of the Meuse, and with important aerial fighting favoured by the fine, clear weather.

These daily aerial flights are no longer single duels, but elaborate battles between large squadrons which have to manoeuvre for proper light, wind and height, besides opening fire with the maximum broadside effect the moment the enemy is sighted, lest he be able to reply effectively.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

Much of the French aerial success these days is due to the battle squadron tactics and the practice obtained during raids over the German lines of communication. All previous aerial records have ben broken. French "chasing" monoplanes have left the ground and risen 3,500 feet in six minutes—in fact pounced upon German aeroplanes before they had even been detected. French bi-motor biplanes have, from a ground start risen 7,000 feet in eleven minutes. One French squadron armed with thirty seven millimetre revolver cannons, flying over Bethincourt(pt out of action two German 150 millimetre batteries after a furious bombardment lasting twenty minutes.

SIMULTANEOUS ATTACKS.

The aerial artillery is playing a daily increasing part in the battle of Verdun, and French infantry counter-attacks around Haudremont have been successfully supported by simultaneous attacks of aerial squadrons, which throw bombs and pour machine gun fire on the positions stormed by the infantry.

A French Artillery Colonel who has been brought to Paris after having been wounded at Verdun on May 16, told me to-day:

"More than 500 aeroplanes were engaged on Tuesday in reconnoitring or fighting one another over the Verdun battlefield. Immediately the moon rose aeroplane raiding with bombs, machine guns and revolver cannon was begun, and lasted until dawn, so that, owing to the full moon the air fighting is practically continuous."

FOE RESERVES PARALYZED.

The Colonel was wounded while engaged in a counter-attack on Hill No 304. He told me that the attack had partly succeeded because of the dash of his Zouaves, but also because the strong bomb and machine gun fire from a determined French aerial squadron paralyzed the German reserves who were prevented from debouching.

The French authorities have learned from German prisoners that owing to the great number of German machines shot down by the French there is a severe dearth of capable pilots in the German aerial corps.

The thanks of the Association are due to the many people whose services made possible the sale of such a large number of carnations; also to Col. Johnson for permission to use the Armouries as a centre for a short time, and to the following firms who kindly gave in their buildings for the day: Barries, Ltd.; Mr. J. D Craig, Y.M.C.A.; Mr. R. G. Sturgeon and Mr. J. E. Lillico.

Kidnap Watchman, Capture Island For Disposal Plant

NEW YORK, May. 19—Armed men in launches to-day took possession of Prall's Island a small bit of Richmond borough property lying in the harbor after kidnapping the watchman. James Farmer, whom the vigilance committee of the Staten Island Civic League of Richmond borough had placed on guard as part of its fight in opposition to a plan by the city of New York to erect a municipal disposal plant on Prall's island. Some of the leading residents of Richmond have been talking of secession from the city if the plant is established and Farmer had been instructed to prevent anyone from taking possession of the island.

The men who kidnapped Farmer bound and gagged him and took him in a launch to a Brooklyn pier, where he was left after being warned not to return to Prall's island. Releasing himself, he notified the police, who upon visiting the island arrested 15 men, who, according to the police, said they represented th edisposal plant contractors.

Physician's Wife Administers First Aid When "Fred" Jemi Takes Poison.

NEW YORK, May 18.—"Fred" Jemi, a driver of racing automobiles, was said by the police to have taken three bichloride of mercury tablets yesterday at the corner of 139th street and Broadway. He is a prisoner at the Knickerbocker Hospital and, owing to the quick work of Mrs. Chalmers Sangree, wife of a physician at No. 871 West 139th street, will probably recover. Mrs. Sangree administered first aid when a passerby saw Jemi collapse and brought him to Dr. Sangree's office in the absence of the physician.

After taking the tablets Jemi wrote a note to his wife, telling her that he had taken poison and would be dead in a few minutes.

Peace is Being Discussed By Foe

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, via Tuckerton, N.J., Wireless, May 19.—There is a feeling here that if a strong neutral, such as the United States, undertook to negotiate peace, it might succeed.

Diplomatic circles regard the recent statements of President Poincare and Mr. Edward Grey as the opening gune in an important discussion on peace, though the expressions from the Allied leaders, when ranged alongside the German Chancellor's recent Reichstag speech, do not appear altogether conciliatory.

The above despatch is probably the most frank discussion of peace rumours in circulation in European capitals, yet passed by the German censors.

A correspondent cables: "I have just returned from a visit to Holland, where I found that the Dutchmen believe the British, French and German people all desire peace. The general impression in Holland is that the time for a decisive victory for either side has passed, although each of the belligerents may attempt a summer offensive.

The Dutch think it is America's duty to act now, and that the time is ripe to bring the belligerents together with a peace agreement before October next.

Kitchener's Position To Be Criticized

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 19.—Criticism of Lord Kitchener and his present indefinite position is foreshadowed in a notice given by Col. Winston Churchill that he will on Monday in the Commons commence a discussion of the salary and status of the Secretary of State for War. Opinion is that Lord Kitchener's work and duties have been assumed lately almost entirely by Sir Wm. Robertson, Chief of Staff.

The Cross-examination of Col. Allison

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19.—It was arranged at the shell commission this morning this morning that the cross-examination of Col. J. Wesley Allison, by E. F. B. Johnstone, counsel for the Opposition, should not commence till a week from Monday in order to give Johnstone an opportunity to go over the status books and documents. Colonel Allison will on that date bring all checkbooks, papers, and so on, relating to his dealings with the shell commission or Sir Sam Hughes.

Colonel Allison was very hard pressed this afternoon regarding his letters to various firms, saying he would not accept commission from anybody, while at the same time he had an agreement with Yonkum for a fifty-fifty division of commissions.

Finally witness pleaded illness, and asked to be temporarily excused. Colonel Carnegie was then re-examined.

Allies Stand Solid For a Finish Fight

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, May 19.—If the Allies make peace, it will be on their own terms, with Germany completely defeated. This was the assertion made to-day by Rene Viviani, former French Prime Minister, who is just completing here an official tour of the allied capitals, presumably with the very purpose of ascertaining the views of allied governments on the war situation to-day. Viviani said: "The Allies stand solid for a finish fight. They intend to break Germany's heavy sword. They owe this to the unborn generations."

1816 Was a Year Without Summer

One hundred years ago, 1816, has gone down in history as the "year without a summer," and has been frequently referred to when fearful ones have thought that the cold, wet seasons we sometimes have would bring about similar conditions. In that year there was frost and snow and ice in every month, and crops were almost a total failure. Prices of flour and all kinds of provisions rose to very high figures. In fact the summer of 1816 was noted as the coldest ever known throughout Europe and America.

The Puzzling Abbreviation.—A burly looking sergeant had just left the bus when two girls who had sat opposite him began to discuss him. "He's not a private is he?" queried one. "No, dear," was the reply. "He's a non-com., you know. "A non-com?" was the innocent's comment; and then, after a pause, during which she was apparently trying to discover a clue to the meaning of the abbreviation and found in what she had read of the proceedings before the Tribunals, she added. "Well, I think it perfectly shameful that a strong, well-built man like that should be allowed to be a non-combatant!" Mercifully the sergeant was out of hearing, so there was no fit of apoplexy to deal with.

PERHAPS HE WILL LET HIMSELF OUT

John Davis, Self-Accused, Puts Himself in the Lockup and Tosses Keys Out of the Window.

SWARTSWOOD, N.J., May 19.—After John Davis had been discharged by his employer he met Constable O'Rourke on the street and surrendered saying he demanded to be arrested on a charge of intoxication. The constable took him before Judge Castine, where Davis made out a complaint accusing himself of intoxication. He then testified against himself and Judge Castine said the evidence was conclusive and sentenced him to jail for ten days.

"I ain't got time to take him to jail," said the constable, "I got to whitewash a fence."

"Give me the keis and I'll take myself to jail," said Davis.

The constable did so and Davis went to the village lock-up, let himself in, locked the door and tossed the keys out through the bars of a window.

"It's the only way," said Davis.

AN EXPLANATION FROM THE PATRIOTIC FUND

A communication from a local manufacturer came before the Relief Committee of the Patriotic Fund, last night, asking that any rule governing the taking up of work by women who are beneficiaries on the Fund, be suspended, so as to allow of their going to work. The statement in the letter said:

"I think that the general impression of the beneficiaries of the Patriotic Fund is that the amount of money which they earn is taken into consideration, and that any such money earned affects the amount which they obtain from the Patriotic Fund, etc."

Our correspondent is both right and wrong. Right in that when one or more members of a family are old enough to go out and work, and of over the age of 15 years, the cost of the general support of that family is reduced to the heads of the family by the amount earned. Young people of a family who are able to contribute to the family income by as much as represents the cost of board, etc., lessens the number from that family on the fund, just as it may in cases where five children appear in the family list, but only three are eligible for assistance under the fund rules.

Our correspondent refers to the state of married women who have not children to care for, and that such might as well, and would go out to work, if not prevented by the rulings of the Fund. There are on the lists many women without children. The local branch offers no objection, nor does it penalize such for going out to work, so long as there are no reasons why the women should stay in her home. But it is not well to jump to the conclusion that being married and no children, that the wife is care free. We have cases where there is an aged father or mother, a relative sick, infirm and requiring attention. That children of a relative have been taken in to be cared for. No one case can be taken as a sample. Each case is considered in the circumstances.

The matter is plain. Married women, without children or cares of such kind may work if they wish. No money will be stopped. Only in such case as if the wage earned ran to an amount that the allowance from the fund could not reasonably be looked on as an assistance. The fund is for the assistance of the dependents of men on service. If a woman, receiving separation allowance of $20,000 per month, and assigned pay of $15.00 or $20.00 in addition, and further supplementing this with good earnings needs further assistance, well and good. Women sometimes put forward the plea that the fund money will be stopped if they go to work, as an excuse, or reason, for not so doing. As one woman expressed it, "I am now a soldier's wife, and I don't have to work."

As contributors to the fund the lists are at the service of any manufacturer, and if he so wish, and send to the office all names of women on the fund and without children will be supplied. These can be approached and asked to get to work. No one is deserved from working on account of losing the allowance.

So late as yesterday, (18th), the following clause of a resolution was passed at the Convention, in Toronto:—

"Women whose domestic duties do not require their attention at home should be encouraged to work, and that no deduction be made on account of casual earnings."

It will be observed that this makes no mention of a steady situation. That, possibly, is implied.

TYPISTS TIRE OF KISSING BOSSES

BOSTON, Mass., May 18.—A doleful period of boredom, exhaustion and general restraint awaits the tired business men of Boston if a campaign started to-day by the union of stenographers, bookkeepers, accountants and office employees in this city is successful. Among the routine features of office procedure which are to be taboo are included kissing the stenographer, swearing like a sailor and paying huge sums like $7 to a faithful and fairly accurate book keeper.

It might be mentioned that the first item mentioned in the general bill of particulars is the historic practice of implanting a mushy kiss on the stenographer's ear every time a mow order arrives. It is contended that stenographers who have been kissed dizzy without looking up from their work object to the wear and tear on their make-up and the necessary of pearing through the boss' whiskers to get out the urgent business letter impending.

The assertion is made that efficiency is sorely tried, too, when the boss wanders around a modern business office using language that sounds like Captain Kidd in the throes of a tooth ache. The tendency of the employer is to pick up this verbiage mechanically and subsequently to ask the telephone central about a delay in a manner that causes apoplexy all along the party wire.

The union asserts that in the future the minimum wage for all employees admitted to their organization must be $10, and that any employer who takes the king's English in vain or bites the switch off a busy stenographer will be regarded with anger and obvious distaste.

MILITARY NEWS

Hillier, and was born in this city. The Telegram says:

The sad news that Private William Earnest Hillier has been killed in action was received to-day by his father, who resides at 489 Sackville street. The melancholy tidings came in the nature of a great shock to the family, for the deceased soldier was a devoted son and possessed a very lovable personality.

Pte. Hillier and his brother, Joseph Hillier, enlisted in the 74th Battalion, but they were so anxious to get to the front that they transferred to the 58th Battalion prior to leaving the camp at Niagara-on-the-lake. Mr. Hillier received a letter from William on Friday last, and at the time it was written he was in the trenches, apparently in a fairly hot section of the line. He went into the front line on Good Friday for sixteen days, after which he expected twenty-one days rest. He was due for billets on the 7th of May, but lost his life on the 3rd of the present month.

Prior to going into the army he was employed by the firm of John Hallam, Limited, 111 Front street, and when he enlisted he was made the recipient of a wrist watch and solid silver cigarette case by his fellow employees, with whom he was very popular. He was twenty-one years of age, and his brother is nineteen.

The following letter from the Sterling News-Argus indicates the recent fighting the 21st Battalion went through:

France, April 26, 1916.

Mr. Elliott West, Harold, Ont., Canada:

Dear Brother and All,—Just a few lines to let you know I am again out at Rest Camp. We landed here last night after the most strenuous time in the trenches we have put in yet. From the time we got that rush order, when I wrote you a few lines at last camp, it has been one constant burst of shells over one's head, and machine guns turned on us. Don't think I'm getting rough when I use the expression, "a perfect hell on earth." Our front line is down, of course, only taking cover in shell holes, etc. Our communication was down and signallers were scarce. They put some old rigs up to lay wire and take over the station. They stayed one night and were so much fed up and nervous they asked for relief. I'm not any braver than any other man, but I volunteered to take over the station in the shell hole in the front line. Two other lads went with me.

Well, we stuck it out for the four days and four nights, and we were so fed up that we did not care what happened. However, our relief came and we were so pleased. We staggered out to the billets, slept last night, had a bath this morning, so we don't feel so bad now. You can't imagine though that time with no sleep, and two days it rained in torrents, and the bombardment. Talk about headaches! When a man could live through that and come out and feel as I do now, he can go through anything nearly. But I told my officer I'd never do it again to screen anybody with a streak like some have got.

There's a rumour going now that we are going for a month's rest and get our leave. I don't know whether there's any truth in it or not, but I hope so. I haven't seen any of the Marmora boys since I came out, except George Webb. I intend to have a look around this afternoon. I guess they are all right, as I never heard of any getting wounded or knocked out.

It is very nice to-day, almost like July at home, but to-morrow may be cold and rainy.

Brother Jack.

Sig. John N. West, 60048, Signalling Section 21st Canadian Battalion, 2nd Canadian Division, France. B.E.F.

All units going into camp at Barrie-field have been instructed to send advance parties three days before marching into camp. The advance party prepares the way for the coming of the balance of the battalion, and avoids delays and confusion when large units march into camp.

The 163rd French-Canadian Battalion of Montreal, will be the unit to succeed the 38th in garrison duty in Bermuda. There had been many rumours that it would be the 77th, but it is definite that the Montreal regiment will go. It is commanded by Lieut.-Col. Oliver Asselin.

Ottawa is to furnish a company of No. 1 Construction Battalion, recruiting for which has just started simultaneously in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa. (Men from the 2nd, 3rd and 4th Military Districts will be recruited.

The battalion will be attached to the Royal Engineers, and its work will consist of construction, "from a ditch to a railroad, and from a box to a house" as one of the officers put it. Skilled and unskilled workmen will be enlisted, and the battalion will go overseas immediately it reaches its complement of 1,053 officers and men.

The advance party of the 93rd Battalion will leave for Barriefield camp on Monday to prepare the camp for the reception of the local troops a few days later. To-morrow afternoon the 57th chapter, I.O.D.E. will present these men with socks.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., and Mrs. Moore, were in Montreal yesterday saying good-bye to their son, Capt. Cyril A. Moore of the 62nd Calgary Battalion, C.E.F., which is shortly going overseas. The 62nd, as well as a number of other overseas battalions were reviewed on the Champ de Mars, Montreal, by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught.

Tommy Set Right.

Corporal (to soldier reporting sick) —What's the matter with you?

Tommy Atkins —Pain in my halldomen.

Corporal— Halldomen be 'anged Stomick you mean. It's bonly hofficers as 'as halldomens.

He Wanted Peace.

Two soldiers were conversing. One asked the other what made him enlist.

"Why, I had no wife and children —no one but myself to think of; and, besides, I likes war. But how comes you to join the army?"

"Well, you see, I had a wife, and I joined the army because I likes peace."

The Kingston Standard says: The wet weather is very much hampering the work of the contractors at Barriefield. The great downpour of rain makes it impossible for men who are working on the outside of new buildings, and men who are laying water pipes to do their work. A few fine days would enable the contractors to almost complete their work.

There will be a general practice of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club senior and junior teams at Mich-Mi [illegible] A full turnout is expected.

Benjamin Sturney Tries To Kill Wife In Flat at Toledo

Prisoner Figured in Many Cases While Living in London.

TOLEDO, May 19.—Benjamin J. Sturney, aged 27, who came here ten weeks ago from London, Ont., his home, fired five shots at his wife, Bessie McFadden Sturney, aged 24, following a quarrel over Joseph Cosilleto, a musician, son of a merchant on Carling street, near the London police station.

None of the shots hit the woman, whom Sturney accuses of infidelity. Mrs. Sturney had been in Toledo nearly a year.

Sturney, who ran a bowling alley in London, came here, he says, when she wrote him that she desired to bring about reconciliation. The Sturneys have been married six years, and have one child, a boy of five, who is with Mrs. Sturney's parents, named McFadden, in Dresden, Ont.

Fought Desperately.

The shooting took place in a flat occupied by the Sturneys. Mrs. Sturney fled into the bathroom. When the police arrived the place was full of powder smoke, and Sturney had cut all his wife's clothes to ribbons. He fought the police desperately.

The police found five bullet holes in the wall, and the revolver reloaded in a suitcase. Sturney was arraigned in police court Wednesday morning.

NEW YORK, May 19. — A news agency despatch from Paris says:

Jose Garcia Calderon, son of ex-President Calderon of Peru, a volunteer observation balloonist with the French army, was killed in a spectacular manner near the French lines.

Calderon's balloon was caught in a violent storm, and broke loose from its moorings. It tipped sidewise, and began running along in the teeth of the gale. Calderon cut loose, but the sides of his parachute were flattened by the wind and he was dashed to his death.

Typhoid Vaccine In German Army

BERLIN, May 17.—Interesting figures regarding the efficiency of vaccination against typhoid were brought out at the recent Convention of Surgeons at Warsaw, says an Overseas News Agency item. Surgeon General Huenermann stated that many millions of persons had been vaccinated and that in only a very few isolated cases had there been any injurious effects from the vaccination and no deaths whatever. After the introduction of the system of vaccination, he declared, there had been an immediate decrease in typhoid cases. Thus up to December, 1914, there had been only one-fourteenth of the number of cases that occurred during the war of 1870.

In the Austro-Hungarian army, continued the Surgeon General, the attacks of typhoid became grave in 44 per cent. of non-vaccinated cases of the disease, in 20 per cent. of the cased of those once vaccinated, and in 11 per cent. of twice vaccinated cases. The death rate before vaccination was put into practice was from 18 to 16 per cent., while after vaccination was begun it was only from 5 to 6 per cent., and in several armies even fell as low as from 2 to 3 per cent.

Grand Duke Nicholas Will Again Assume Chief Command of Russian Armies

Government Has Directed that Jeremiah Lynch, the New Yorker Sentenced to Death in Ireland, Be Held For Further Instructions.

LONDON, May 20.—It is announced that the Government directed that Jeremiah Lynch, the New Yorker sentenced to death in Ireland, be held for further instructions.

BERLIN, May 20.—In four months ending the first of May Teutonic submarines have sunk enemy's ships of seven thousand tons tonnage.

LONDON, May 20.—It is officially announced that all disputes between Sweden and the British Allies are settled.

PETROGRAD, May 20.—From recent events it is reported likely that the Grand Duke Nicholas will again return to the Chief Command of the Russian armies.

BERLIN, Ont., May 20.—At six o'clock last night the majority favouring the by-law to change the name of the city was 73 with five polls to hear from, out of twenty-three.

DEVISING MEASURES TO FEED BERLIN

LONDON, May 20.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Amsterdam says:

"The food question in Germany is at present in such a position that in the opinion of the physicians of Greater Berlin, who recently considered the matter, uniform regulation of the food supply is necessary in the interest of the health of the people. The committee decided to send a petition on the subject to the imperial chancellor. A conference was held at th Prussian home office Thursday to devise measures for feeling the population of Berlin."

BERLIN, Ont., May 20.—The complete vote in favour of this city changing its name was 1,549 to 1,488.

The Austrian Crown Prince Is Directing the Campaign On Vincenza

The Verdun of the Northern Italian Front—Official Statement Says Offensive Has Come to a Halt

ROME, May 20.—Emulating the example of the German heir apparent, the Austrian Crown Prince has arrived at Trent and is directing the campaign against Vincenza, the Verdun of the northern Italian front.

Field Marshal Conrad Von Holtzendorff ,Chief of the Austrian General Staff, has joined the array of generals on the Tyrolese front.

It is reported here that General Cadorna, Italian Commander-in-Chief, will move his headquarters to the Trentino front.

To-day's official statement from Italian headquarters says the Austrian offensive has come to a halt. Despite heavy sacrifice in men and ammunition, the Austrians thus far have crossed the Italian frontier at but one point, in the Astico Valley:

At no place do their lines approach nearer than 22 miles from the important strategic position of Vincenza, reported to be the goal of the present offensive.

"BOB" FITZSIMMONS NOW APPEARS AS BIBLE CLASS "SKY PILOT" IN PHILA.

Bob Fitzsimmons, the fistic hero of 380 battles in the roped arena, and the world's former pugilistic champion, told of his early aspirations to become a "sky-pilot," at the Mother's Day services of the Drexel Biddle Bible class in Holy Trinity Parish House yesterday morning.

"While I was training for the 'sky pilot' business somebody blacked both my eyes at the same time," he said, "and I was kicked into the boxing game. He was introduced to the Bible class members by A. J. Drexel Biddle, who is an old friend of the champion. He was presented as "the noblest gladiator of them all, who was knocked out only by old Father Time."

Man and Gentleman.

Fitzsimmons astributed his desire to "play square" while in the ring to his short training for religious work. He said he believed a fighter should "always be a gentleman and a man, even if he was feeling for a lead to punch the other fellow's wind at the time." Mr. Biddle backed up the former champion in his assertions that it was possible for a pugilist to be a gentleman, and said he never knew. "'Bob' Fitzsimmons to punish a man in the ring longer than necessary to knock him out."

"I kicked a football, that was in play, and got two black eyes," the former champion explained was the motive that first prompted him to take up boxing as a profession. "I was unconscious more than three hours. When I regained consciousness I made a pair of gloves from one of my blacksmith aprons and went into training to beat the captain of the team. I have never been able to find him. If I could find him I would buy him a good bottle of wine, for he was the fellow that kicked me into the boxing game and spoiled a poor 'Billy' Sunday."

Wore White Carnation.

The old-time champion wore a white carnation in honour of Mother's Day, and spoke of his mother as "responsible for all the good things that 'Bob' Fitzsimmons ever did." He told how he gave up the first $500 he ever won in the prize ring to send the mother of his vanquished opponent to Sydney for her health. When he was telling his story he seemed most at home, and did a bit of shadow boxing and a few passes at Mr. Biddle's face to illustrate his points in the story. When he talked of "Jim" Corbett he referred to him as "that distinguished actor," and never as a boxer.

CIVIL COURTS TO DEAL WITH ALL DESERTIONS

Soldiers Consider This Harsh Measure and Give Reasons.

Deserters from the Canadian forces will in future be tried by civil courts, whether in this country or in England. A penalty of not exceeding two years imprisonment with hard labour may be imposed.

Some of the local men in khaki appear to consider that this is rather a harsh measure, as it places a man more distinctly in the criminal class. While the order may be reasonable in many instances, it is well known that a great many apparent desertions are more the result of accident or ignorance on the part of the man than an evidence of a real desire to evade his obligations to his country.

The case is cited of a man, a member of a unit which recently left this district for the front. His patriotic tendencies were well known, but he was addicted to the use of liquor. Shortly before his unit moved out he imbibed too deeply and failed to turn up in time to go away with his comrades. He was arrested as a deserter, and, of course, his crime was punishable, but it is felt that cases like his would be too severely dealt with if sent before a civil court with power to punish severely.

Let our unceasing cares be to better the love we offer to our fellows. One cup of this love that is drawn from the spring on the mountains is worth a hundred taken from the stagnant wells of ordinary charity.—Master Eckhart.

Fortification On Turkish Line To Egypt Destroyed

British Warships and Aeroplanes Have Bombarded the Town of El Arish in Egypt

LONDON, May 20.—British warships and aeroplanes have bombarded the town of El Arish, in Egypt, near the border of Palestine, and are believed to have destroyed the fort there, it was announced officially to-day. El Arish is on th Turkish line of communication from Syria to Egypt.

The text of the official statement says: "The general officer commanding-in-chief in Egypt reports that our ships, aeroplanes and seaplants successfully bombarded El Arish on the morning of May 18. The ships bombarded the forts southwest of the town and are believed to have reduced it to ruins.

"The aerial attack was divided into two phases: The seaplanes opened the bombardment, being followed later by the aeroplanes. The latter were given orders to engage any hostile machines and to devote special attention to the enemy troops and camp. A column of troops about 1,000 strong was seen south of the town on the march, and three bombs exploded among them. All the camps were effectively bombarded.

INTENSE HEAT.

"All the ships and machines returned safely. Weather conditions during the past week have been abnormal, intense heat being experienced day and night. Under these conditions the health of the troops remains good.

"Lieut.-Gen. Sir Bryan Mahon has assumed command of the western frontier of Egypt, and Lieut.-Gen. Milne is now commanding the British troops at Saloniki.

El Arish is a fortified town of Egypt, on the Mediterranean, about 75 miles to the east of Quatia, at which point fighting occurred recently between Turkish and British troops. It lies on the main high road from Palestine to the Suez Canal, paralleling the coast.

The censors have permitted comparatively little information regarding the military situation on this front to become known, but so far as can be gathered from the infrequent official bulletins, the fighting has been confined to comparatively small forces. There has been nothing to indicate that an invasion of Egypt on a large scale is being attempted, although the reference in to-day's official announcement to the Turkish line of communication implies an organized military effort.

REVIVAL CASH FOUR TONS.

BALTIMORE, May 19.—The "Billy" Sunday campaign in Baltimore cost $80,000. In the tin pans at the Tabernacle and in cash contributions there was taken in $86,811.42. Of this, $40,274.44 was for a free-will offering for Mr. Sunday himself, and $6,288.83 was taken up for charitable institutions.

The money that passed through the counting machines at the Baltimore Sub-Treasury amounted to 6,000 pounds, and the other collections counted at the Bank of Commerce brought the total weight up to about four tons.

The Tabernacle building cost was $19,914.08. The rental and maintenance of the home for Mr. Sunday amounted to $2,736.07. The party ate $987.73 worth of food in the eight wekes.

TALK ONLY OF FOOD.

Berlin Women Now Proud to Be Related to Butcher or Baker.

Berlin, May 19.—Dress is no longer a topic for conversation among German women. It has been completely supplanted by the food question. Whenever two women meet it is: "Oh, what did you have to eat today?" "How long did your servant have to stand in line?"

One tells how she has a cousin who has a meat market or a butter store, which makes it easier for her to get supplies. There was a time when the average woman of Berlin did not like to admit she was related to a butcher, a butter shop proprietor or a storekeeper, but today Berlin women tell with pride of such relationships. To be next of kin to a butcher, a baker or a milkman now raises one above the common level.

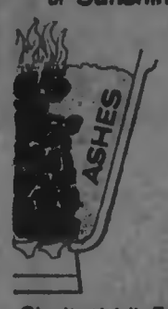
CHARLIE FUNG

Avoid waste of Fuel

Unless you KNOW positively that a cheaper furnace will heat your home without waste of fuel, there is small satisfaction in saving a few dollars on its purchase. The Sunshine Furnace saves coal because it is well made and because every part has been carefully thought out.

LOOK IT OVER. Any one can see that the greatest heating factor in a furnace is the fire-pot; that a pot with straight walls like the Sunshine fire-pot will give off more heat than one that must often have an outer lining of ashes.



Slanting Walls Firepot gathers ashes and decreases radiating surface

Doors and dampers that are tightly fitted will certainly hold the fire longer than those that are loosely fitted. The wider air passages and larger radiating surfaces of the Sunshine must heat the air much more readily. These Sunshine Furnace features are coal-savers that mean much in mid-winter.

If you are looking for economical heating, you must see clearly that it will take a good modern, well-made furnace to supply it. You will naturally think well then of

McClary's Sunshine Furnace

Saving coal interests you, of course. Then you will want a copy of our booklet. Send the coupon to-day for a copy. If you want information about the cost of heating your home, we will let you have it promptly and without charge. If you will write to our Heating Engineer, he will show you how to plan your heat distribution so as to get the utmost warmth with the least expenditure. Write him, giving the size and number of rooms in your home—a floor plan of the upstairs and downstairs—and he will give you the probable cost of putting in a system that will give you the heat you want where you want it. Fill in and send the coupon direct to the factory.

Kindly send me without expense on my part:—

1. Your booklet on the Sunshine Furnace.

2. Also forms for filling out, so that your heating engineers can tell me how to order and install a system that will properly heat my home.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

But every foot the Canadians retreated brought the big Frenchman nearer, bawling with triumph. At an opportune moment, so close was the press, he slipped his foot between Ellinwood's legs, and gave him a push. Pete stumbled, almost fell, and recovered himself in raging.

"Get back you!" he bawled, sending half a dozen men spinning with sweeps of his great arms. "I'll fight this Frenchy. Just let me at him!"

Code saw the rage in Pete's eyes and recognized that he could do nothing more to avert the trouble. His part would have to be confined to seeing that his man got a fair deal. He and Pete were unarmed except for their huge clasp-knives—much better kept out of sight under the circumstances.

The crowd fell back, and the two giants stripped off their coats and shirts. The Frenchman danced up and down, beating his great fists together in a fine frenzy, but Pete, half-crouched, stepped forward on his toes, his hands hanging loose and ready at his sides.

"Allez, donc!" It was the starting word, and Jean leaped in. Pete met him with a crashing right to the ribs and dodged out of reach of the clutching hands that reached for his throat. They circled around a moment and again the Frenchman came, this time in one great leap.

On the instant Ellinwood jumped in to meet him. There was a swift flying of arms, a pounding of the great fists, and Pete suddenly shot back from the melee and landed on his back in the dirt. One of the Frenchman's great swings had landed. But he was up in an instant and went after his opponent again.

Jean saw now that he had another man to deal with—unlike a Frenchman, an Anglo-Saxon cannot fight without sufficient provocation. Now all the battle was aroused in Ellinwood, for aside from the shame of his downfall, the crowd was yelling at the top of its voice. Jean began to run away, circling round and round the ring of spectators, Pete after him.

Suddenly he made a stand, but the mate was ready for him. Dodging the straight left, Pete hurled himself forward and seized the burly Frenchman in his arms. Then, with a tug and a wrench, as though he were uprooting a tree, he lifted his opponent and crashed him down to the earth.

Jean, stunned, and with a broken arm, sought to get up. He gained his feet and, game to the last, staggered toward Ellinwood. Pete started to run in again, but some one on the edge of the crowd thrust a foot out and the big islander stumbled.

Code saw the man who interfered, and, his blood boiling, leaped for him. At the same instant there came a cry of "Police! Police!" But Code did not hesitate. He plunged into the crowd after his man and, in an instant, found himself surrounded and fighting the whole mob.

For a moment it lasted. There was a rain of heavy blows that blinded him, and then something that was hard and dull struck him on the head. Everything began to whirl, and he found he could not lift his arms. Dimly he heard a voice near him shout: "This way!" in England and felt himself gathered up by men and borne swiftly away.

Then consciousness left him.

CHAPTER XX.
AMONG THE HOME FOLKS.

The village of Freekirk Head was a changed place.

No longer of early mornings did the resounding pop! pop! of motordories ring back from the rocks and headland as the trawlers and hand-liners put to sea. No longer did the groups of weary fishermen gather on the store steps for an evening pipe and chat or the young bloods chuck horseshoes at the foot of the chapel hill.

It was a village of women. True, Squire Hardy, being too old to fish, had remained at home, and Bill Boughton, who was completing details for the immediate and profitable sale of the season's catch, was behind the counter of his general store.

He dealt out supplies to the women and children, and wrote down against their fathers' shares the amount of credit extended. But others, day after day, found nothing set against them, and this was due to the promise of help that Elsa Mallaby kept.

"It's useless to charge supplies to those who have nothing now with the idea of getting it back from their fishing profits," she said. "What they earn will just about pay for it, and then there they are back where they started—with nothing. Better let me pay for everything until the men get back. Then they will have something definite ahead to go on."

No one but Adelbert Bysshe, the rector, Bill Boughton, and Elsa Mallaby herself knew exactly how much she paid out weekly toward the maintenance of the village. But all knew it to be an enormous sum (as reckoned on the island), and daily the worship of Hard Luck Jim's widow grew, until she occupied a place in Freekirk Head parallel to a patron saint of the Middle Ages.

But Elsa Mallaby was intensely human, and no one knew it better than herself, as, one late afternoon, she sat at her mahogany table, looking absently over the stubs in her check-book. She saw that she had disbursed a great deal of money—more, perhaps, than she would have under any other circumstances—but she frankly acknowledged that she did not mind that, if only she achieved the end toward which she was working.

For Elsa, more than any one on Grande Mignon, was a person of ways and means.

She was one of those women who seem to find nothing in self-communion. Hers was a nature destined for light and gaiety and happiness. To sit in a splendid palace and mope over what had happened was among the last things she cared to contemplate.

Being of the pure Grande Mignon stock, she looked no farther for a husband than among the men of Freekirk Head, good, honest, able men, all of them. And her eye fell with favour upon Captain Code Schofield of the schooner Charming Lass, old schoolfellow, playmate and lifelong friend.

Canadian Agent: FRANK S. BALL, 27 Portland St., Toronto.

The money she had mailed to him had only been an excuse to write a letter; the favours to Ma Schofield were, in great part, to help further her plan; the whole business of helping support Freekirk Head was a flash of dramatic display, calculated to bring her ineradicably before Code's eyes—and every one else's.

As she sat near the window and saw the sunset glow die over the mountain ridge she asked herself what she had achieved. Apparently very little. She felt the futility of human endeavour and desire. To her knowledge Code was in love with nobody, although rumour had for years linked his name with Nellie Tanner's. That was exploded now, for Nellie was engaged to Nat Burns.

Why did he not respond?

Slowly her smile returned. He would respond when he had heard certain other things. Then he would forget any one else but her—if there was any one else. Her heart leaped at the thought.

As it became dark she rang the bell.

"Light the candles in the drawing-room," she said to the servant who entered. "You remember that Mrs. Tanner is coming for dinner?"

"Yes, madam."

"Very well. That is all." The servant withdrew.

There was nothing unusual in the fact of Mrs. Tanner coming for dinner in the evening to the big house. Elsa simply could not eat all her meals alone, and her old friends at the village were constantly receiving invitations.

Mrs. Tanner arrived at half-past six. It was her first visit since the departure of the fleet several weeks before, and there was plenty to talk about. But Ma Tanner wisely reserved her conversation until after the meal, for the "vittles" of Mallaby House were famous the whole length of the New Brunswick coast.

Afterward when they had retired to Elsa's pink and gray boudoir, the eternal envy of Grande Mignon womanhood, the talk flowed freely.

"It's this way, Elsa," declared ma confidentially. "I think Nellie is pretty well took care of. Now young Nat Burns, as you know, is pretty well off, as the sayin' goes on the island. He really wouldn't have to fish if he didn't want to. His father didn't neglect him when his time come."

Ma Tanner did not see the change in Elsa's expression. The pupils of her magnificent black eyes expanded and the delicate brows drew together over the bridge of her nose. The close mouth, with its upg set, would not have been recognised by any but lifelong friends.

"And Nat's about's good as any boy," went on ma. "Boys is turr'ble hard to fetch up so they don't disgrace ye and send ye to the grave with gray head bowed in sorrer, as the poet says. Nat ain't bad. He speaks sharp to his mother once in a while, but la—what boy don't? I think he'll treat Nellie right and be a good man to her."

"Ma," said Elsa, and her voice was quiet and intense as though she were keeping herself well in hand. "that's what every one thinks about Nat Burns."

"Wal," asked the elder woman, slightly resentful, "don't you think so?"

"What I think has nothing whatever to do with the question. But what I know might have. I don't want Nellie's life ruined, that's all."

"Look here, Elsa, what're you drivin' at?" Ma Tanner was becoming wrought up. She knew there must be something behind these hints or Elsa would never venture on such thin ice with her.

"Ye be'n't by any means jealous o' Nellie, be ye?" she asked, peering through her spectacles.

"Heavens, no!" cried Elsa so convincingly that Mrs. Tanner was satisfied once and for all.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

School Lunches: (Continued) It cannot be doubted that the health of children depends very much upon the food they eat. The quality of the pick-up lunch served in school at noon is of great importance and will not be discussed. Parents and teachers associations existing all over the country for the benefit of school children, would be wise to give the matter close attention and study. Upon request of many I add this final article on the subject of School Lunches.

"The basket lunch is harder to plan and also to prepare than the lunch at home. To begin with, there are many foods which cannot be included in it, either because they are not good cold or because they cannot be conveniently packed or easily carried. This leaves fewer foods to choose from, and so extra care is necessary to prevent sameness. Extra care is needed, too, in the preparation of foods that must be packed in small compass and kept for several hours before being eaten and that must very often be carried over dusty roads.

Many kinds of lunch boxes, pails and baskets are now on the market. Baskets can, of course, be washed or scalded, but not so easily as metal containers and they should be frequently cleansed. There should, in fact, be no part of any food container that cannot be cleaned. For this reason the simplest boxes and baskets are often better than the more elaborate ones and compartments in which to keep dishes, knives, forks and spoons. The precautions which must be taken to keep foods clean and safe differ with circumstances. In dusty seasons they should be wrapped particularly well. In hot weather the use of soft moist foods in which molds and bacteria are most likely to grow rapidly should be avoided. Although chopped meat moistened with a dressing of some kind makes a good sandwich filling, such foods are less desirable in hot weather than slices of meat, peanut butter or other foods less liable to spoil.

Paper napkins or the somewhat heavier paper towels of much the same size are very useful for packing lunches and like paraffin and parchment paper, may now be had at a low price, particularly if, bought in rather large quantities. If no provision is made in the school for serving lunches, an extra napkin, either of paper or cloth, should be put in the basket to be spread over the school desk when the lunch is eaten. In packing the lunch basket put at the bottom the things least likely to crush and wrap the sandwiches, etc. into neat parcels, not all in one. Paper cups, jelly tumblers with covers, which can now be bought in several sizes; bottles with screw tops, such as those in which candy and some other foods are sold; and small jars, can all be used for packing jellies, jams and honey as well as other foods.

The quality of the bread used in the basket lunch is especially important because it is commonly served in the form of sandwiches and is, therefore, to be considered not only as a food in itself but also as a means of keeping other much-needed foods in good and appetizing condition or of serving them in attractive ways. Variety in breads, too, is more important at this than at other meals because of the danger of monotony. Wheat bread, whole-wheat bread, corn, rye or oatmeal bread; nut, raisin and date breads; beaten biscuits, rolls, crisp baking powder biscuits or soda variety. Rolls hollowed out can be made to hold a large amount of sandwich filling, which is an advantage at times.

Here are a few suggestions of bills of fare for the basket lunch, sandwiches with sliced tender meat for filling, baked apple, cookies or a few lumps of sugar.

Crisp rolls, hollowed out and filled with chopped meat or fish, moistened and [illegible] mixed with salad dressing; orange, apple a mixture of sliced fruits, or bories, cake.

Lettuce o celery sandwiches, cup custard, jelly sandwiches.

Cottage cheese and chopped green-pepper sandwiches or a pot of cream cheese with bread-and-butter sandwiches, peanut sandwiches, fruit cake.

Bottle f milk, thin corn bread and butter, dates, apple, raisin or nut bread with butter, cheese, orange, maple sugar.

Three or four different kinds of such foods as above mentioned are fully sufficient. Sometimes children are given money with which to buy food at noon but in practice this is not the best as they lack discrimination and pick out foods that if not harmful, at least do not prove satisfactory and in this way may overcome the good effects of careful feeding at home. Of course, the quantity of the food brought in baskets depends upon the requirements of each individual case."

Petticoats Return in All Their Fluffiness

Of Linen, Net or Taffeta, Corded or Hooped

An Interesting Breakfast Coat

NEW YORK, May 20.—There is something particularly appealing to the dainty, well-groomed woman, about ribbon-trimmed, be-frilled petticoats; they cannot be banished for long from the wardrobe. This season the petticoat has returned in all its old-time fluffiness, to keep our airy, bouffant frocks in countenance.

Paris sends us, of course, the daintiest possible of linen, hand-embroidered, lace-trimmed, ribbon-banded novelties, many of them so extremely fascinating that one is tempted to wear the sheerest of organdy, chiffon or Georgette frocks in order that their beauty may be shown. Many of these petticoats are boned, corded or wired, in order that the frocks, under which they are worn, may have the proper swing. For the dance there are net and taffeta creations, made with petal upon petal, in rose-like formation, the edges of the petaled ruffles pinked or picoted. For the organdy afternoon frock, the slip is favoured, of net and organdy, lace and ribbon-trimmed. The bodice of the slip is usually a straight, wide band of ribbon, lace, or a dainty embroidery flouncing, held in place with shoulder straps of ribbon or lace. It is not unusual to see a frilly petticoat of dark blue or red taffeta, the ruffles pinked and finished with an inset or edge of white Valenciennes, or similar lace edge.

Breakfast Set—Coat and Petticoat.

The Underbodice.

The underbodice, to keep pace with the petticoat must be very dainty indeed. In a dark blue taffeta petticoat, the skirt portion is attached at the normal waistline to a pale pink moire bodice. The bodice is merely a straight band of moire ribbon held over the shoulders by narrow pink ribbons. The upper edge of the bodice is effectively trimmed with small silk rosebuds.

Novel Ideas in Negligees.

Negligees and petticoats for the June bride are dainty and fascinating to a degree. The negligees are simple and most becoming. Chiffon or crepe Georgette are the materials most favoured for these airy garments, destined for the bride or the woman who has time to luxuriate in their charm. Pale blue, with touches of gold or yellow; rose pink, with a touch of orchid at girdle or throat; white, with pale green, and similar combinations selected to harmonize with eyes and hair. It is not unusual to find the negligee of chiffon, belted with a crush girdle of roses, or other artificial flowers; it is an attractive and artistic notion. The combining of several tones in the girdle, which is usually of net or chiffon, is another pretty way of introducing interesting combinations: for instance, a pale pink negligee is girdled with a wide sash, having long ends of several folds of various-coloured net or maline, in pink, blue, orchid and similar French colourings.

Nervous Prostration

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R.R. No. 1, Milverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat, could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams. In fact, I was so bad, thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and, though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

LADY'S THREE GORED SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

One can easily anticipate the delight in having a skirt like this one, which is, without question, "different" from many in its design. Developed in corded pique, narrower stripe than last year, or in military striped gabardine, it would go exceedingly well with a sport coat that is of goods woven with military braid stripes. These materials come in 36-inch width. Or striped silk, for other than general wear, will give a skirt that will blend well with a silk waist. The garment may be mounted on a high or regulation waistline. A deep circular flounce on this three-gored skirt is the means of obtaining the fulness that is popular. In the front flounce portion and above it a straight flat look to the skirt is preserved in good taste. From where the flounce joins a rippled fulness makes the garment stylish and attractive.

The pattern of this model may be had in sizes 24 to 30 inches waist measure. To copy it in size 24 you will need 4¾ yards 36 inch material. If you will send the pattern will be promptly forwarded 10 cents to the office of this publication to you.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

FEASTS ON CLOTHESLINE.

Thirty-Six Feet Diet Easily Recovered From Horse.

One of the most remarkable veterinary operations ever seen in Newton, N.J., was when a horse belonging to Nicholas Brazi, a vegetable peddler, bit off more than he could chew. The steed is known to his intimate associater as Gladiola III.

Mr. Brazi was delivering a consignment of new potatoes at the home of Mrs. Mason P. Hoyt, and, as has long been his custom, left Gladiola outside. When he came out he saw the horse with its head at an awkward angle, and close up to a clothes pole, making a noise like the last word of a bicycle pump. He had kicked the last of the new potatoes in the general direction of Newark, and was just punting Mr. Brazi's business coat over the barn when discovered.

A glance showed Mr. Brazi that Gladiola had eaten a strip of clothes line. Grabbing the charger by the bridle, he backed the entire works into the street, knocking down a hedge which he will have to pay for, and putting in the last desolate strokes on the failing vegetable business. When thirty-six feet of rope had been recovered the incident was closed, likewise the ambitious jaws of Gladiola.

WAR HORSES.

They go unwillingly to face the sight
Of wanton warfare. In their eyes
The acrid clouds of battle smoke arise,
Distorting weirdly with their treacherous light,
Till every form is outlined to affright.
Man is their master. Not the man of old,
To whom their brute allegiance was told
When every day was calm, and every night
A time of comfort. Now both spur and rein
Bespeak a fiend who sits in mastery.
There is no sufferance, now, of cruel pain—
Each weary hour but adding misery.
A kindly bullet speeding at the end
Cuts short their sufferings and makes death their friend.

Facts and Proposals as to Church Union to Be Submitted Presbyterian General Assembly

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The following facts and proposals to be submitted to the Presbyterian General Assembly in June, by the minority in the Union Committee will interest your Presbyterian readers and doubtless many others.

To the Venerable, the General Assembly:

The Union Committee has, by a majority of nineteen to twelve, recommended that the Assembly pass a resolution definitely committing the Church to Union, that the date be not now fixed, but that in the first year after the war the congregations which gave a majority against Union be permitted to take a vote as to whether they will enter the new church or remain Presbyterian, that application be then made to the Legislature for legal authority to take the Presbyterian Church in to the proposed new Church, and that union be thereafter consummated.

The undersigned members of the Union Committee cannot approve the above recommendations, and in presenting a minority report beg to submit the following facts and considerations:

(1) Whereas, the votes on union show:

That in 1911, the question was submitted to the people, the total Communicant membership, including members, elders, and Moderators of Session, then numbering 269,916; of who 113,000 voted for the principle of Organic Union, and 80,738 against it;

That in 1912 the Assembly at Edmonton resolved: "In view of the extent of the Minority which is not yet convinced that Organic Union is the best method of expressing the unity sincerely desired by all, the Assembly deems it unwise immediately to proceed to consummate the union but believes that by further conference and discussion, practically unanimous action can be secured within a reasonable time:

That in 1913, after three years of the "conference and discussion" thus planned and provided for, the Assembly at Kingston resolved to submit the question again to the people, their resolution in doing so containing again the finding of the Assembly at Edmonton as to "practically unanimous action"; while it was further declared by leaders who were urging this second vote, and was confirmed by the silent assent of the whole Assembly, that unless the vote were much more decisive in favour of union than the previous one, the matter would be dropped:

That at this second vote, the total membership of the Church had increased by nearly forty thousand, and was now 336,322, of whom 113,567 voted for union and 73,839 against it:

That the percentage of the total vote, yea and nay, which four years ago was in the proportion of about sixty-nine per cent. to thirty-one per cent. was now in the proportion of about sixty per cent to forty per cent.

That measuring the vote, as the Union Committee has done, by the congregations which gave a majority "yea" and "nay" is unfair, because five votes in one place may offset fifty in another; for of the 1884 congregations voting, over five hundred are mission fields, more than a hundred of them reporting a dozen or less of communicant votes, and nearly fifty of them half a dozen or less of such votes.

(2) Whereas, an analysis of the recent vote, which is made necessary by the pressure on behalf of the West, shows:

That the four Synods east of the Great Lakes have a communicant membership of 256,750, more than three-fourths of the whole Church, of whom 80,902 voted for union, and 64,618 against it, a proportion of fifty five per cent. to forty-five per cent. not far from an equal division:

That the opposition is greatest in the parts of these Synods that have done the most to build up the work of the Church, and upon which she has always depended to carry on her missionary operations, and where there has been the fullest opportunity for the "conference and discussion" recommended by the Assembly:

That the four Synods west of the Great Lakes have a membership of 79,572, less than one-fourth of the whole Church, of whom 32,534 voted for union, and 9,214 against it; while the two Synods of Alberta and British Columbia show 10,126 for union, and 4,883 against it, a proportion of sixty-seven per cent. to thirty-three per cent., a larger proportionate majority than obtained in the whole Church in 1911:

That of the 780 congregations voting in these four Western Synods 333, nearly one-half, are mission fields, or groups of mission stations a few of which are in town and city suburbs, while the remaining three hundred of them represent practically the total vote of the Home Mission territory of the West:

That these three hundred mission fields last year reported a total of 5,853 communicants, an average of less than twenty; while the total reported vote of these three hundred mission fields is 6,787 communicants, an average of twenty-two; either of these totals in these three hundred fields being considerably less than the membership in any one of a dozen Presbyteries of the Church, from Picton to Westminster, and less than one-fifth the membership in the one Presbytery of Toronto:

That more than nine-tenths of the total reported membership of the West is thus outside these three hundred missions, and is chiefly in the cities and larger centres where union is a matter of opinion and not of need, and that the total vote of this nine-tenths of the West, including both sides, is only forty-seven per cent of the membership, as against a total vote of fifty-five per cent. of the membership over the whole Church.

(3) Whereas the returns of the Presbyteries leave it open to doubt whether a majority of them have approved of the result in terms of the Barrier Act:

(4) Whereas, even if the Barrier Act were applicable, and the remit were duy approved, the proposal to commit the Church to a Union to be consummated in some indefinite future, is incompetent, inasmuch as an Assembly can only legislate for the year for which it is chosen:

(5) Whereas, even were such action competent, the unrest and agitation of impending division, perhaps for years, before further action "after the war" could be taken, would injure the work of the Church and weaken the hands of the Finance Board in providing for that work:

(6) Whereas the fundation principle of the Barrier Act for the protection of the Church against premature legislation is that when the Presbytery is the unit of reference the Assembly can make no important change without the expressed approval of a majority of the Presbyterian principle, when the communicants, those not voting being on the east is the unite of reference and only one-third of the communicants approve the change, the other two thirds must be held as not approving, and thus disallowing it:

(7) Whereas, to take a vote of some congregations of the Church "during the year after the war," upon a new issue, and under new conditions and to withhold that privilege from others, would be manifestly irregular and illegal:

(8) Whereas, while all who wish are free, at any time, to leave the Presbyterian Church and form other Church connections, yet inasmuch as one-third of the total membership of our Church have expressed their willingness to do so, the proposal of the Union Committee that this one third of the Church should seek legislation to take the property of the Church, including all the beneficiary and other general funds, and transfer it, together with the name and civil rights of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, to the control of a new organization, is a proposal to enforce by law an arbitrary injustice and wrong to which those continuing the Presbyterian Church can, on no ground of fairness, be expected to submit:

(9) Whereas the Assembly's present policy of cooperation, by the withdrawal of one Church or another has practically eliminated overlapping in the Mission fields of the West:

(10) Whereas, in the judgment of many, the cause of Christ can at present be best advanced by the different Churches working along their own chosen lines, in unity and harmony and cooperation, like the Allies in France; while the attempt to force Organic Union, on a basis which so large a part of our Church has disapproved, can only result in further division.

(11) Whereas the pressure of organic union by this Assembly in any way, at the present time, in the light of the recent vote, would be in direct violation of the Assembly's past pledges and declarations, would accentuate opposition and promote disunion, and is especially to be deprecated amid the sorrow and stress of war, when all the forces within our own Church should be united, and all cause of internal strife be put a way:

We therefore respectfully recommend the following:

1. The Assembly reaffirms its belief in the essential unity of all true Christians of every name.

2. The Assembly, having referred to the people for the second time the question of organic union, and having received their judgment showing largely increased opposition, regrets that the Church is not ready for union, and discerns accordingly leaving to future Assemblies to legislate for the conditions and needs that future years may bring.

3. The Assembly records its thankfulness for the success of its present policy of cooperatio and directs that in the meantime, where possible, the same be continued.

(4) The Assembly is of opinion that the few union congregations in the West, some twelve or fifteen in all might profitably connect themselves with one or other of the existing Churches, which ever they may prefer.

5. The Assembly, in transmitting this finding to the other negotiating Churches, assures them of its Christian regard and affection and invites their continued friendly cooperation in our common work of upbuilding the Kingdom of God.

Signed by the following members of the Union Committee: James D MacGregor, T. C. James, Thomas Sedgwick, Frank Baird, A. T. Love James Muir, Robert Campbell, Walter Paul, James Rodger, R. Scott D. G. McQueen, W. G. Brown, J. G. MacBeth, W. L. Clay.

GRASS EXILES' ONLY FOOD.

Hundreds of Armenians Reported Dying of Starvation.

New York, May 19.—Armenian exiles are fighting against starvation by eating grass, according to able reports received yesterday by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

Approximately 1,000,000 destitute Armenians, Nestorians and native Christians are now in Turkey, Persia and Syria. Hundreds of these are dying of actual starvation. It is estimated that in Turkey alone at least $23,800 a month is needed to relieve in part the distress of the Armenians. The cable despatch received yesterday says in part:

"Suffering among the exiles have been greatly increased on account of their having refused to accept the Mohammedan religion in accordance with offers generally made to them."

Australia seized the Marshall Isles, and then there were six.

Six little colonies trying to keep alive,
Kaiser Wilhelm's Land changed hands, and then there were five.

Five little colonies for help began to roar,
Japan snarfed up Kiao-Chau, and then there were four.

Four little colonies were left beyond the sea,
But France and we took Togoland, and then there were three,

Three little colonies the German colours flew,
And so we captured Cameroon, and then there were two.

Two little colonies from Botha tried to run,
Until Southwest Africa was caught—leaving just one.

One little colony remaineth to the Hun,
But General Smuts will soon have that, and then there'll be none!

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TRANSCRIPT FROM A WOMAN'S DIARY.

[Original.]

Herbert Ringland called Tuesday night for his answer. I told him that I wished my husband to be interested with me in the amelioration of the condition of women. We had a long discussion on the subject, during which he asked me if I believed in women serving on juries. I told him that I believed in woman performing any and every duty a man performs except certain manual labor and the duties of a soldier. Then he said that women had been tried on a jury and he had been present at a trial before such a jury. I asked him where, but he cut me short by telling me the following story:

"The prisoner, Thomas Adolphus Sweetword, was a mild mannered, ox eyed individual with a red head and freckled skin. I thought him the homeliest man I had ever seen and, since he was to be tried for bigamy, wondered how he had ever persuaded one woman to marry him, not to speak of two when I heard a woman behind me say, "Isn't he handsome?" The jury, twelve true and good women, were sworn and took their seats in the jury box. They seemed to be conscious that every one in the spectators' seats was looking at them. Six jury women felt of their back hair, evidently expecting to find it loose and ready to come down, while the other six adjusted their hats. They listened attentively to the indictment accusing the prisoner of marrying five women. I saw in the face of every woman on the jury a terrible premonition of the wrath to come and thought how hard it was on a man to be tried for such an offense before women.

"Wife No. 1 gave her testimony first it was simply a form to establish her position. She looked pityingly upon the prisoner, while he looked at her with no expression at all. The other wives were present, and he stood before them like a tame bull before the toreadors in a Spanish arena.

"Wife No. 2 told the story of how she had been deceived, betrayed, ruined. I glanced at the jury as they listened to her. Their eyes were flashing, their facial muscles were working, but they were restraining their wrath nobly. Wife No. 3 was at a disadvantage, her appearance being against her. She was surely very untastefully dressed.

"And so the recital of betrayal went on till the five women had told their harrowing tales. The other two did not appear. I was very much interested in watching the expression of the jury women. The prisoner might better have been subject to the claws of twelve hungry lionesses. Being the first time they had sat on a jury, all were, of course, ignorant of the forms. As soon as wife No. 5 had given her experience—she was the most attractive and her case was the most heartrending of all—up jumps the forewoman and says, or, rather, screams:

"'Your honor, we don't need to hear any more of this case. We are ready to find a verdict without leaving the box.'

"The judge bowed politely to her and told her that a verdict would not be in order till evidence for the defense was in and the case summed up, whereupon she sank back into her seat, fanning herself violently and muttering:

"'He can put in any defense he likes He can't change my opinion.'

"Some of the men in the room tittered but the judge glared at them, and the prisoner's attorney arose. He summoned but a few witnesses to prove that Mr. Sweetword's home with his first wife had been a pandemonium; that this had driven the poor man to seek another and another till he had tried five without getting that connubial comfort that any man has a right to expect. When the advocate came to sum up he skillfully contrived to throw all the blame on the women in the case, making no mention of the various infractions of the law of the land. He drew a picture of the horrors of married life with wife No. 1 and insinuated that wife No. 2 had been no better than she should have been before her marriage with Sweetword. Wife No. 3, he claimed, was too vulgar for any man to live with. Wife No. 4, who had angled for him, had shamefully neglected him, while No. 5 was a hard drinker.

"'Here is a case, ladies,' he concluded, 'where a man comes to grief through his desire to have a happy home. Unlike the pulpapered clubman who selfishly decries marriage, spending all his income on himself instead of supporting some good woman, the accused, believing in the sanctity of connubial life, makes five ineffectual attempts to build a nest for the dear innocents that are to come.' He then pictured the dreadful punishment the law inflicts on this poor hunter for happiness, while the selfish bachelor goes free. His last card, a glimpse of prison life, was very effectual. He closed by saying that he left his client's case in the hands of those he was sure were good, merciful Christian women.

"The jury retired after definite instructions from the judge, which none of them listened to. Nobody considered that the prisoner had the slightest chance, as the charge had been fully and conclusively proved against him and no real defense put in. The jury deliberated three days, when those in favor of the culprit gradually won over those who were not, and the verdict stood not guilty."

I sat listening to his story with suppressed indignation. When he had finished I arose and said:

"I don't believe any such trial ever took place, but your story shows your opinion of women. My answer is No.'"

And I swept out of the room.

New China Book Ends.

Book ends are always interesting, and unusual ones are sought after as gifts for all occasions. There is a new set in china which is particularly pretty. The design shows one book lying flat, its covers of dark gray, with yellow edged leaves, and another book, standing upright on the lower book, is partly open. The ends are quite heavy enough for all purposes, and the coloring of the china is particularly attractive.

Freshen Baby's Coach.

Quite often the upholstery of a baby carriage becomes faded, worn or soiled, but a new cover can be made easily. Cut a paper pattern the size and shape of back and sides of the carriage, and make a cover to fit out of white pique or a natural colored linen. Bind with a wash braid and make buttonholes along the edge. On the upholstery of the carriage sew pearl buttons and button the cover on.

"Island of Black Cats."

This is a name applied to Chatham Island, in the Pacific Ocean, about 730 miles west of the coast of Ecuador. It is overrun with black cats. Indeed, cats of no other color are seen there. These animals live in the crevices of the lava foundation near the coast, and subsist by catching fish and crabs, instead of rats and mice.

Empress Eugenie's Pen.

Henry Greville notes in his diary on March 3, 1856, that "the Empress, having expressed a wish to possess the pen with which the plenipotentiaries are to sign the treaty of Paris, the Emperor ordered that the finest eagle in the Jardin des Plantes should be plucked of its best feather, which being cut as a pen is to be used on this occasion and then handed over to her majesty."

Four days later Greville met Count Gevbar who "told me that the eagle's feather had been used for the signatures of one or two copies, but that the plenipotentiaries raised objections against employing it for all, as in that case they would never have got to the end of their labors."

Gladstone and Montenegro.

Montenegro's destiny is linked forever with the name of Mr. Gladstone. When the great statesman lay dying in the early spring of 1898 the Prince of the Black Mountain sent him a telegram which, read to-day, after the lapse of 18 years, takes on a sombre color: "Many years ago, when Montenegro, my beloved country, was in difficulties and danger, your eloquent voice and powerful pen successfully pleaded and worked on her behalf." Prince Nicholas was able to add that his country was, thanks to Gladstone, "vigorous and prosperous, with a bright future." The dying statesman replied, and every heart will to-day echo the prayer, "that Montenegro might prosper and be blessed in all her undertakings."

Canon Liddon and Cats.

Canon Liddon, like Archbishop Whately, was a lover of cats. His biographer relates that a little niece who lived with him at Amen Corner once dined with her uncle at Fulham Palace. In the drawing room after dinner Bishop Jackson told the child that her uncle was splendid company. "What times you must have with him in the evenings!" he added. "What does he talk about?" "Cats," she replied. "Oh, yes," said the Bishop, "we all know of Canon Liddon's affection for cats, but he can't talk every night and all night about cats. What does he talk about when he is not talking about cats?" "Bishops," replied the little niece.

SCRUBWOMAN INHERITS FORTUNE OF $75,000

Mrs. Anna Brooks was scrubbing a floor when a lawyer came to tell her that she had inherited a fortune of about $75,000 says New York American.

This was in a new hotel in Newark, N.J., Mrs. Brooks had been scrubbing floors for years, although she was a member of a wealthy family in Roscommon, Ireland.

An ardent, romantic girl, she scandalized her relatives at the age of 18 by eloping with a stalwart, red cheeked, young servant of her father's household. The runaway pair came to this country.

Her life was dreary after that. The man took to drink, left her and at length died. She was married again and had children. Always she was poor and overworked.

Although she never heard from the family at home, and believed herself unforgiven, it seems that a sister held a warm place in her heart for the estranged one. It was to announce a legacy from that sister, now dead that a Brooklyn lawyer went in search of her and found her scrubbing a hotel floor.

He supplied her with fund to live upon until the complete returns arrive from Ireland. Meanwhile Mrs Brooks will continue living with a humble friend whose home has sheltered her during the worst of her adversity.

Real Comfort for Seven

Canvass the world and you will not find as big a car as the Overland Six at anywhere near so low a price, $1600.

You who prefer seven passenger capacity, must pay a heavy excess in price to get so much real seven passenger comfort in any other car.

And to back up its big roomy seven passenger carrying capacity there is the powerful six cylinder Overland motor.

Take your full quota of seven big passengers and see how smoothly and easily, without a sign of effort, your powerful motor speeds away with even an overload.

Slow down to a crawl—don't touch the gear shift—keep it in high—but just touch your accelerator.

Without a tremor, smoothly, easily, swiftly, you acquire any desired speed.

That's genuine six cylinder pick-up—a big outstanding Overland Six fact.

And it's that big fact about this big car that makes its price, $1600, so small in comparison.

Overland four cylinder models will "pick up" with many another six.

Our only purpose in building a six at all is to supply with genuine Overland finality and economy that extremist demand for the luxury of bigness and lightning fast pickup.

Overland production—double that of any other builder of cars of like class—makes possible the unapproached value which you get in so big and exceptional a car at so low a price—$1600.

Have the Overland dealer overload the six and demonstrate its comfort and lightning fast pickup.

You cannot equal it for anywhere near the price.

SELF-INFLICTED WOUNDS

Unwilling Conscripts Are Punished With Death For Serious Offence

French army discipline is described by a high officer as follows: "Breaches of discipline towards superior officers are unknown chiefly because we form one big family at the front. The men are so well looked after by their officers that they are as a rule beloved by them. 'Mon lieutenant,' 'mon capitaine,' are not hollow phrases, but express vividly the true relations between the men and their superiors. In every regiment there are one or two men to whom military service is uncongenial. Some are nervous, others cowards, others what you might call 'conscientious objectors,' but France takes no notice of the whims or beliefs of the individual, and when the life of the nation is at stake every able-bodied man, be he priest or puritan, must go into the ranks with the rest.

"These men who are sick of the trenches spend their time devising means to get away. The easiest way to get an honorable discharge, they seem to think, is to wound themselves—shoot off their trigger finger and the like. This is a capital offence in time of war. But the case I refer to is that of a young lieutenant who was married three days before the outbreak of the war. He was a gallant young soldier, a fearless officer. But after a few weeks he became homesick, lovesick, or what you will. To get back to his wife was his one desire. Months passed and he could not get leave, so he took matters in his own hands and drove a bullet through his left forearm. He did not stop to think that it would soon be discovered that his wound had been caused by a French bullet.

"He was court-martialled and sentenced to be executed. I read the death sentence, and a few hours later a pardon reached us. But the young lieutenant knew his duty and fell fighting in the field without ever seeing his wife again. One must love no one but one's country in time of war."

NEW JAPANESE ANTHEM

S. Katayama has written a new national anthem for Japan. It is translated by the Japan Times as follows:

RULE DAI NIPPON

When Nippon first at Heaven's command
Arose from out the morning tide,
This was the charter of the land
That heralds cried both far and wide:
"Rule Dai Nippon! Yea, rise and rules with sovran sun!
Thy day shall never more be done!"

The nations, not so blest as thee,
Victims to wolfish passions fall,
Whilst thou from hate and envy free
Shall rise in peace a friend of all.
"Rule Dai Nippon! Yea, rise and rule with sovran sun!
Thy day shall never more be done!"

The lines could be sung to the air of "Rule Britannia."

HINTS TO SOLDIERS

Dr. Saleeby Gives Some Good Advice to the "Called" Men

"Typhoid had always been more deadly than the enemy or any other disease, but conditions have now changed, and a man protected by inoculation ran much less risk of dying from that disease than any other disease," said Dr. Saleeby, London, in a lecture on "Saving Our Soldiers' Lives."

The era of lockjaw was also ended, he said. By the employment of antitoxins we could practically snap our fingers at this particular infection. The rum ration was a conspicuous failure in keeping the men warm. It had been condemned by all Polar explorers and by Lord Kitchener.

The lecturer gave the following items of advice to the new soldiers:

Attend to your teeth before you go out.
Don't oversmoke.
Get big enough boots.
Get inoculated.
Refuse your rum ration.
See that you get lots of sugar from home.

This advice, he added, if followed by the young soldier, would be found to be of incalculable benefit to him.

Haig of Whiskey Fame

It is interesting to note that this firm of Scotch distillers are pioneers in the distilling world, having been in business since 1680. As a matter of fact, the Haig family dates back to 1260, and is one of the few old Baronial Scotch houses who have occupied the same country seat since the inception of the family. The Haig seat is at "Bemersyde" on the Tweed. It is also interesting to note that Sir Douglas Haig, Commander of the British Forces, is one of this family, and is a director of John Haig & Co., Limited.

New German Poison Shell

The Germans in the Dvinsk regions are using a new shell, which has a castiron nose grooved internally and with a central opening nearly one inch in diameter, from which, several hours after the shell has burst, there still comes a strong odor of prussic acid. The shell, which is provided with an arrangement to delay the explosion, generally burst on the ground. Wounds of the slightest character from fragments of these shells, inevitably and usually very rapidly, cause death.

Facts Worth Knowing

Take a district containing a hundred houses and a hundred families living in them. You will find that over ninety per cent. of the buildings are insured against fire loss. Of the heads of the families occupying them, according to the known average, not one in five will be carrying life insurance. Look forward fifty years: How many of the houses will have been destroyed in that period? Not over one of the hundred. Take the heads of the families in the same fifty years: How many of them will be alive at the end of that period? Not over ten out of the hundred.

We insure against fire as a matter of course, and rightly so. In the fact of a fifty-year record, how vastly more important that the two kinds of insurance be reversed, or better, that the life insurance be brought up in its totality to the volume of the fire insurance. The one house burns, insurance is paid, and the property rebuilt. The man who is in the great class of the uninsured dies, and the loss to himself and those dependent upon him is a total one. You cannot compare a fire loss with a death loss, and yet we go on and on thinking of the more meagre loss of fires and protecting against them, while overlooking and forgetting the greater loss that death brings, and neglect protecting against it.

It is a matter of congratulation that fire losses are universally recognized and protected against. How much greater a matter of congratulation it will be when the same unlimited recognition is given to loss through death, and life insurance protection becomes as universal as fire protection.

WEARS HIS FIRST SHOES.

78-Year-Old Bachelor Also Sees First Vaudeville Show.

Charles Sanders, born 78 years ago on a farm near Bald Mount, Ill., a few days ago wore his first pair of shoes and went to see his first vaudeville show. A pair of 50-cent jean trousers, a blue overall coat with brass buttons and a slouch hat completed his costume.

Charlie is a bachelor, owns a farm of 700 acres, and has a fortune estimated by close friends at $50,000.

"Gee, Tom, look at them girls up on that platform—they're only half dressed," Saunders whispered to T. W. Conway, a Bald Mound farmer, as the two sat in a theatre.

Conway blushed, for a woman seated in the rear row front heard the remark and turned around.

"Charlie, just you sit still and watch what's going on up there," Tom whispered in the old man's ear.

"No more vaudeville shows and sporty shoes for old Charlie," the eccentric old man told his housekeeper as he changed the new shoes, which hurt, for his comfortable ones.

SOLDIER CRAZED BY WAR KILLS SIX NEAR VIENNA.

Advices from Vienna give details of a tragedy which occurred in Rudolfsheim, on the outskirts of the city, where a soldier ran amuck and killed six of his comrades, wounded six others, and also seriously injured a fireman.

In the military hospital for convalescents at Rudolfsheim was an infantryman named Fichtner, who was suffering from nervous trouble brought on by his experience at the front. He was not considered at all dangerous. At nine o'clock in the morning he suddenly broke into the dining-room with a pistol in one hand and a rifle in the other, and began firing promiscuously at the other patients assembled in the room. Four were killed by his shots. He then took refuge in an upper room and barricaded himself in, firing from the window at the crowd in the street, killing two more. The Fire Department was called out, but despite the fact that it played the hose on him he continued firing for two hours. He was finally overpowered and declared that he only did his duty.

Among the six killed were a major of infantry and two privates. Traffic in the streets was held up for two hours, and the tragedy caused great excitement.

VERDUN A MASS OF RUINS AFTER BOMBARDMENT.
The German artillery fire on Verdun has been terrific. Verdun has practically been shot to bits. Most of its buildings are total wrecks, and the air of desolation that now prevails is pathetic. In place of the beautiful structures are piles of dirt and rock, the only semblance of its former beauty.

AERIAL ACTIVITY IS THE FEATURE OF TO-DAY'S NEWS FROM THE FRONT

German Aeroplanes Bombarded French Seaport of Dunkirk and Also Raided the East Coast of England, One Enemy Aeroplane Being Shot Down---Gas Attack in Champagne Was a Failure.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, (French Official Communique), May 20.—The greatest aerial activity on both sides was reported in to-day's official statement from the War Office announcing unsuccessful German attacks on the Belgian front and in the Champagne, but no infantry fighting at Verdun.

German aeroplanes bombarded the French seaport town of Dunkirk and the town of Bergues, south of Dunkirk, killing six persons and wounding 38. In reprisals, a French air squadron attacked the enemy camps at Wytwegen, Zarren and Handzaem, and a Belgian squadron bombarded the Chiftelles aerodrome, many bombs reaching the mark.

Lieut. Navarre, French air hero, brought down his eleventh German aeroplane, which fell behind the French lines near Chattencourt, northwest of Verdun. Both German occupants were captured. This was the second plant brought down by Navarre in 24 hours.

Lieut. Nungesser brought down his fifth German plane, which fell in the Forges woods. Three other German aeroplanes fell behind their own lines.

The attack on the Belgian front was made by German groups which attempted to cross the Yser between Steenstrate and Hetsas. The advance was checked by the Belgian infantry fire.

In the Champagne, the Germans sent great gas clouds rolling down upon the French lines in preparation for an attack. The first German troops appearing behind the gas clouds were met with such a hot fire that no further attempt to advance was made.

West of the Meuse the Germans continued to bombard with great violence the northwestern front of Verdun, but there were no infantry actions.

Russian Troops Are Still Making Gains

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, England, May 20.—Russian troops, pressing westward to cut the main Turkish line of communication to Bagdad have advanced more than twelve miles, and are now within less than 70 miles of Mosul and the Tigris river, according to Petrograd despatches to-day.

The belief that the Russians have outwitted the Turks, shifting large bodies of troops from the Balburt-Erzingan front to the south for the march on Bagdad, grew to-day when the latest official statement from Constantinople arrived. The Turkish War Office reported the Russians at a standstill in the north, all attacks in the Balburt-Erzingan region having been repulsed.

It is recalled here that just previous to the Grand Duke's capture of Erzerum, the Russian and Turkish statements were similarly indefinite.

East Coast Raided By German Aeroplanes

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 20.—German seaplanes raided the east coast and the County of Kent at two o'clock this morning.

The War Office announced that one person was killed and two injured by German bombs.

One of the raiding planes was brought down near the Belgian coast, the War Office announced, indicating a thrilling pursuit by British planes in the darkness above the Channel.

Three German seaplanes took part in the raid. Their bombs wrecked a saloon and damaged several buildings, but did no military damage, according to the War Office.

About thirty-seven bombs were dropped. A soldier was killed and a woman and a sailor injured.

Allies May Break With Roumania

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Rumour was in circulation here this afternoon that Roumania is near abreak with the Allies as the result of her recently negotiated commercial treaties with Germany and Austria. One report, unconfirmed, said that the French Minister to Roumania had been recalled.

American May Be Released

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Ambassador Page to-day cabled the State Department that John J. Kilgallen, a New York boy, held in Dublin in connection with the Irish rebellion, probably will be given his freedom.

Kilgallen was a student in Dublin, a member of the Boys' Cadet Corps, and Thomas Pearce, one of the leaders of the rebellion, induced the corps to attend a meeting of the rebels. Police burst in on the meeting and arrested Kilgallen among others.

Germans Attack the British Lines

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 20.—The Germans are preparing for a big offensive on the British-Belgian front, according to several despatches from Holland to-day. Trainloads of Germans and ammunition has been moving towards the frontier the past three days. Heavy guns are reported to have been concentrated on the line from the coast to Ypres as if for the renewal of an attempt to reach Calais. Air scouts are becoming increasingly active.

THE BATTERY MEN ALSO HAVE A CLAIM UPON THE PUBLIC

Major W. C. Ackerman Suggests That $600 of the Proposed $10,000 To Be Raised for 93rd Be Given to 52nd Battery Boys

HAVE BEEN NEGLECTED

Peterborough, May 20, 1916.

To the Citizens of Peterborough:

In the columns of the press last evening, an inquiry was made as to why men have enlisted in Peterborough for overseas service in artillery units, are not considered in the way of patriotic collections. As Recruiting Officer for this branch of the service in Peterborough, I have refrained in the past from bringing this subject up, though I have felt for some time that the men who have enlisted from Peterborough in overseas batteries have not had proper recognition, but as it has always been a matter of less difficulty to complete the batteries in the way of recruits, I have refrained from bringing this subject up in any way, as I have been personally equally anxious with other citizens to see the establishment of the 93rd Battalion completed.

Now, however, that the 93rd Battalion is practically completed and claim is being made upon the public to equip them properly, I wish to point out to any intending contributors to this fund, the fact that the Peterborough members of the 52nd Battery, now in training in Kingston, have equal claim on their generosity, and I would respectfully request that an amount proportionate to the number of artillery men, be set aside from the fund which it is proposed to collect during the coming week. Peterborough has contributed sixty members to the 52nd Battery. Assuming the $10,000 proposed is collected, I feel that $600.00 of this amount should be reserved for the benefit of the artillery men of the 52nd Battery. The Militia Department do not show any favours to artillery men in the way of equipment, and as it is recognized that this branch of the service is equally necessary, there is no good reason why the proposed fund should not be equally divided. Unfortunately there has been little attention given to battery men who have enlisted in Peterborough during the past year. On only about four occasions have they received any send-off of any kind, and I am in a position to know that on several occasions this was felt very keenly by the men. It is proposed in the near future to organize more batteries in the Third Military District, of which Peterborough will be doubtless called upon for its share of recruits. If however, discrimination is to be shown in the way of grants between different branches of the service, it is going to make it difficult to recruit for the artillery, and I am satisfied that if this matter is fairly considered by the public, that they will be willing to have their contribution proportionately divided. I would suggest, therefore, that where it is felt the artillery have a just claim in this matter, that an expression of opinion to this effect be given to the collectors of this fund. In conclusion I wish to say that I feel I would not be doing justice to the branch of the service with which I am connected without bringing this matter to the attention of the citizens of Peterborough.

W. C. ACKERMAN,
Major.
O.C. 34th Battery.

DO YOUR DUTY BY THE 93rd BATTALION

Citizens of Peterborough are reminded that on Monday and Tuesday they will be given an opportunity to do their duty by the 93rd Battalion. The sum to be raised by this collection is comperatively small. The citizens will not be asked for subscriptions of any like the size they made to the Patriotic Fund, but all will be expected to do his share for the gallant boys we are sending out to fight for us. From one end of the province to the other, townships are vying with township, county with county, and city with city, to see which can do the most for their soldier boys. Here in Peterborough, after having enjoyed the benefit of a battalion being stationed here all winter, we have done practically nothing. It is not too late, however, to make good. A ready response to the canvassers on Monday and Tuesday will make it possible for the presentation of an adequate fund to the 93rd before it leaves the city. We want our boys to be at least as well equipped as those from Port Hope, Lindsay or other centres. Will you not help?

ADVANCE GUARD OFF TO BARRIEFIELD ON MONDAY MORNING

One Hundred Men of the 93rd Will Leave City First of the Week to Arrange the Camp For the Arrival of the Main Body on Thursday---93rd May Go to Borden Camp From Barriefield---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

A number of the members of the 93rd Battalion are going to leave Peterborough and get a glimpse of Barriefield Camp sooner than they expected. This morning an advance party was selected, consisting of twenty-five men from each Company, or one hundred in all, to leave for Barriefield on Monday, to place the camp in shape for the arrival of the Battalion, on Thursday. The advance party will probably leave on Monday morning and are under orders to report at 6.30 a.m., Monday

All the societies who wish to have articles carted to the Exhibition Grounds on Tuesday afternoon for Wednesday's celebration are asked to notify Mrs. Stevenson, on Monday morning, telephone 1345, giving all the necessary particulars. Mrs. Stevenson will arrange to have the articles taken to the grounds.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says: This week, Geo. Greer, warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, and Reeve of Cobourg, presented the 136th Battalion with a large seven-passenger McLaughlin car. The Battalion were offered either a new Chevrolet five-passenger or a seven-passenger, and chose the latter on account of its size.

Mrs. Isadore Danah has received the following letter from her son, Pte. D. H. Danah, No. 113011, M. G. S., 1st Battalion, C.M.R., 8th Canadian Infantry Brigade, 3rd Canadian Division, B.E.F., France, which reads as follows:

April 28th, 1916.

Dear Mother and Father,—Just a few lines once more to let you know I am alive and enjoying the best of health, hoping that these few lines will find you all enjoying the same.

I received your most kind and welcome letter on the 24th, also parcel on the 18th. Must say it was some parcel. I was glad, indeed to get it, as it is us boys who do appreciate anything from our own home town. I also received a nice box from brothers Tom and John; they sent me a nice pair of hip rubber boots; very kind of them as they are just the thing I have lots of use for.

Well, mother, you asked me if I ever was sorry I enlisted. No, mother, I am not; I came to fight, and I feel it my duty to fight for my king and country, and only wish I were able to do as much more. I have seen a lot and have had some great experiences since I came over here to France, but I will be glad when we get through, and more so to get back to a civilized country, where I can hear the Church bells ring; but God is for that; the only one we have to depend on. I never forget to ask God, in my prayers, to protect me; but mother, many a comrade has fallen beside me. I never know when my turn may come. I know it must be hard news to get, but cheer up and look on the bright side of it. The only thing that worrys me is, when I think how you and father are getting along at home. Has he any better health. I hope he has. I am proud to say I've had good health ever since I came over here; just one year the 3rd of June, since I sailed I have been in the firing line since the 1st of September, and thank God I am still going on in the same old way. I see by the Peterborough papers where they have nine hundred or more recruits. Let them come on as they will all be needed. I think there must be a lot more young men in Peterborough who could help us out if they only thought so. What better is one man in the sight of God than another?

I haven't seen Bert Mason nor Albert. Try and give me their address; also Charlie Watkins; for I know there's a lot of boys I enlisted with not far from me and I can look them up. I saw Isaac Brady; you might tell his mother he is looking fine; remember me to her, also our neighbours down home.

Well, mother, I will close as I am going into the firing line to-night. So write often. I will say bye-bye.

Your loving son,
DAVE.

Lieut. J. A. McNab, of the 93rd Battalion, while on a visit to Hamilton this week, was the recipient of a very handsome Masonic ring from the members of the Canadian Association of Display Men, of which he has been president for the past two and a half years. The members from Toronto, St. Thomas, and other cities, as well as those residing in Hamilton, tendered Lieut. McNab a banquet at the Royal Hotel, and took advantage of the opportunity to make the presentation. By the way this must be Lieut. McNab's lucky week, as this morning he was presented with a beautiful gold-headed cane by the men of No. 7 Platoon, B Company, of which he is the platoon commander.

Citizens who buy buttons to-day are asked to wear them till the 93rd leave town, then take care of them as souvenirs of this fine home battalion

It is unofficially learned that the stay of the 93rd Battalion at Barriefield Camp, for which they leave on Thursday next, will be a short one. The Examiner hears that after going to Barriefield Camp for five or six weeks, the Battalion will move north to the new Borden Camp at Pine Plains, Angus, Ont., for a more advanced training before leaving for overseas. The same report says that all the battalions west of Kingston will follow the same course.

Bandsman H. B. Boorman 94th Battalion, Port Arthur is in the city on a short visit to his friends.

Lieut. Dr. M. P. Kennedy received notification last week to report for service with the Veterinary Corps of the overseas service. Lieut. Kennedy left on Wednesday morning for Halifax from where he will sail for England. Lieut. Kennedy was formerly connected with the Cobourg Battery, and went out to British Columbia with that battery at the commencement of the war.—Lakefield News.

In to-day's casualty list appears the name of Pte. Wm. Harrington, a Peterborough member of the Mounted Rifles, who is reported to be dangerously ill. His home is at 97 Robinson street.

24th CELEBRATION A MONSTER EVENT

Huge Crowds Will Gather at the Exhibition Grounds for Military Manoeuvres and to Bid Farewell to 93rd Battalion.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMME

Granted favourable weather, the demonstration arranged for next Wednesday, May 24th, promises to be one of the biggest events of the kind ever held here. Naturally with the 93rd Battalion leaving the city on the following day, Peterborough's fine battalion will be featured and the day will afford an unique opportunity of viewing the 93rd before they leave. The battalion will be reviewed in the morning by a staff officer, and in the afternoon there will be a big programme of military manoeuvres and sports. The programme will give the citizens a chance to watch the Machine Gun Section of the battalion at work, and will give a splendid idea of the activities of the Signallers who will lay a field telephone and operate it, as well as show the flag method of signalling. A picked squad of men under the direction of Sergt.-Major Miller will give an exhibition of physical drill and bayonet exercises. In addition to races, motor-cycle races, etc., there will be a ball game between the 93rd Battalion team and a picked local team, and probably a lacrosse game between the Peterborough Lacrosse Club and a team representing the 93rd Battalion. The Band of the 93rd will supply music. The morning and afternoon programmes will take place at the Exhibition Grounds.

The ladies have arranged to sell refreshments and meals on the ground and there will be a midway and other features as well, all the proceeds going to the 93rd Battalion Fund.

It is expected that there will be an influx of visitors from all over the county to bid farewell to the boys of the 93rd.

TRANSFORMATION IN IRISH POLITICS IS NOW COMPLETE

Both the Irish Parties Realize That They Must Make Concessions to Each Other and There is a Determination That a Solution Be Found

MR. ASQUITH'S VISIT

(Copyright 1916 by Central News)
(By T. P. O'Connor)

LONDON, May 20.—Exasperation regarding the executions still exists in Dublin, but with Mr. Asquith's visit is the feeling that the military government is at an end. Above all is the startling transformation of the whole political situation calculated to assuage feeling. It is only in Irish politics that a transformation so complete, instantaneous and abrupt is possible. The fierce vehemence wherewith the Sinn Fein movement is condemned by 99 per cent. of th Irish opinion was due to their belief the rebellion would postpone Irish liberty for a generation. These apprehensions though well groun led, have been fastified by the cry for a settlement, coming by strange paradox on the morrow of the rebellion

THE TRANSFORMATION.

The factors which created the transformation are various. First, Mr. Asquith's visit and the certainty, this does not mean merely to put soldiers in their places, but also to be the first spectacular move in the great new game.

Secondly, the horrors of the rebellion have brought the people of Ulster to a sense of risks they have escaped, and the possibility of renewing the campaign of two years ago.

Thirdly, sane politicians believed on all sides it was time to save the British Empire from the peril and shame of having its own small nation principle of nationality unsettled while it and the Allies are fighting the cause of other small nations, upholding the principle nationality for the French, Poles, Italians and Serbs.

Finally, both the Irish parties realize they must make concessions to each other; the Tories that they can not longer resist home rule in Southern Ireland, the Nationalists that Orange Ulster cannot be driven to Home Rule by force of arms, and that if it cannot be forced, it must be persuaded, if need be, by being given a certain time to cool downthe unfortunate racial and religious passions which still divide Ireland. It is known that at the Buckingham Palace conference two years ago the two parties came together on this general basis and broke down only on the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh.

A DIFFERENT ASPECT.

The problem presents itself in a different aspect under the new war conditions. Having sounded opinion in may quarters I find among all British Liberals and Tories the desire and generally determination that a solution be now found. There are rumours of an intermediate stage, with a joint executive of Unionists and Nationalists to rule Ireland. I do not believe any such compromise is possible, and the Irish leaders prefer there should be a general settlement now of the whole question with perhaps a postponement of its final operation till the close of the war.

GREAT DIFFICULTIES.

There are great difficulties for Nationalist Ireland still obsessed by the tragic events of the Rebellion, while Orange Ulster still is fiercely suspicious, but the basis agreement is there, in the immediate acceptance by the Ulster Unionists of the Irish

Have You Shed Your Furs?

If So Where Are You Going to Keep Them All Summer?

This must not be considered an important question, but a most natural one, from the viewpoint of a Furrier.

Your fur coat, muff and stole are awaiting your answer to this question, for their life, health and beauty are concerned. To be stowed away in some hot, close cupboard or clothes closet, means that pelts dry, fur loses its gloss, and they become a prey to the moths.

To be stored in Barrie's, Limited, cold air vaults means that the frigid temperature of winter is enjoyed throughout the warmest days in summer, and the furs emerge in the Fall in as good a condition as when they entered.

All garments, before being placed in Barrie's vaults, are thoroughly cleaned (or repaired, if desired), and suspended on separate hangers, avoiding all danger of crushing or creasing. Charges are reckoned at 3 per cent. of the value of the garment.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEES

There will be a meeting of the committee on the 24th of May celebration, as well as the 93rd Battalion Fund committee at the city buildings to-night at 8 o'clock. A full attendance of all the members of both committees is expected.

HAVE WE HOME HUNS?

An article contributed by the Public Librarian, Mr. Dela Fosse, referring to the mutilation of periodicals, magazines and newspapers, in the reading rooms of the Public Library, is disquieting. This mutilation consists in tearing out or cutting out illustrations and articles from, especially, British magazines and periodicals. Can it be possible that the British-born should, of all, imitate the vandalism of the Hun. Are we harbouring amongst us people of the Hun type? It is to be feared so—people who mutilate Public Library magazines and steal flowers from parks and private grounds. We need a home guard to fight the Hun at home. A grandmother wouldn't be safe in the home with men of such a spirit as inmates. Their action is prompted by the Hunnish spirit that delights in destruction, and the murder of babies. We should seek them out and root them out, put them in jail; or in the pillory of public contempt.

THE REAL CAUSES.

Under the heading, "Bartering National Harmony," the Brockville Times asserts that in Quebec the provincial general election campaign is "all over as far as the Conservatives are concerned," though in a few constituencies militant Conservatives are fighting against heavy odds and "exposing the rottenness of politics in Quebec, which smells to heaven of graft and general corruption." This talk of rottenness and corruption is itself rot. Could graft consist with the fact that in nearly every one of the ten years of Liberal rule — from 1906 to 1916, there has been achieved a substantial financial surplus, and this with a progressive programme of rural road making that shames Ontario, and with liberal appropriations for public services of use to the people; for example for agriculture. In the two years of the preceding Conservative regime the amounts voted to agriculture totalled $163,404, or $81,702 per year. In the ten years of the Liberal regime the amounts voted from year to year, totalled $4,108,000 or an average of $410,000 per year. With so much money voted and spent for useful purposes, Quebec must have been in the billionaire class to admit of much graft. No; the fact is that the Liberal government is so strongly supported because it has governed the province well; spent public money to get adequate value in public benefits. Another subsidiary cause. The course of the class of Conservative journals the Times represents, and the course of an element of the Conservatives of Ontario in attacking, denouncing, abusing and vilifying their French Canadian fellow citizens has naturally solidified the French people of Quebec against their slanderers and as naturally turned them to the party that believes in equal rights for all our citizens, and respectful treatment of the racial minority. If there has been destruction of "national harmony," the Times and its Conservative confreres are very largely responsible.

AUTOGRAPHIC AND UNSPIRATIONAL.

A reader of the Examiner has suggested an idea, which, while it may not involve practical things, will add to the interest of the records of the city. The idea is to have provided a book, to contain the autograph signature of the distinguished men of Canada that from time to time visit the city, a visitors' book that would be worth while. Every public museum has or should have a book in which visitors inscribe their names. It is an added source of interest to a visitor to turn over the leaves and find among the names of previous visitors the names of friends living, and perhaps dead, names that will seem like a personal reunion, or a link with the other world. If we had had, in the city of Peterborough, such a record in the past, we should have had recorded the names of great men dead and living. They would have included the autograph names of the late King Edward, the present King George, and our own visiting King, the Duke of Connaught; the names of Dufferin, Aberdeen, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir John Macdonald, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Edward Blake, Sir Oliver Mowat and many other statesmen, and great men who have been the guests of the city from time to time. This may seem a small matter, but great history has had its reign in, trifling circumstances and events. A lady losing her garter in a ball room—honi soit qui mal y pense—led to a new order of chivalry, whose members have carved their names and achievements, ineffaceably in the history of the Empire and the world. A visitors' book, something like a loose-leaf ledger, bearing the historic names of great history has had its origin in, in library museum, would not only be an object of autographic interest, but be made a valuable historical mnemonic to visiting school children who would have the facts associated with the names of the history makers more deeply impressed by the sight of the names of our great men written by the very hands of men who have grasped the reins of power and moulded the destinies and added a few stones to the proud fabric of Canadian nationhood.

WE AND THE 93RD.

We owe a duty to the 93rd, which is doing its duty by us. Ten hundred of our sons, our brothers, our friends our neighbours, are about to leave on the first stage of the journey to the fighting line, where they will put their health, their limbs, their lives in peril for our sake. They are going to fight for us; they will endure hardships and privation; do brave fighting for us in order that we may be assured a perpetuity of the enjoyment of the benefit of peace in a country where we have all that the boys are leaving; all that makes life worth living. The boys of the 93rd need many things that the Government does not supply. Of course they knew that when they took the King's shilling they were not enlisting for a holiday outing; that stern work hard beds, and short rations, at times, would be their lot. It would be a great shock to them to come down from the comforts of home they are accustomed to, to "hard-tack" at one drop. We can ease the shock by supplying the means there is need of—funds to provide extra rations. The officers and soldiers should be reimbursed for their recruiting expenses, some $2,000. It is enough for them to fight for us without asking them to pay for the privilege They need camp kitchens to cook meals on the march. They need an extra marquee tent for assembly and fraternising purposes. They need sporting goods, the Canadian Tommy Atkins can't always be on "dentry go" —he needs an off hour or two. There is need for funds to purchase music for one of the best military bands in the Dominion; there is need for funds to purchase comforts for the sick. There is need for a small motor truck. There is much to fetch and carry, and "fatigue duty" is fatiguing. In a word, the 93rd needs about $10,000 of a regimental fund for necessary articles and comforts, and in satisfaction of the debt we owe them

It is hoped that the appeal will be met by our citizens in a loyal and liberal spirit; it is hoped that the municipalities, in emulation of municipalities all over the Province, will liberally contribute, and given a chance to contribute to hundreds who will not or cannot contribute in any other way.

We have the city streets made lively on every Saturday, especially today. We shall soon miss the stirring music, the roll of the drums, and the blast of the bugles. We shall soon say good-bye to the gallant lads, many of whom we may never see again—who may be enrolled in the silent ranks of the "unreturning brave" and the least we can do is to cheer their going by, showing a substantial interest in their comfort and well being. Let us be grateful; let us be generous.

EMPIRE DAY.

Some professedly practical persons, who think they despise sentiment, are influenced by sentiment more than they know. Religion is a sentiment as much as a principle, and translated into action moulds our character and influences our conduct. The sentiment of loyalty to country and Empire, operates in a similar manner, and begets, perhaps unconsciously to ourselves, the action that has placed Canada's 350 thousand fighters in the field or at the front. For many years we have observed Empire Day in the schools, and that observance has not only had its effect upon the young but has radiated an influence upon the people at large, and has, no doubt, had a powerful effect in influencing and inspiring national and imperial sentiment. This has had much to do with promoting the glorious share of Canadians in the fight. It may be a far cry from Empire day in city, town and country school houses to Ypres and St. Julien. But may not the two be intimately, if indirectly, related. A little over a year ago, some forty thousand Canadians in Flanders, were the living sea wall that rolled back the wave of German onslaught. They were the barrier against German advance to Calais, and between the Huns and London, the heart of the Empire. History will record with pride the gallant work of Canadians at that time, but history may not tell us what share Empire day, its teachings and lessons had in kindling the heroic spirit that inspired Canadians in "saving the situation," when it was touch and go, between an invasion of England and holding the German invaders at bay till relief came. Empire day this year, as last, has a new significance to Canadians, and teaches or has taught, the duty of active devotion and sacrifice. It is perhaps from this consideration that the Minister of Education for Ontario, has suggested to local educational authorities, that the money contributed by children for the purchase of flowers for decorative purposes, should be devoted to the purchase of comforts for soldiers for the front, which, be the contribution large or small, can be effected by turning over the contributions, in cash or in kind, to the Red Cross Society. Such a course, which involves the practice of sacrifice, will be an object lesson to young—and old — teaching us that none are so weak, whose hearts are strong, that they cannot contribute their share in strengthening the forces of our Canadian soldiers and thus help win the victory of human freedom and the highest interests of humanity. When the war is won and the soul of the world chastened, purified and regenerated, our children can tell their children that they had a humble part with their fighting sires in winning the triumph of a sacred cause.

THE RELATION OF UNITED STATES PROSPERITY TO LABOUR INTEREST

The fact that the crisis has passed, in the negotiations between the anthracite coal operators and the labour union gives ground for hope that the vast labour upheavels which have been feared in the United States will not come into effect. This, at any rate, is the conclusion which has been drawn by many of the leading publicists over the border. At the same time, there is no gainsaying that widespread unrest exists among organized workers throughout the United States. This is the result not of hard times, but of unbounded prosperity. Unemployment has practically disappeared in the United States. There is work for everybody, and work at higher wages, on the whole, than at any previous period, and this has been true for a year past. During this time, however, there have been 1,500 strikes, or about 300 more than in the preceding twelve months.

On the first of the present month wage increases went into effect for more than 900,000 workers, the increases aggregating $75,000,000 annually. Notwithstanding this—or, to speak more correctly, largely because of—strikes and lock-outs pending on that date affected more than half a million of the three million unionized workingmen throughout the United States. The standpoint of the unions is that their members are entitled to a larger share of the prosperity which is flooding the United States. The supply of cheap labour from Europe is cut off, and orders are flowing in upon almost every kind of business. Now is held to be the time to exert pressure for more wages and shorter hours.

That there is danger of this unrest killing the goose which lays the golden egg goes without saying. Undoubtedly we are on the eve of portentous changes in the economic world. Unparalleled opportunities are being presented to both the United States, and Canada, to enter foreign markets in which they have not previously competed. It is to these foreign markets that they will have to turn as soon as the war ends—a condition that may not be many weeks away. If, as a result of labour conditions, the cost of manufacturing on this continent is raised far above the standard in Europe, then manufacturers will lose the opportunities now open to them, and find themselves permanently out of markets which otherwise might be theirs.

We may be quite sure that the European nations will turn with passionate fervor to the work of economic production as soon as the war is over. They will have to do so, to regenerate the finances of their respective countries. Putting the burden of war taxation in Europe against the higher cost of labour on this continent, manufacturers on this side of the water can hope to compete on something like equal terms with Europe in foreign markets. But to use the present state of prosperity as a lever for raising the cost of manufacture to far higher standards than even now prevails would be to handicap exports and give other nations the opportunities now offered to the New World.

BRITAIN PREPARED! A MAGNIFICENT ANSWER

A PANORAMA OF THE VESSELS OF THE MIGHTY BRITISH NAVY WHICH IS STRANGLING GERMANY

UNDER DIRECT PATRONAGE OF THE KING AND DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, and with the authority and approval of the British Government, an answer will be given to the question that has been raised in some quarters of the world, "Is Britain doing her share in this war? Was she — is she, even now—prepared?"

THE question arose first, it was reported, in Russia, owing to the campaign of doubt and misinformation spread by German spies. "What is England doing, while we are resisting the sweep of Hindenberg and Mackensen?" Then France wondered if her ally across the Channel was as active as she had a right to be if victory was to be won. Neutral nations, too, beheld Germany apparently triumphant in the east, and south-east, firmly entrenched on the west, and wondered what Britain was doing towards the breaking of the deadlock and changing the tide.

AND all that time Britain was saying nothing. It was not Britain's way to say anything. Her fleet was at sea, her regular army was in Flanders, four millions of volunteers were in training for the army when the time came to strike. Four million men were trained, the seas were swept of submarines, troops were transported to France and the Dardanelles by hundreds of thousands, England was fed from abroad as usual, and her sea-borne commerce continued and increased. And all this while Britain was at war, and that war the greatest and most costly in men and money the world has ever seen. Germany knew something of what Britain was doing. But for the British fleet and the "contemptible little British army," Germany would have conquered Europe before now.

What was Britain doing? How was it done?

BRITAIN remained inarticulate. A great re-organization of practically her whole population had taken place, but it was done without ostentation or remark. The question, "Is Britain prepared?" was answered in deed, not words. Britain prepared. And these pictures will prove it.

ACTING under an inspiration, the British Government a year ago called to their service half a dozen of the word's leading firms in the moving picture making business and set them to work to picture BRITAIN AT WAR!

NO such a task was ever set for cameras before. The moving picture camera is new. England was never before so mightily engaged. It was the greatest assignment ever ascribed to photography. And it was successfully accomplished; carried out in the magnificent way in which the British Empire itself goes about things. Taken, as they were, to furnish for the world the national answer to the question, "Is Britain prepared?" these pictures furnish to the British people throughout all British possessions a visible justification for the faith that is in them.

BY an arrangement in which we co-operate with the British Government and other large newspapers of the Empire, this official message to Britain's allies and to neutrals throughout the world, a message which contains sufficient of the facts of Britain's greatness by land and sea to convince doubt itself, will be delivered in Peterborough—not because there are neutrals here, but because the pictures are the finest of the kind ever taken, and because they will fill to overflowing loyal hearts with joy and pride in Britain.

BEGINNING Monday afternoon, on MAY 29, AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE, these pictures will be shown twice daily for three successive days, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. The exhibition is under the patronage of Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary, and of the Governor-General the Duke of Connaught. The pictures come here at the instance of the Imperial Government and highly recommended by the military and naval authorities, including Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, who describes them as "wonderful photographs, marvellous as examples of the photographer's art, big with lessons of the deepest import to us and to all the world."

FULL announcements as to prices of admission, reserve seat plan, etc., and other matters, will be made later. Watch papers for further particulars.

Open New Colony In Salmon River District Soon

British Columbia Government Opening Rich Farming Country on Line of G. T. P.

A new colony in the Salmon River district of British Columbia will be opened by the Government of that province on June 20. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, on whose line the colony will be, is now arranging for excursions which will commence shortly.

Large numbers of easterners are expected to settle in the new colony, which consists of 31,360 acres. This is sufficient for 196 homesteaders. Germans will, however, be excluded.

Already four cars of settlers' effects have arrived at Prince George, the Salmon River district being just north of that city. Other cars are now on the way, and, according to reports received by the railway, there is likely to be a considerable rush for the homesteads.

The settlement will be officially opened by the Government of British Columbia on June 20, at the Government Land Office at Prince George.

The land which will then be available for homesteaders, is level and more open than any now available in British Columbia. The country is rich in all kinds of grains and grasses, it being possible to harvest three crops of alfalfa yearly.

Settlers who take up homesteads this year will probably devote their time to clearing and possibly some vegetables will be grown. Next year, however, mixed farming is expected to be taken up and developed to a considerable extent.

It is proposed to take up settlers of different nationalities, facilities being provided for them to come from all parts of Canada, but it is probable that a large number will be Mennonites.

REJECTS ALL MEAT BIDS.

French Minister Found Wholesalers Had Agreed on Higher Prices.

PARIS, May 19.—The Government has rejected bids for a hundred thousand pounds of meat daily. Proposals had been received from twenty wholesalers, but investigation proved that they had agreed on the same prices, which were 2½ cents higher than the prices quoted at the stockyards.

The Minister of War notified the dealers of the rejection of their bids and publicly made known his reasons for rejecting them.

NERVOUSNESS DRIVES FARMER TO SUICIDE

Was To Have Been Brought to London for Treatment.

NAIRN, May 20.—Driven to distraction by nervous trouble, George Fraser, a farmer on the 10th concession of East Williams, ended his life in the loft of a shed, by cutting his throat with a knife.

Mr. Fraser had long been a sufferer from nervousness and was to have been taken to a London hospital to try the rest cure. He seemed to dread the trip though he felt it was what he required.

After eating his breakfast he went to the back of the farm to see the sheep and lambs. When he came back he was all wet as though he had fallen into a creek. His family wanted him to immediately change his clothes, but he said he would go to the hay loft and pitch down some hay and that would warm him up.

Shortly afterward his little daughter went out to see how he was doing and saw blood coming through the ceiling of the shed. The child alarmed her mother who found Mr. Fraser quite dead with his throat cut.

She sent word to Parkhill for a doctor, who brought Coroner Dr. Anderson to the scene. There will be no inquest.

Mr. Fraser was about 58 years of age. He had been a member of the East Williams council for several years and was also tax collector for the township for some terms. He was a native of the township, a son of William Fraser. He leaves a widow and four children.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

It is most interesting to watch the list of Canadian Hospitals in England increasing in number. Every month sees some new one started, generally for the purpose of serving some special branch of the service. The Daughters of the Empire have recently opened one for officers, which was greatly needed. It is fitted out as completely and thoroughly as are all Canadian hospitals, and the contractors are now ready to deliver the surgical apparatus, X ray and other fittings. It will undoubtedly prove a great boon to our Canadian officers.

Nurses' Rest Home.

The Nurses' Rest Home is another branch of the Red Cross work which does not figure greatly in the public eye, though it is a haven of rest to the weary spent nurse, broken down because of her untiring and Christ-like work on behalf of our sick and wounded soldiers. A beautiful feature in connection with this home is the unsolicited and numerous invitations received by the matron in charge from people all over the country, for the nurses to go and recuperate at their homes. This provides a delightful glimpse of English home life to those who for a time are far removed from "their ain home and folk."

The writer's sister-in-law has been the hostess for three weeks of two Canadian nurses, and by their visit "they blessed and were blessed."

A Military Necessity.

The King's Canadian Red Cross Convalescent Hospital situated amid the beautiful surroundings and grand old trees of Bushey Park is undergoing alterations, the dining room is being enlarged and additions being made to the main building. The work of cutting down some of those splendid old trees is nearly completed, and to those who know and love this beautiful spot the fact of such a thing being needful causes a keen pang of pain, but alas it is one of those things which "had to be," and it is only consented to because it is one of those novations which this war has called forth and made needful. Appended are some more Canadian Red Cross Hospitals situated in England

Parcels to Prisoners.

I have received three enquiries this week as to whether parcels to prisoners of war can still be sent post free.

The answer is yes, if not weighing more than seven pounds, but the post office accepts no responsibility in regard to their delivery.

The prisoners, however, seem to get them intact and safely, though occasionally some delay arises owing to the prisoners being removed to other camps sometimes. All addresses must be written in ink, the parcel firmly and securely tied and sealed, and the address stated as follows

1 Rank, initials, name
2 Regiment or other unit.
3 Canadian Prisoner of War.
4 Place of internment
5 Germany.

Money can also be forwarded to prisoners of war. Instructions as to how to proceed can be obtained at the post office, as the local Red Cross Society can forward neither parcels or money post free, but if within the weight stated above there is no difficulty if taken to the local post office.

Our Society intends putting into stock the cotton warp which our headquarters approves. Therefore, in a few days those who desire to use it for the legs of socks will be able to obtain it, but the instructions given in this column last week must be followed. One cone of cotton warp, costs 25 cents and will knit about eight legs; but all wool socks are still the best, but where the cost has to be considered, or, in districts where it may be difficult to procure wool, the cotton warp will be appreciated

Lest We Forget.

Most of the house cleaning is now over, so do not forget to come to the work room at the Public Library and help on the Red Cross work, your aid will be appreciated.

The Canadian Red Cross sent France 5,000 cases of surgical dressings and garments to help in the Verdun fight, and it has sent 300 cases of surgical dressings to the Belgian Red Cross.

Our cause and theirs are one, and it is splendid to feel that just as Britain has helped her allies financially, with arms and by her navy, so we women, in a smaller degree, have aided them by our handiwork. Have you helped, if not you are a "slacker," just as surely as the physically fit, unmarried man, who has not got a good and sufficient reason for staying at home is one. Some of our most faithful workers are going away from town for a well-deserved rest. Will you not come and fill their place?

SERVICE.

Never teach false morality. How exquisitely absurd to tell girls that beauty is of no value, dress of no use. Beauty is of value, her whole prospects or happiness in life may often depend upon a new gown or a becoming bonnet, and if she has five grains of sense she will find this out.—Ayd ney Smith.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

LICENSE BOARD CANNOT RELEASE HOTELKEEPERS

Law Will Not Permit Action to be Taken Until September 16.

TORONTO, May 19.—Hotelkeepers who are depending upon the Ontario License Board to give them relief from losses by the time prohibition comes into effect are likely to be disappointed. At the last session of the Legislature a clause was added to the Ontario Temperance Act, providing that any hotel-keeper, with the approval of the Ontario License Board and by giving three months' notice, could terminate his lease, irrespective of the time still unexpired. By some oversight no specific provision was inserted giving the board this power before the date of the act coming into force—September 16. The result is that the Board can take no action until the Ontario temperance act is operative.

The fact that the board apparently has no power to act was only discovered to-day, the question being raised by the receipt of a number of applications from hotelkeepers asking the board for permission to terminate their leases.

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

"There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Creatore And His Band

To those who had not seen Signor Creatore or heard his band, the concert in the Grand Opera House last night proved a revelation, while to the fortunate others who had already thrilled to the magic of the great conductor's art, it made a fresh and even stronger appeal. There is said to be nobody else like Creatore whose unique methods have made him one of the most interesting personalities in the world of music. He has no need of the printed score and throwing reserve to the winds, he guides his wonderful band through the heaviest of programmes without a note to guide him, and with an unprecedented faculty of emphasizing the strong points of a composition. Last night's audience expected something uncommon, and there was no divided opinion as to the realization of their expectations. The audience were held under the sway of Creatore's baton as fully as were the men of his band, and the applause was spontaneous and enthusiastic to such an extent that Creatore almost doubled his original programme in encores. Great as is Signor Creatore, his band is worthy of their conductor. It is a wonderful organization, the value of every player's tone varying not a hair's breadth from that of the player next to him, while every interpretation seemed spontaneous. Strong everywhere, it would be hard to say which was the most enjoyable, the wood wind section or the brasses, but the work of the reeds was perhaps the most effective in last night's concert.

The two biggest things on the programme were the overture to "William Tell" and the grand selection from "Faust." The band reached heights of intensity and brilliance of climax in both numbers which were unique in their power. The storm scene in the Rossini overture was a wonderful representation of the elements of nature let loose while the exquisite solo work, especially by the bassoon, oboe and flute, and the electrifying climax combined to make the rendition of the "William Tell" number a memorable one. In the Gounod selection both conductor and band added to their laurels, while the soloists, especially Signor Rossi, whose trombone work featured in this selection, played with beautiful tone and admirable reserve. Dvorak's ever popular "Humoreske" was an object lesson in phrasing and artistic conception, and Rubinstein's "Melody in F" was brilliantly played. Bizet's "L'Arelesienne," second suite de concert, was magnificently presented. Other fine numbers on the programme were Ganne's striking march "Lorraine," and the first movement of Beethoven's fifth symphony.

Signor Creatore was most generous with his encores, which included several charming waltzes, their accenting a perfect feature, and the "Irresistable March," composed by Mr. Asa Huycke of Peterborough. Mr. Huycke's march was played as an encore to the first number, and was most enthusiastically received. It was a signal honour for the local musician to have his composition played by such a wonderful organization, as well as a striking indication of the merit of his work.

Signora Emilia Bernabo was the soloist and displayed a rich, pure soprano to fullest advantage in Braga's "Angel's Serenade," which was sung with refreshing ease. Signora Bernabo was forced to respond to an enthusiastic encore. The band provided a most charming accompaniment to both songs.

One of the most impressive features of the programme was the manner in which Signor Creatore's band played the National Anthem, both at the opening and close of the concert. Starting in very softly and slowly the musicians gradually worked up to a crashing climax that thrilled the audience.

Altogether the programme was of the kind to make one wish for more—much more of the same kind. Creatore and his band will always be welcome in Peterbrough.

The programme was as follows:

Part First.

March, "Lorraine" ..... Ganne
Overture, "William Tell" ..... Rossini
Humoreske ..... Dvorak
L'Arelesienne, second suite de concert ..... Bizet

Intermission.

Part Second.

First movement in fifth symphony ..... Beethoven
Melody in F ..... Rubinstein
Soprano Solo, "Angel's Serenade" ..... Braga
Signora Emilia Bernabo
Grand Selection, Faust ..... Gounod
(a) Prelude and flower song.
(b) Waltz.
(c) Soldiers' Chorus.
(d) Grand trio and finale.
Solos by Signori Demitri, Rossi and De Luca.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However regrettable our fates may appear, our figures have no say.

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orthine in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orthine taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissues from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size will be sent on receipt of $1.65. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1268, Montreal, Can.

Field Kitchen An Asset On the Farm

"That rig would be a great thing on the farm," said a farmer this morning, as he gazed in more or less wonderment on the 93rd Battalion's field kitchen, which was on display. "You could take the meals out to the men in rush times, and it would be real handy for threshing." So much for this facetious observation. Nearby, two men, one of them evidently a councillor of some township, were discussing what their municipal council should do toward the Battalion Fund. They were talking of borrowing power and the advisability of borrowing. Not far away a wooden imagination was pooh-hooing the likelihood of the 93rd ever getting to the front. This man seemed to think that the war was going to be over by the end of harvest time. However, some one might have remarked that these boys are more likely to run into a bigger task than even a keen imagination can visualize.

New Regulations For The Fund

Five Dollars Per Month for Childless Wives is Agreed Upon—Encourage Women to Work

TORONTO, May 20.—At the final session of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Conference this afternoon it was decided as follows:

"That all childless wives married before enlistment and where they have complied with the requirements of the fund, be entitled to an allowance of $5 per month.

"That no post-enlistment wives be assisted unless the wife is an expectant mother, that while an expectant mother she be treated as a childless wife, married before enlistment, and when the child is born she be treated as a mother married before enlistment.

"That women whose domestic duties do not require their attention should be encouraged to work and that no deduction be made on account of casual earnings.

"That a uniform scale throughout Eastern Canada is impracticable, but the central executive maximum allowance to dependants be not exceeded by any branch and that the central executive be urged to obtain uniformity in the scale of grants by neighbouring committees similarly situated."

Mr. R. M. Anderson of St. Thomas, regretted that any change was being made in rates paid to dependents to the fund. To him it was unthinkable that teh trustees of the fund should now pay childless wives only $5 per month instead of $10 per month.

AMERICAN AUXILIARIES.

Sir Herbert Ames stated that an effort was being made to form American auxiliaries to look after families of Americans serving as soldiers in British and Canadian armies. Sir Herbert acknowledged the receipt of $100,000 for the fund from United States sources.

PAID CLERICAL HELP.

A discussion took place on the question of paid clerical assistance in administering the fund.

"In our largest branches we do not expect this outlay to be more than 1 1-2 per cent. of the total moneys handled and in the smallest branches it should not go higher than four per cent," said Sir Herbert. A number of branches are managing to administer the fund with no outlay for clerical expense.

Mr. C. L. Dunbar, of Guelph strongly advocated a travelling auditor whose business it would be to check expenditures and supervise the branches. This was voted down. But Sir Herbert Ames was granted the privilege of asking supervisors from one district to visit another district at the expense of the fund, and straighten out any difficulties that might arise.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from boils and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Rice, Bradhagen, Ont. "It gives immediate relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

WEATHER WAS PLEASANT SURPRISE

According to a Number of Residents the Wet Weather is Nearly At An End.

To-day's weather proved a pleasant surprise to the farmers who showed their appreciation by remaining at home and taking advantage of the situation. The farmers were few and far between on the market this morning. It is a safe bet that the great majority of farmers in Peterborough county spent the day in advancing spring seeding operations.

The twenty-fourth of May will find few farmers through with their spring work. It will take the most of them until the end of the month to close the chapter. Spring seeding is seldom so late as it is this year. Even with this handicap the prospects for a "bumper crop" as they say in the west, will depend entirely on the weather that is to come. Good crop seasons have been known to follow a late spring.

According to a number of Indians who were in town to-day the wet next few days should see a marked change for the better.

The Outstanding Features of the Recent Session

So far as the constructive legislation of the recent session of Parliament went, it has been a comparatively meagre fare. But the political developments of the session and the by-paths of these developments, apart from actual legislation, have been many and interesting.

Main Legislative Accomplishments.

From the standpoint of legislation actually put through, the main items have been the voting of $250,000,000 for domestic expenditures, including the railway loans to the Grand Trunk Pacific and the C. N. R., the imposition of the business tax as a special temporary means of meeting the requirements of "war" expenditures, the extention of the Parliamentary term by one year, and the preliminary step towards the nationalization of railways, which looms up as the next big problem to be faced by Parliament.

Legislation Not Carried Through.

Some of the Government's contemplated legislation remains either not passed or else, to a certain extent, emasculated. The bill which passed the Commons to refer all railway charters hereafter to the Railway Commission for decision as to location and construction, was killed in the Senate. The temperance legislation had its teeth drawn to a certain extent by the Senate, which struck out essential clauses in regard to the method and place of prosecuting offenders. In regard to the extension of the Parliamentary term, the legislation is not yet through the final stage of the British House. Premier Borden told the Commons before prorogation this afternoon that the bill based on the petition of Parliament had been introduced in the British House only on May 3rd, and, so far, had received only its first reading.

New $5,000,000 Buildings.

The destruction of the Parliament Buildings by fire on February 3, with its toll of seven lives lost, including one member of the House of Commons, was, of course, one of the most sensational incidents of the session. A new $5,000,000 structure will replace the old building, but for the next two sessions Parliament will continue to do business in its present fairly comfortable temporary quarters.

The War Scandal Charges.

One of the outstanding features of the session, which was and will still continue to be foremost in public interest, has been the war scandal charges in connection with the operations of the Shell Committee, with the consequent outcome of the Meredith-Duff Commission and the inquiry now proceeding. This inquiry, together with the inquiry of the Davidson Commission into the charges also affecting the Minister of Militia in regard to the small arms ammunition sale to J. Wesley Allison, will now hold the stage in the capital.

Bilingual Interest Fallen Off.

The bilingual discussion and its developments were, from the standpoint of general political interest, also of large importance. There is nothing at present, however, of a tangible character to keep this discussion alive to any great extent, although the Government followers go home, especially in Ontario, pointing to the political capital they hope to make out of this as an offset to the scandal disclosures.

The Last and Worst Put Through.

The culminating "scandal" of the session was the Quebec & Saguenay Railway deal, involving a new obligation of $10,000,000, equivalent to one-third of the revenues which will be raised from the business tax. Conservative members themselves frankly admit that this was the worst proposal the Government has yet put through, and was "justified" only by the political necessities of the Administration.

North Monaghan Council Meeting

A special meeting of the North Monaghan Township Council will likely be held on Tuesday night, when the question of making a contribution to the 93rd Battalion Fund will be discussed. While nothing definite has been said, it is felt that Monaghan will not be remiss in assuming their share of the assistance to which it is expected every section of of the county will contribute.

LEADING SPEAKERS WILL BE PRESENT

Arrangements For The Prophetic Conference Have Been Completed.

Arrangements have been completed for the Bible Study and Prophetic Conference which will open in St. Paul's church Sunday, May 28th and last for four days. It promises to be one of the most important conferences of the kind ever held in Peterborough. A number of prominent speakers will take part. Leading students of the Bible have said that it is impossible to understand the teachings of their Bibles unless we understand the great Scriptures relating to the Jewish race, including not only those prophecies that have already been fulfilled but those that remain to be fulfilled. Many Christians also, do not understand the character and reign of Satan and his end as clearly explained in the Scriptures. Many are in doubt also as to the teachings of the Scriptures pertaining to the end of the age in which we live and what are to be the characteristics of its close. These and a number of other similar subjects will be dealt with at length during the conference.

The Subjects.

The speakers and the subjects will be as follows:

Rev. John McNicol, B.A., Principal Bible College will speak on "The Plan of the Ages" and "The Mission and Hope of the Church."

Rev. R. V. Bingham, Editor The Evangelical Christian, and Secretary of the Souden Interior Mission, Toronto, will speak on "The Cumulative Evidence of Christ's Return," "The Time of the Gentiles" and "The Second Advent and the Missionary Programme."

Mr. W. F. Coote, a prominent Methodist layman of Hamilton, will give "A Layman's Testimony."

Rev. F. S. Weston, Emanuel Baptist Church, will speak on "The Miracles of Satan" and "The Present Condition of the Jews as Related to Prophecy."

Mr. H. E. Irwin, K.C., of Toronto, on "For We Are Saved by Hope."

Rev. A. B. Winchester, Pastor Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, on "The Kingdom in Mystery, Matt. 13," and "Letters From Heaven About the Church on Earth."

Rev. Canon Howitt, Hamilton on a subject to be announced, and "The Signs of the Times."

Dr. E. R. Hooper, Toronto, on "The Millenium" and "The Anti-Christ."

The order of the programme will be announced later. As the speakers represent all the leading Protestant denominations it is hoped by the session of St. Paul's that the conference will be thoroughly interdenominational in character. An invitation is extended to all interested to attend.

The Empire In Picture and Story

Victoria Day will have, as one of the outstanding features of its celebration, an unique and appropriate representation of the Empire in picture and story by Frank Yeigh of Toronto, who will give, in the armouries, his patriotic travelogue entitled, "Britain's Girdle of the Globe: or, the Empire of the Seven Seas," illustrated with a hundred splendid stereopticon views covering not only the British Isles, but the Dominions beyond the seas and the British possessions. Glimpses of the Empire's army and navy will also be included in this patriotic panorama of King George's far flung realm. This will, as has been said, be a most timely entertainment for the 24th of May, in memory of Queen Victoria, in whose reign the Empire came to its own.

Mr. Yeigh will also lecture in the armouries on Monday night.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys neutralize irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

A Wise Mother's Story

Mothers and Daughters Read Carefully and Profit by It

"I am convinced," writes Mrs. A. B. Hopeford from St. John, "that a majority of young girls who die of consumption do so because their mothers neglected their health at the critical time when carefulness insures vigor and sound health. If a girl's health is neglected from her eleventh to sixteenth year her body will be weak and she becomes a ready victim of typhoid, anaemia and in many cases consumption itself. In her sixteenth year my youngest daughter showed signs of failing strength. Some dyspeptic troubles developed, her heart became weak and palpitation frightened her dreadfully. She was irregular in the important bodily functions and rapid loss in a weight and a ruddy complexion pointed to a rapid decline.

She disliked making her troubles known to our doctor, a feeling I felt I should respect, and so by good fortune I was led to use Ferrozone with most gratifying results. My neighbour next door, Mrs. Woods, had found Ferrozone so good in nervousness that she persuaded me that it would restore Flossie's health, and from the time the second box was commenced her improvement was constant. She is now a big, strong girl, ruddy and plump, able to study hard and to take her share of household duties. I am an earnest advocate of Ferrozone. We all use it now as a tonic as it is certainly woman's best friend."

All dealers sell Ferrozone, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50; procure a supply to-day.

TRANSFORMATION IN IRISH POLITICS IS NOW COMPLETE

Parliament with solemn concurrence and a binding legislative contract for all parties and all time.

The concession is made easier by the well-known conviction, even of all Orangemen, that any arrangement must be temporary, that events will force the absolute unity of Ireland in a compartivly short time.

Another enormous addition to the hopes of such a settlement is the extraordinary unanimity of the London press of all sections in its favour. The Daily Telegraph, Evening Standard and Daily Express and finally, The Times, have written, some openly, some cautiously, in favour of the settlement.

The Cabinet, I believe also is practically unanimous on the subject. Of course the adhesion Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson are sure. I feel certain the settlement ought to come and am hopeful it will

The Backwash.

For all the recent tragedy in Ireland, there is one cause that must not be lost sight of. It was to a certain extent the backwash of the Larkinite movement. That movement found its strength and to a certain extent even its justification in the unsound conditions of life in Dublin—especially among the working classes. Wages are low and housing conditions are shocking. As Henry George said in a celebrated passage in "Progress and Poverty," it is from the slums of cities that the future Huns and Vandals who will attack society will arise. Larkin might have done much to alleviate these conditions; but there were two obstacles; first that low wages were but one factor in the problem; the workmen were often poorly paid because their employers were poor. It was a condition not of individual or class, but of general poverty, and the remedy must of course be sought in the general levelling up of conditions in Ireland. That levelling up can come, of course, but gradually—considering the centuries of ignorant and stupid government through which Ireland has had to pass, and it is coming with the transfer of the land from the landlords. Everywhere in the rural parts and rural towns of Ireland that beneficent revolution has already produced the most marked results. The rags, the straw cabins with the dunghills before the doors, the animals within the doors, have passed as completely away from a great part of Ireland as the shacks, with which the early settlers of the Western States started, have given way to the house and to the big city. The shopkeepers are all doing well, and every year some new department to their premises, including a furniture department from which the emancipated peasants are able to substitute a well furnished house for their old empty and squalid cabins. The tide has begun to reach Dublin; of course it hasn't got there completely, but it will get there.

A Further Hope.

A further hope for the improvement of these conditions is, of course, the prospect of an early opening of the Irish Parliament, which will make Dublin once more a great centre. To it will come people from all parts of Ireland, with money in their pockets, and ready to spend it in the Dublin shops. And of course there will come at the same time in the newborn nation that energy, sympathy and feverish spirit of reform which has come to every liberated nation on the morning of its liberation. Indeed bad as the housing conditions of Dublin are, they are far better than they used to be. The Dublin corporation has carried out vast improvements; it is engaged in carrying out more. The British exchequer has on the whole helped largely in these efforts.

This was the condition of things that existed when Larkin arose and if he had in addition to his energy and rough eloquence and power over men, some judgment, some breadth of spirit, some toleration, he might have done a great work. But nobody now knows the faults which made all these things impossible. During his regime there came to be a reign of terror in Dublin; individuals were threatened, they were even denounced by name in a Larkinite paper; and impossible demands were made without the prudence, the precautions, the business-like consideration of all the fads which distinguish most of the operations of the great trades unions of Great Britain. In the end there came the revolt, the life and death struggle between Larkin, representing what had come to be the anarchistic spirit of his followers, and William Murphy, the great tramway owners, as representing the capitalists. Some of the Larkinites, left without employment, and perhaps restored to reason by the defeat and the flight of their leader, went into the army, and are fighting in ed sullen and brooding; and it was the trenches to-day. Others remain-in such material that the German campaign was able to get its desperate recruits.

Conditions Remain.

But the bad conditions in Dublin remain. This fact must not be lost sight of, and ought to be remembered even in this traige hour when the desperate attempt to destroy Home Rule and all the hopes of Ireland has been defeated. It is an additional reason for hurrying on if possible the opening of the Irish Parliament, and the beginning of that area of reconstruction which Ireland and especially Dublin so badly needs. And here it is well to mention one of the extraordinary ironies and contradictions of the situation. The rising was intended to destroy Home Rule; I am not sure that it has not had the opposite effect. The tone of the British press and of British politicians has been admirable throughout. Even strong Tory organs like the Daily Mail and the Daily Express have declared that they understand the situation, and understand that the Irish people and the Irish Nationalist movement must not be confounded with the insane anarchists.

And the rising has indicated to every sane man, every former enemy even of Home Rule, that there is an Irish problem, and that it must be solved not only in the interests of Ireland, but those of the Empire.

It has come home again even to the dullest kind that the possibility of governing Ireland and keeping order and maintaining law in the country by a British executive is gone. It is seen now, as the Irish Nationalists have known all along, that the only forces which can stand between Southern Ireland and anarchy are Mr. Redmond and the Irish National Party. A Nationalist executive in Ireland of course would have prevented all this tragedy, would never have allowed it to come to a head. This fact has got home to the minds of all moderate and broad-minded men. It may result in some plan for settling the Irish question even before the war is over. Out of all the welter of evil there may come some good.

"THE PRINCESS PAT" BRIMFUL OF MANY TUNEFUL MELODIES

Latest Comic Opera Triumph Comes to the Grand Opera House on Thursday, May 25

"The Princess Pat," Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert's latest comic opera triumph, will unquestionably receive a warm welcome when it comes to the Grand Opera House, Thursday, May 25.

Mr. Herbert's score contains some twenty numbers, among which the most popular possibly are: "Allies," "Make Him Guess," "I'd Like to be a Quitter, but I Find It Hard to Quit," "Love Is Best of All," "For Better or for Worse," "When a Girl's About to Marry," "Neapolitan Love Song," "I Wish I Was an Island in an Ocean of Girls," "Flirting," "All For You," "In a Little World for Two," "The Shoes of Husband Number One as Worn by Number Two," and "Two Laughing Irish Eyes." Among the principals specially engaged for the tour of the opera are Charlotte Le Grandes, Oscar Figman, Effie Toye, Philip H. Ryley, Ben Hendricks, Earl Benham, Nelson Ryley, Herbert Salinger, Loretta Marks and Francis Bryan.

LIBRARY NOTES

(By F. M. Dela Fosse)

The summer days will soon be here and their advent will be synchronous with the annual flittings of humanity to the four corners of the Province and indeed ,in many cases to places far outside its borders. It is well therefore to advertise the fact that the Library can offer certain advantages which will go a long way to accentuate the enjoyment of holidays for those who are in any way bookishly inclined.

In the first place in the matter of books. It has always been the custom to allow extra time to borrowers of to allow extra time to birrowers of books and to let them have an extra volume or two to help them to beguile the summer hours. Even after five years experience of Library methods many people have not yet managed to get seized of this fact. During the months of July and August the same rule as has obtained in past years will be observed.

Another salient feature, and one in which it is hoped that most patrons of the library will be interested is the newly published catalogue. The Library Committee have had this matter in hand for a considerable space of time and it is now on sale at the Library at a price which will be well within the means of everyone to purchase. The main idea of the coommittee has been to place before the public in a convenient form and readable type a list of the best books in every department and it is violating no confidence to state that every member entered into the work with the greatest enthusiasm, feeling that something additional to the card catalogue was necessary in order to give readers an opportunity of best enjoying library privileges.

WORD OF WARNING.

It is not often that occasion arises to issue a word of warning to people who misuse the privileges of the Library. The Library has suffered less probably from the depredations and work of vandals than most institutions of a similar character, but something needs to be said at the present time. There has been a considerable amount of mutilation of magazines and newspapers in the Men's Reading Room. That this is the work of one malefactor is abundantly clear as the articles and pictures cut out are in almost every case connected with military life in England. The offender is not known but if he is ever discovered he may rest assured that a warm reception awaits him at the hands of the police. The mind can hardly conceive of a more miserable, selfish and contemptible action than that of the mutilation of reading matter in a library.

It a strange even extraordinary that a person, who in the daily conduct of life would scorn to do an act that goes by the ugly name of thieving will sometimes be found to progress quite a different code of ethics in regard to dealing with the property of the public.

A RECORD IN BUILDING

Peterboro' Contractors Build New Freight Warehouse at the Belleville Dock in Record Time

The new freight warehouse, which now surmounts Belleville's handsome concrete dock, is nearing completion although construction was begun less than two weeks ago.

The contractors, Messrs. Conroy & Hickey of Peterborough are to be congratulated not only upon this building record for Belleville, but upon the thorough and conscientious manner in which they are carrying out the work. The materials used are strictly high-grade throughout. There has been no attempt made to deceive the inspector either in material or workmanship.

The building is much larger than most people had expected. It is 254 feet in length and 46 meet in breadth. There are five main doors to permit of the convenient unloading of freight from railway car or boat.

The larger part of the building is of course devoted to freight storage purposes but at the east end a commodious office and waiting room for passengers is placed. The harbourmaster's office will also be located here and there will be a baggage room, lavatories, etc.

When completed the warehouse will be very satisfactory in appearance and provide ample accommodation for all the traffic that will centre at this part for some time to come.—Daily Ontario.

Cry For Labour Heard In House of Refuge

Score of Inmates Leave to Join Hamilton's Industrial Army.

HAMILTON, May 20.—It has been many a year since Hamilton has faced such a shortage of labour as exists at present. Contractors explain that it is almost impossible to get help and as a last resort they are employing inmates of the House of Refuge.

Peter Rae, superintendent of the institution, announced yesterday morning that twenty inmates had gone to work. One of these has been an inmate seven years. Several of the women have also obtained outside employment.

THIN-BLOODED PEOPLE

Often Become Seriously Ill Before They Realize It

Some people have a tendency to become thin-blooded just as others have an inherited tendency to rheumatism or nervous disorders. The condition in which the blood becomes so thin that the whole body suffers comes on so gradually that anyone with a natural disposition in that direction should watch the symptoms carefully. Bloodlessness can be corrected more easily in the earlier stages than later. It begins with a tired feeling that rest does not overcome, the complexion becomes pale, slight exertion produces breathlessness and headaches and backaches frequently follow. In the treatment of troubles due to thin blood no other medicine has had such a great success as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They go right to the root of the trouble, make rich, red blood, thus restoring the weakened system to health and strength. Mr. R. F. Ashford, Peterborough, Ont., says: "Four years ago my condition became so serious that it seemed to me I possessed every pain and ache and every morbid feeling possible. For months I had had been overworked, and bereavement added the last straw necessary to break down my constitution. I had a severe ever-present headache and pains in the back of the eyes, and at the same time I was seldom free from severe neuralgic pains. I was rarely hungry, and when I was it seemed to create a morbidness which made my other ills harder to bear. Of course I consulted a doctor, and he told me a rest and change of air, just the thing I was unable in the circumstances to take. I had a particularly bad spell on the day my daughter returned from college, and she insisted that I should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was decidedly skeptical, but she got some and to please here I took them. The result—After the first box I was compelled to admit that I really did feel better. After the second box I ungrudgingly admitted that they were doing me good, and after the sixth box I felt free from every ache and pain and in gratitude I began to praise the pills to others. I am feeling as fit as I did twenty years ago and I owe it to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Seeding Done In Alberta

Seeding Was All Done in Southern Alberta Two Weeks Ago.

"The seeding was all done in Southern Alberta when I left there two weeks ago," said Hon. C. W. Ross, Attorney-General for the Province of Manitoba, while in Toronto yesterday. "The outlook was exceedingly bright when I left," continued Mr. Ross.

"What about Northern Alberta?" he was asked.

"Well, Northern Alberta was a little backward, and seeding was not all finished when I left."

The Hon. Mr. Rose is on his way home to Edmonton, having been in Ottawa on business with the Dominion Government relative to the North-West Mounted Police.

EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY

Continuation of the Shocks Which Began a Year Ago.

ROME, May 19.—The vast region in Central Italy, extending from Aquilla, through the Abruzzi Provinces, to Perugia, Pesaro, Forli, and to Ferrara on the north, and including the Republic of San Marino, has been shaken by an earthquake, the shocks being repeated many times Tuesday night and throughout yesterday. So far as is at present known there were no casualties.

The present disturbance is considered part of the seismic movement, of which the greatest development was the earthquake of January, 1915 when thousands of persons were killed in Avezzano, which lies directly south of Aquilla. In that region the shocks have continued ever since. They are estimated to have numbered about six hundred, but most of them have been slight.

Farmer's Straw Hat In Court Drew Reprimand From Judge

Indecorum and Indifference To Court, Around Judge Huycke This Morning. Interruption Caused By Visitors Walking About.

"I don't want to see either of you back again," exclaimed Judge Huycke this morning to two farmers who were their hats in the court room, as if they were out in the hay field. Mr. Kerr was pleading in the Garnsey case and there had been an interruption to discuss the hour of proceeding with another case. When the arrangements were announced some of the farmers proceeded to leave the court room. One man stood up and donned a straw hat. Mr. Wood called out "Hats" but he was oblivious to the reminder. Finally this man's attention was arrested and he was told to remove the straw, which he did. Just then a man walking beside him put on his fedora. Apparently his mind had been far afield. The second hat, and the shuffling of the visitors as they were taking their leave aroused the Court. Judge Huycke called out to the men that they had to be twice told of their indecorous behaviour, and as a parting shot said he didn't want to see either of them in court again. But as they appeared to be interested in the following case they will likely return. His Honour sent Mr. Wood to summon the sheriff or a policeman to maintain order while the Garnsey argument tediously wounded up its conclusion. The tedium if of course, no reflection upon the lawyers engaged.

It happens that this incident bears upon Judge Huycke's recommendation to the County Council that a uniformed policeman should be provided for attendance at the County Court. This morning's occurrence in which men from the county drew down a reprimand from the Court apparently aggravated the condition to which His Honour has on numerous occasions directed the attention of the County Council.

JAM SENT FROM PETERBORO

Novel Way Of Finding Out Whether or The Consignment Reached Its Destination.

To those who are inclined to doubt whether or not supplies prepared and forwarded to the front by various patriotic organizations, ever reach their destination, the appended letter is commended for perusal. It might be explained that when a large consignment of jam was sent from Peterborough some months ago one of the jars contained, in addition to the jam, a small bottle in which was enclosed the name and address of the sender, with the request that the sender be notified following the receipt of the jam at the prescribed destination. One effect of this arrangement was to substantiate the statement that the jam was actually reaching the hospitals.

The Letter.

The letter which was received by Mrs. J. Gordon Mann, Peterborough, R. R. No. 4, contains the following:

Moore's Barracks, Hospital,
Shorncliffe, Camp, Eng.,
May 5, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Mann,—Just a few lines to express our gratitude on finding your address in that beautiful jam; it was "bully" believe me, but we never expected to have the pleasure of thanking the sender. We are sure that the woman folk of Canada are doing their share in this war, also the nurses that are sent out; these noble characters; how much they have done for us; it is great. I am here with neuralgia and tonsilitis and my friend who has been orderly to manglitis cases is here as a 'shit post,' but turned out to be O.K. I am the son of Geo. Beakes, Town Engineer, Beaconsfield, P.Q., and Walter Venner, druggist of the City of Montreal, is my chum. Hoping to hear from you in the near future, I remain,

Yours truly,
PTE. J. H. BEAKES,

D. E. Whetung Chief of Chemong Reserve For Another Year

ers for Chemong Reserve took place and resulted as follows: D. E. Whetung, chief; A. McCue, secretary, were elected without any opposition and their duties will commence for another term. Miss Daisy Whetung organist, George Taylor, ranger, were also elected by acclamation. Path masters T. Quinguish and Geo. Taylor, who have done much for a number of years in improving the roads on the reserve, will remain in their posts. The candidates for caretaker were as follows: L. D. Taylor, Jr., Thos. Quinguish, J. McCue and David Taylor. The result was in favour of L. D. Taylor, whose term will begin on July 1st.

The cash box, which has been in the hands of George Johnson for a number of years, will be handed over to George H. Taylor.

The Chemong recruits were all home on the day of the election and had a pleasant time with their friends at home. The boys are looking fine and improved.

A number of pies were sold on the night of the election to raise funds for the choir. Through the ingenuity of Pte. Sam Taylor, the auctioneer, each pie averaged about $1.85, aggregating about $18.60, which sum was presented to L. D. Taylor, Sr., in recognition of his services as choir leader for 42 years.

Amphibious Pig Kept Crew Busy

Capt. Harris of the 'Geneva' had a merry time at Campbelltown wharf on Thursday with an amphibious pig one of a herd he was loading to bring to Matthews'. It leaped from the snow into the river, swam across to the Monaghan side and started off across country. Finally it was turned back to the water. It returned to the Ontonabee side and pushed up into the woods, giving the 'Geneva' crew a busy half hour chasing it back toward the wharf and to captivity.

MUST RETURN "WAR BABY" TO CANADIAN GIRL

Mrs. Dollie Ledgerwood Matters Must Return to Margaret Ryan, the Baby Which Girl Contends Was Stolen From Her While a Patient in an Ottawa Hospital.

A CONSPIRACY ALLEGED

CHICAGO, May 20.—Federal Judge Landis to-day issued a writ of Habeas Corpus, directing Mrs. Dollie Ledgerwood Matters, defendant in the Matters baby case, to return to Margaret Ryan, a Canadian backwoods girl, the baby which the girl contends was stolen from her at the Misericordia Hospital, Ottawa.

The "spurious heir", in the case of Mrs. Dollie Ledgerwood Matters was a real "war baby," according to testimony given yesterday in the trial of Mrs. Matters on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the probating of the estate of her late husband, Fred Matters, Illinois banker and moving picture theatre owner. She is accused of attempting to foist upon the court a child not her own, as one of the heirs to the Matters fortune.

The testimony was given by a Canadian girl, Jessie Bryan, from Ottawa, who occupied the stand during the great part of yesterday's session of the trial. She claims the baby is her own, its father being a soldier, and that it was taken from her at birth and given to Mrs. Matters by some officials of the Misericordia Hospital in Ottawa.

Not a juror took his eyes from the frank, round face of the girl as she told her story. It was not until she was asked: "Do you want your baby now?" that she broke down and cried unrestrainedly. The Judge would not permit her to answer the question.

It was to this hospital that Mrs. Matters, according to testimony, came seeking an infant that she might pass off on the Probate Court as the posthumous child of her late husband, of whose estate she desired a larger share.

"The Millionaire Lady."

"We called her the millionaire lady," said the witness. "She had a private room."

The infant, a girl, was born July 24, 1915. It was a healthy and promising youngster, but the unwed mother was told that it was born dead. She was told her baby was a boy. The girl continued her story:

"I was taken into a private room. There was another woman there — married — and she asked me a lot of questions. I said I didn't want to stay there; I wanted to go back to the poor ward, but the nurse said no. They brought me chicken on silver trays and nice things I never had eaten before in my life."

"What happened August 3 ?"

"There were several babies to be christened. One was brought into me, and it was a most beautiful baby, dressed in beautiful clothes, and I asked whose it was. The nurse said: 'It's the millionaire lady's.'"

Jessie paused for a moment. Her features moved convulsively.

"Then I began to cry," she added.

Four months passed before Jessie learned that the baby she had admired so much was alleged to be her own.

"A chum," went on the witness, "read of the Matters case. She told me about it, and I ran out of the house straight to the hospital. All the old nuns were gone. I begged for the truth, but no one could tell me."

A POETIC TRIBUTE TO SIGNOR CREATORE

Verses That Will Be Appreciated By Last Night's Audience.

Last night's audience will enjoy the following verses on Creatore, by James Montague, a United States admirer of the great conductor:

Creatore! Creatore! there's a fury in your form
That can lash the tamest music to a shrill and shrieking storm;
To every order telegraphed from that hypnotic eye
Reverberating kettledrums respectfully reply,
While swaying like a wind-swept reed your body cleaves the air;
Inciting boom, and clash, and crash, and bray, and blow, and blare.

You frown upon the oboe and it grievously makes moan,
You draw from the euphonium a grumbling undertone;
You throw a double duck 6t, just as if you liked to work,
To get results from yonder where the queer tympani lurk;
Meanwhile the evolutions that you set yourself to do
Resemble macaroni while the same is in the stew.

Old Patsy Gilmore, bless him, was a leader who could show
Contortionists and gymnasts things they really ought to know.
While our own John Phillip Sousa, with his short but gifted arms,
And his limber neck, possesses many captivating charms;
But as spectacles, we own it, neither one of them would do
For an instant in competing with a whalebone man like you.

Blessings on you, Creatore; if we all could work like that
We would not get results that seem trifling, inane and flat.
Could we but hurl ourselves at what is given us to do
And keep that whirlwind lick up till we get completely through,
We'd make a noise perhaps ourselves to echo through the land
And get as much good of life as you do from that band.

A Good Buy For the City

The Hilliard Property Has Proved a Splendid Investment

Many of our citizens who were at the time concerned about the wisdom of the purchase of the Hilliard property by the city some years ago will be interested in learning that the transaction has proved to be one of the best paying investments the city ever made.

In a recent interview with a member of the City Trust Commissioners it was learned that the property has already paid for itself in the road metal, gravel, and sand which it has yielded for streets and other purposes. There is yet left as a further acres of land, which has become more valuable every year since its purchase.

The property has also furnished excellent sites, practically free, for three of our public institutions, viz., The House of Refuge, The Children's Shelter, and the Isolation Hospital. And there still remains as a further asset to the city the Water Street frontage, half a mile in length, adjoining the river, within easy reach of water, drainage, and railways, and which will yet prove to become passes. The Town Trust is also in eligible sites. The City Trust is also in receipt of about $800 for rentals from certain portions of the property.

This property was purchased by the city for $10,000 about twelve years ago, as the result of a vote of the freeholders, and at a time when our City Fathers were more cautious than they are now. The principal credit for this investment belongs to Ex-Mayor R. Rush. He it was who fathered the investment, and was largely instrumental in having it carried through, and that too in the face of considerable opposition.

Mr. Rush, who was then a member of the City Council, and afterwards Mayor of the city, had personally secured an option on the property from Mr. Hilliard for $10,000. He had been strongly impressed with the advantages that would accrue to the city from this property, looking at it from the viewpoint of one who had some knowledge of the needs of the city at the time.

Mr. Hilliard subsequently wrote to Mr. Rush, hoping the town would not accept his offer; but Mr. Rush's advocacy of the scheme fortunately prevailed.

Throughout the whole negotiations Mr. Rush acted in a straightforward manner, and without any selfish regard for his own interests. He had been approached by one citizen with an offer of $2,000 for his option on the property, which he promptly declined — so anxious was he that the city should secure the benefits he felt sure was in the deal. At another time a property owner offered to put up $3,000 if Mr. Rush would put up $4,000 for the purpose of securing the property as an investment for themselves, but this also Mr. Rush refused to do.

Garnsey Argument Not Yet Concluded

The Garnsey case is not yet completed, at least the argument was not all in this afternoon. Mr. O. A. Langley was heard yesterday morning and part of the afternoon for the plaintiffs, and Mr. O'Connell consumed the rest of the day presenting his plea for the defendant, S. T. Wedlock. Mr. Kerr and Mr. Hall, for W. J. Hancock and Mr. Beattie and the other defendants, was heard to-day and Mr. Langley was to make his reply. This morning the court was progressing as if none of the participants had left their places for the night intermission. It seemed that the dark had enveloped them and lifted again for the resumption of the case.

Trades and Labour Notes

The delegates to Trades and Labor Council could easily have been present in greater number this week, and long after the hour scheduled was the President encouraged to call the meeting to order. Maybe the delegates thought that owing to the advanced date the stone would be taking a rest and as the evening was exceedingly chilly the outlook was not bright from the point of view of comfort, but the box stove was a busy one, it only lack ed its usual company.

MACHINISTS WELCOMED

After some considerable lapse of time the machinists union have again their representatives on the council. It was explained that this particular local had been traveling a rough road and was now responding to the dogged determination of a few who had held the fort against all odds. Like Mark Tapley, who saw no good in being cheerful when everybody else had cause to be in that happy condition, but who brightened up as the clouds gathered, the few good machinists held on whilst bad times and a scattered membership, to great drawbacks on trade unionism, was rampant. At the present moment these faithful ones see some result of their labor for a 100 per cent. local is being aimed at and meeting with considerable success. Organiser Harper is visiting the city off and on and the campaign is meeting with every encouragement

I. B. E. W. ACTIVE

A Bastien, of Montreal, Organiser for the I. B. E. W. is also a visitor to the city in the interests of the above mentioned local. On the invitation of the President Bro. Bastien addressed the meeting, (having previously dismissed an assembly of his brother craftsmen in the large hall) and said that he was glad to be with the Peterborough council, having heard they were a bunch of live wires After outlining his work with the local boys he concluded by referring to some advice given by Allan Studholme to a group of organisers which was to the effect that a lot could be accomplished with closed lips sometimes., then Mr. Bastien took his seat amid applause.

DELEGATE MYLAND ON THE JOB

Delegate Myland, 5th Vice President of the Labor Educational Association will represent Peterborough's T and L Council at the L. E. A. convention to be held in Berlin, Ont., on the 24th inst. Bro. Myland is anxious to make the most of his time and would like any local having a proposition of any kind to let him have same so as it can be submitted to this progressive association and acted upon as may be deemed wise. The publication of these notes will give a little time to those locals unrepresented last Wednesday evening.

MARSDEN G. SCOTT'S VISIT

President Hammacott made mention of the probable visit to the city of Marsden G. Scott, president of the International Typographical Union. The Ontario conference of Typographical unions was holding its convention here June 9th and 10th and only urgent business at headquarters would keep Mr. Scott away. Arrangements were being made for a moonlight. to which limited number of tickets would be issued preferably to card holders.

THE BARBER'S FIGHT.

The committee nominated to call on the proprietor of the Little Windsor regarding the occupation of his annex by a outpost barber reported no success. Mr. Johnston upheld Mr. Killen and said that the Barber's Local did not always show good judgment in the administration of its affairs. The number of delegates present did not warrant further action, so all be on hand at next meeting, June 7th.

NIAGARA CAMP, May 20.—Civilians at or near the camp were mystified by the constant stream of what looked like stretcher-bearers carrying stretchers open across the common. No beer or spirituous liquors of any kind are to be permitted in any officers' mess, canteens or other regimental institutions. It is also to be distinctly understood that no officers, N.C.O.'s or men are permitted to enter the United States of America in uniform under any circumstances whatever.

What does a bevel gear cost? The Ford owner saves $12 that the other fellow has to pay for one

$ 4.00—Cost of Ford bevel gear.
$12.00—This stays in the Ford owner's pocket book.

Other Ford spare parts are just as low priced in proportion—the 26 most called for parts altogether cost only $8.04.

And less than a dollar a year as a total expense for spare parts is not at all an uncommon experience of Ford owners.

Team Play Is What Has Put Cleveland On the Top

Indians Are Attracting Record Crowds Both at Home and on Road---Pitchers Are Good.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Lee Fohl declares, but not boastfully, that his Indian crew is on top of the American league heap "because it has been playing championship baseball."

"Team work is the real secret of our success so far," asserts the manager of the Cleveland squad. "The boys are all playing together. Individual starring is an unknown quantity with us now. And, best of all the utmost harmony prevails. When you get such a combination you usually find a team that is up near the top.

PITCHERS ARE GOOD.

Our pitchers are going good. Some folks think they will crack later on. It wouldn't surprise me if they pitched even better baseball when the warmer weather comes. Two or three of my slabmen are 'hot day' pitchers. Yet they have been able to win games in zero weather, and hold the opposition to a small number of hits and runs.

"Yes, we have been getting some of the 'breaks'. But isn't that part of baseball? Furthermore, we have not had more than our share. To some folks it seems that a few of our victories have been lucky. But those who have analyzed our record find that most of the so-called luck we have had has been nothing else but the seizing of an opportunity when it offered and then riding through on it to victory.

CROWDS HAVE BEEN LARGE.
